New Year, new arrival

Brandy Danielle Stoops came into this world at 8:06 a.m. Friday, Jan. 2, making her the first baby to be born at Charlevoix Area Hospital in the New Year.

Brandy's mother, Monica Stoops, 19, of Charlevoix was admitted to the hospital Friday morning. She delivered Brandy by Caesarean section, performed by Dr. James Jeakle. Brandy weighed eight pounds, six ounces at birth.

Brandy's father, Dan, 21, and many relatives spent the weekend visiting the new arrival.

Visitors included Brandy's grandparents, Aaron and Kim Brock of Charlevoix; great grandparents Carl and Beth LaBonte; and cousins Scott Starkey and Maranda VandenBosch.

The Stoops have an older girl, Kaylee, who will be three years old in February. Kaylee was born at Munson Hospital in Traverse City, before that hospital had birthing rooms similar to those at the Charlevoix Area Hospital.

"This is really nice," Monica said. "It's a nice, small hospital. The nurses are really great."

The Charlevoix Area Hospital has offered the single-room maternity center since 1993, where a mother may stay in the same room through labor, delivery and recovery. The rooms provide an intimate, private family experience through each phase of the birthing process.

As the first baby born at the Charlevoix Area Hospital in 1998, Brandy will win a bundle of presents in the Courier's First Baby Contest. The booty of baby goodies includes a $50 savings bond from both Citizens Bank and Charlevoix State Bank, a 12 month subscription to the Charlevoix Courier, a calendar from Barh's Hallmark, a one-month membership at Harbor Health Fitness Center (for mom), two large boxes of Pampers from Glen's Markets and a Noah's Ark bath towel from Michelle's of Charlevoix.

County sees big profit in year end budget

By Jamie MacMillan

In 1997, Charlevoix County pulled in a profit of $693,844.13, according to a final version of the county's 1997 budget approved last week by the Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners.

The county had spent the year working with a $6.35 million budget, but by the end of the year, spent less than expected while bringing in more than expected.

The county's 1997 expenditures totaled $5,992,158 while revenues for the year equaled $6,686,002. All told, the year increased the county's general fund balance to $3.5 million.

Only four of the county's numerous departments — soil and water conservation, jail, building inspection, and insurance and bonds, went beyond their expected budgets. Combined, they only outspent the budget by $15,150. With over $350,000 of unexpended money throughout the entire budget, the board easily approved transferring funds to cover the overspending.

In revenues, over half of the $6.68 million was brought in through property tax. In 1997, the property tax collected was $3,775,537 which is $170,000 more than in 1996.

Building permit fees collected $122,924, down 15 percent from 1996 totals. The county licensed more dogs last year, bringing in $9,581 a large increase from the $5,991 collected in 1996.

The district court collected over $307,000, a slight increase from 1996 while at the jail, the county collected almost $40,000 in prisoner's room and board fees.

Happy with the year's frugal spending, the board gave their employees a paid holiday and a four day weekend by closing down shop on Friday, Jan. 2, 1998.

With an initial profit of nearly $700,000, the board agreed to spend $150,000 on the road commission to allow for new equipment and another $150,000 to the humane society to give them a jump start on relocating to a new facility in Boyne City.

The board next meets at 9:30 a.m. Wednesday, Jan. 7 in a special meeting to reorganize the board's officers and committees. Johnson has been the board's chairman for the last two years, but has stated that he doesn't want to continue in that role for a third year. Carl Price served as vice-chairman in 1997.

New jail, new animal shelter in county's plans for 1998

By Jamie MacMillan

Expansion, relocation and reorganization are chores at the top of Charlevoix County's "to-do list" as 1998 begins.

County officials will be meeting this month with architects from the downtown firm of Harrison and Landmark to finalize plans for jail expansion at the county sheriff's department on Grant Street.

A combination of safety issues and overcrowding have spurred the move to expand.

In its present state, the jail's booking area is in the front entrance of the building. Jail administrator Babette Meggison said that while no one has ever been assaulted as a result of the proximity, the potential is there and they would like to minimize the chance.

The jail now has 25 hlock cells, an adult and juvenile holding cell and a drunk tank. Typically, 20-35 prisoners call the jail home on a nightly basis, but when state jail inspectors toured the facility recently they noted that the 31 prisoners being held at that time was overcrowded.

"Obviously we're trying to remedy that," said Phil Johnson, county board chairman. Other than the slight overcrowding, inspectors gave the jail a thumbs-up.

Ideally, the county would like to add 30 more cells, a 20-bed work release dorm, two additional holding/observation cells, a more secure hooking area, and a larger kitchen, library, and visitation room.

The county board has budgeted $2.1 million for the project and expects some form of grant money to help fund the project. Ground breaking will be sometime this spring.

While an expanded jail will not gobble up the adjacent baseball diamond, it will take over the land that the Charlevoix County Humane Society now occupies.

"With the jail expansion, we have got to get rid of that building in a hurry," Johnson said. "We're in a hurry to break ground, so we've got to have a new spot for it."

That new spot will be in Boyne City on the corner of Brockway and Beardsely roads on county land behind the road commission building.

Trish Wright, human society liaison to the county board, said they hope to break ground on a new building this spring and jokes that hopefully their annual Christmas open house in 1998 will be in a new facility.

Like the jail, an overcrowding problem necessitates the move.

"As the population grows, so does the pet population — it actually exceeds people growth," Wright said. "We need an area more conducive to taking care of cats and dogs."

Presently, the humane society is in a building with just over 1,000 square feet and Wright guessed that a new facility would at least be triple that in size. Now, they have 10 dog runs, but a new building will have at least 20 runs. A full-fledged

"cattery" for the ever-increasing number of cats as well as classrooms to educate people on proper pet-care techniques will come with a new building.

Wright noted that they lack space to allow animals to play, and they don't get much exercise unless volunteers come in to give them

What people are saying

"With your decision, you have usurped 25 percent of what we're supposed to be doing."

— Charlevoix County resident and member of the solid waste committee Nancy Ferguson on the county board's decision to send Cedar Ridge's landfill expansion request straight to county planners without any scrutiny from the committee charged with planning the county's future solid waste needs.

"We are very interested in dealing with the county, we haven't removed any offer from the table."

— Waste Management Regional Representative Jeff Pool saying that his company is still willing to negotiate long term plans to extend the Cedar Ridge landfill, offering some type of profit share for the county.

"This is not an expansion. It's a correction of an error and puts us back to where we belong."

— Charlevoix mayor Josh Barnes on the Charlevoix Airport's runway project which increases the runway length from 4300 feet to 4500. The runway was originally that long before renovations earlier this decade shortened it.

"We do want to see it up real quick. The sticky wicket is the trash."

— Barnes, on the rebuilding of Whimney's Oyster Bar. Most of Whimney's redeveloping plans were approved except for the provision for a new trash compactor on the city's parking lot.

Hip-checking allowed in weight loss battle

By Laurie Lounsbury

Charlevoix County employees are determined to be a bunch of losers in 1998.

It doesn't sound like much of a new year's resolution, but when weight loss is the goal, it all makes sense.

The county employees are challenging the city employees in the second annual weight loss contest, after losing the match to the city last year.

"We lost by a 'slim' margin last year," said this year's organizer, county employee Tom Meggison.

son. "They did the calculating last year and I protested it, but we let them have it (the prize money) since it went to a good cause."

Each employee who enters the contest pays a $10 entry fee. The winning team collects the prize money. Last year, the city donated their winnings to the Charlevoix County Humane Society.

The contest will run for three months, with the final weigh-in to be held April 6.

"It will be early in the morning on April 6, so we can eat for the rest of the day," Meggison joked.

As the writer of the rules this year, Meggison warned that, "No liposuction or amputation of any body parts, such as arms, legs or fingers, will be allowed to achieve weight loss."

Employees weighed in Monday at the Harbor Health Fitness Center, where manager Candy Smith recorded their weights and filed the numbers in a safe place.

"Some employees were terrified to enter the contest, because they didn't want anyone to know what they weighed," Meggison said. "Candy was very secretive about it, hiding the weight chart under the counter."

4-H hosts leader workshops

If you have ever considered becoming a 4-H Leader, "4-H Leadership" may be the event that prompts that decision to get involved. This event offers many of the 4-H projects that 4-H has to offer with the goal of building life skills for area youth. On Feb. 14, 4-H Leaders and prospective 4-H Leaders will gather at the Gaylord Intermediate School for a day long training session that will start with a keynote address by 4-H Kettunen Center Director, John Grix.

Participants will have the opportunity to sign up for sessions of their choice. The sessions include:

Adventure Programming, Animal Science Education, Teen Leadership, Environmental Education, 5-8 Year Old Programming, Horse, Entomology, Science Technology, Visual Arts, State Awards, 4-H Club Development, Communications, Baby Sitting Education, Performing Arts, Personal Appearance and Shooting Sports.

"This has been one of those events that give our 4-H Leaders many new ideas and keep those creative ideas flowing into our local 4-H clubs," said John Wurm, Charlevoix County 4-H youth agent. "We are pleased to be bringing in so many resource people from all over the state."

Participants can sign up for two sessions and will also have the opportunity to meet with other 4-H Leaders from all over northern Michigan. The cost of the event is $8 with lunch included.

Those interested in attending or getting involved in any 4-H program, are encouraged to contact their local MSU Extension office at 582-6232.

OPINIONS

EDITH

By Edith Gilbert

"There's a time and place for everything," my mother used to say. And that certainly applies to the year-end controversial Christmas letters. People long ago have spoken out against the 'brag sheet,' listing job promotions, Harvard scholarships, cruises on private yachts and the like, but I prefer that positive approach to the opposite and negative side of the coin.

I shudder when I receive a letter listing a series of doctor's visits with detailed, obscure medical reports, fine points of funeral arrangements of people I don't know, lost conflicts with insurance companies, legal entanglements of my friend's in-laws, and unavoidable natural disasters. These holidays, I was always led to believe, are meant to be celebrated, not the time to 'let it all hang out.'

Instead of focusing on wishing old chums all the best for the New Year, or reminiscing of past delights, these depressing letters do nothing to lift one's spirits, except possibly, of course, they may lift the spirits of the sender. But shouldn't he be seeking the proverbial couch in a psychiatrist's office and pay him to listen attentively, instead of sharing the 'sturm und drang' at this time of year with those of us who can't defend ourselves from accepting these depressing mail deliveries from the friendly postman?

Believe me when I tell you, that I'm not a hard-hearted person. I will sit up all night and share your grief. I will drink with you in a bar and listen attentively to your tale of woe. I will dab a tear over lunch or dinner any month of the year, but spare me during the holidays. This is the time for jolly old St. Nick with his "ho ho ho" to make children laugh. It's the time to put your arm around someone and give them a hug. It's the time to remember a kindness with a gift. It's the time to start the New Year on a new hopeful high, and I don't mean just high on champagne. Now is the time to ring bells!

The renowned writer, Thomas Mann, said, "Time has no divisions to mark its passage, there is never a thunderstorm or blare of trumpets to announce the beginning of a new month or year. Even when a new century begins it is only we mortals who ring bells..."

If this is the time to ring bells and make New Year's resolutions, let us resolve to make our friendships more meaningful by keeping in touch during the rest of the year, by sending a post card, picking up the phone, or sending a fax or E-mail message.

That's my resolution for the New Year!

Letters to the editor

Editor:

I agree heartily with the criticism of the post office move made by the mayor and Courier that was printed recently in your paper. They were right on when they said that this will be a hardship on many citizens, especially the elderly, and that this move out of town will add to the further decay of the downtown area.

Their words were very moving but not worth a nickel. Since I and many others have known about the projected move for several years (and made our disapproval known), I would suggest that they are two or three years late with their objections.

Why did they not take a stand at the time that the initial plans were made known and something could possibly have been done. Was this a big surprise to them?

I for one would have been more impressed if the mayor and the Courier had spoken out before brick and mortar were in place. The horse is out of the barn.

walks. With the new building, they will be able to have a fenced-in yard so animals that get along with each other can play.

The new location will also move the facility away from a residential area, a stress relief for the society's workers and their neighbors. Wright said they also will have room to expand on the site as needed.

Two years of fund raising have brought in $50,000 for a new building, but when county commissioners last week gave the society $150,000, the "dream came true," in Wright's words. Now, they can sit down with experts and draw up blueprints for a new facility.

Host families needed for foreign exchange student program

Foreign high school students are scheduled to arrive soon for academic semester home stays, and the sponsoring organization needs a few more local host families.

According to Pacific Intercultural Exchange (P.I.E.) Executive Director, John Doty, the students are all between the ages of 15 and 18 years, are English-speaking, have their own spending money, carry accident and health insurance, and are anxious to share their cultural experiences with their new American families. P.I.E. currently has programs to match almost every family's needs, ranging in length from a semester to a full academic year, where the students attend local high schools.

P.I.E. area representatives match students with host families by finding common interests and lifestyles through an informal in-home meeting. Prospective host families are able to review student applications and select the perfect match. As there are no "typical" host families, P.I.E. can fit a student into just about any situation, whether it be a single parent, a childless couple, a retired couple or a large family.

Families who host for P.I.E. are also eligible to claim a $50 per month charitable contribution deduction on their itemized tax returns for each month they host a sponsored student.

For the upcoming programs, P.I.E. has students from Spain, Germany, Poland, Russia, Finland, Ar-

New adult care center for memory loss patients built in East Jordan

East Jordan and the East Jordan Family Health Center will be joining together to help families dealing with Alzheimer's Disease and other conditions causing short term memory loss or dementia. Matching funds were provided by the Healthshare Group (parent company of Northern Michigan Hospital) and Charlevoix Area Hospital.

A grant from the Brookdale Foundation helped to establish the Living Room-East Jordan in March of 1997 with matching funds from Charlevoix Area Hospital. This grant from the Brookdale Foundation is part of a new initiative with the Health Resources and Services Administration to link dementia services with Community Health Centers. Ten grants were funded nationwide, and this was the only program funded in Michigan.

The Brookdale Foundation from New York has provided support to establish adult day programs in over 198 communities in 35 states across the nation.

"This grant will allow us to work with families and their doctors to identify and access community based services," said Kate Snow, RN, MSHA, Executive Director of the Living Room Adult Day Services. We will also provide educational materials that will assist the families in understanding dementia, and the special needs of care givers.

Another goal of this grant will be to provide an educational conference on dementia to the area physicians and providers. This is scheduled for May of 1998 in Petoskey in cooperation with the educational programs sponsored by the Healthshare Group. The $7,500 match for the Brookdale grant was given by the Healthshare Group.

Charlevoix Area Hospital's Community Outreach Program gave $5,000 for funding for the Health Care Finance Administration Rural Hospital Transition Grant. The funds will be used for program development and coordination and to provide scholarships to the Living Room-East Jordan for patients of the Health Center who are in need.

The Living Room-East Jordan is open on Tuesdays from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. and is located in the Senior Center.

To find out more about the program, or to volunteer, call 536-2212.

BEACONS

Beacons of Blessing
By Rev. Bruce Hamilton

Though I know some Michigan Wolverine fans are probably disappointed, I'm not too surprised that the collegiate football polls were divided on their choice of national champions between the maize and blue and Nebraska. The tie is over more than just identical records. The coach's poll reflects the love and respect those in the profession have for Tom Osborne.

After some 25 years at Lincoln, Friday's Orange Bowl game was his last coaching outing on the gridiron. The victories he has won, the all-Americans he has turned out and the devotion of his players will have him a legend in Cornhusker Country for years to come. What spoke to me was a quote from one of his players on this year's team. "It's an honor for us to be the ones on the final team Coach Osborne takes on the football field."

If you've ever been involved with team sports, you know what that means. If a team and a coach really click, if they really care about each other, win or lose, there's no feeling like it anywhere.

Some people talk about life in terms of being a game. If that's a fair analogy, then I want to be sure that Jesus is on the sideline with me as my coach. When I think about the things I have learned from Him, the patience he has shown with me, and the encouragement that He and the Holy Spirit are constantly pumping into my life, that's what makes each day so precious. That's where the drive comes from to reach down deep and do things that, on my own, would not have been possible. Knowing that the Lord believes in me enables me to share that same confidence and trust with others.

OF BLESSINGS

One of the things that people said about Osborne was how he stood by his players through thick and thin. If you follow the news, you know one or two of his players had some very "unusual" adventures. If we are honest with ourselves, we have had some "unusual" adventures in our lives over the years. Are we really aware of just how close Jesus has stood by our sides through them all? He may not have always been too pleased with what He saw us do, but He was as close as the mention of His name if we wanted to turn from our follies and get our lives back on track.

One of the biggest follies Jesus ever faced was when Judas made up his mind to betray Him. Over and over the Lord tried to sway Judas' heart without success. Even on the night Judas passed the point of no return, Jesus would have loved him had he given the Lord the chance. Out of that moment arose one of the greatest teachings our Lord ever uttered. He told His disciples, and, in turn, you and I, to "Love one another as I have loved you." There is the underlying theme that you must not fail to see. There is always the Lord's eternal love. There will be far more serious disappointments in your life than Michigan having to share the national championship with Nebraska. There will be moments when you will need the grace that Jesus can bring to your side. Through tragedy or triumph, if we can learn to love one another as He has loved us, the possibilities for our walk with Him will truly be boundless.

Congratulations to Lloyd Carr and to Tom Osborne. Congratulations to both Wolverine and Cornhusker fans. But congratulations also go to those hearts who know Jesus, for they will always have the coaching and support they need to win the most important game of all — the game of life!

BUSINESS
County transit system gets big boost in state funding

By Jamie MacMillan

Charlevoix County's transit authority received a New Year's boost from the state last month with the announcement that state funding for 70 transit agencies throughout Michigan will increase for 1998.

During the fiscal year of 1998, the state will appropriate $162 million more than it did in 1997. Overall, this 35 percent increase will bring in an extra $348,600 to Charlevoix's transit authority. In 1997, the state gave the county just over $211,000, county transit director Art Saworski said.

Other local counties will benefit as well. Antrim County will receive $329,280, Kalkaska $272,050, Otsego $398,518, and the Bay Area Transportation Authority of Grand Traverse County $1,216,771.

"We are pleased to provide an increase in operating assistance to 70 local bus transit agencies across the state," Governor John Engler said in a press release announcing the increased funds. "The increase represents our commitment to improve bus service provided by urban systems as well as rural systems serving our citizens in smaller communities."

Charlevoix County's transit authority works with a $500,000 annual budget in order to run its fleet of 15 buses with routes throughout the county. The budget receives revenues from three sources. In addition to state funding, which comes in the form of monthly payments, revenues are collected through a four year, 0.25 millage and bus fares, Saworski said.

The present millage will be up for renewal in 2000.

Bus fares bring in $100,000 from a variety of bus passes as well as those who pay as they ride.

Both Saworski and officials from the Michigan Department of Transportation were unclear as to how the money would be spent. Typically, the money arrives in monthly stipends, but the state could decide to purchase new buses and equipment, in which case, the county would receive their funding in equivalent capital.

Saworski said the county's buses are four to five years old and none of them have less than 100,000 miles on the odometer, but are in decent working condition.

State dollars to fund local transit agencies come from up to 10 percent of gas taxes and registration fees collected as well as sales taxes collected on automotive-related products.

The additional $162 million to be doled out in 1998 represents an accumulated surplus from previous years, so this year's increase may not be sustained in future years.

Ike Boss named best girls' class "D" coach in state by Associated Press

Dwight "Ike" Boss
By Jamie MacMillan

A career that sprang from practice sessions with Coleman's Cats and Pete's Pups has earned Ellsworth basketball coach Dwight "Ike" Boss one of the sport's highest honors.

Last month, Boss was named the Associated Press 1997 High School Girls Class "D" coach of the year after guiding the Ellsworth Lady Lancers to a 23-1 record. The Lancers fell to Portage in the quarterfinals, but Boss's club held the state's top ranking throughout much of the season.

"It's a compliment, and I appreciate it. It's something you strive for," he said of the award. "Really, it goes to the kids — the kids give you the award."

Boss began his coaching career at Ellsworth in 1969 coaching the junior varsity boys, a role he kept until 1980. In 1973 he took over the fledgling girls' basketball program and has remained there ever since, save for a two-year leave during the mid-1970s.

"When we started, girls' basketball was really at the ground level," he recalled. "The growth in their skill level over the years has been phenomenal. I enjoy watching the women's college games and now pro games on TV, even more than the men."

Boss's interest in the sport began while a middle-schooler in recreational programs, where children were either a Coleman Cat or a Pete Pup. Attending Charlevoix High School, he played under Don Carey, but, in his words, "rode the bench much of the time." He attended Spring Arbor College where he played on the junior varsity club and earned degrees in elementary and physical education.

His time on the bench led him into the coaching ranks.

"I was able to see everything from the bench from a coach's angle, and I thought I would enjoy it," he said. "A lot of the successful coaches played the game, but weren't necessarily the stars of the Boss began his career.

To meet those changes, Boss himself has undergone a coaching change. A self-described "screamer," Boss has toned down that act and stresses the more positive side of the player.

"I used to be a real negative coach, but I've found out that it's a lot easier to be positive," he said. "I still do holler at times."

"When a kid makes a mistake, I point it out, but don't dwell on it. Always point out the positives. I've tried to find twice as many positives in a kid than negative."

For Boss, the award comes during one of the busiest times during his two-decade coaching career. After having all eyes, hopes and dreams of the town of Ellsworth on his Lady Lancer squad, Boss has taken on a new challenge — head coach of the Ellsworth boys' team.

"It's a real challenge. I have to really get down and coach," he said of his new club, which is winless in three starts. "It's been awhile since I lost three games in a row, but the experience has been fun, it's been a rebirth."

Boss, who also won the region 4 (Upper Peninsula and northern lower Michigan) class "D" coach of the year, awarded by the area coaches, will remain the Ellsworth team; they learned the sport and paid their dues."

A lot has changed over the years, but very little has changed too. The same skills of passing, shooting and setting picks need to be displayed, but the way coaches go about implementing those skills has undergone the biggest evolution.

Coaching strategy and the "Xs and Os" aren't enough anymore. A coach needs to be a psychologist, Boss said, managing different personalities who have different roles on the team and different interests off the court than they did when girls' coach, where he also is a teacher. A Charlevoix resident, Boss is also the city's recreational director and a member of the Charlevoix Board of Education.

Ike's highs and lows

Lower right: During one of the season's closest games, a seven point Lancer win over Charlevoix, Boss laments with his head in hands over a referee's call.

Center: Ike Boss gazes out at his top-ranked Lancers. Amid a load of hoopla and expectations, the Lancers raced to 23 wins before being upended in the quarterfinals by Portage. Last month, Boss won the A.P. coach of the year award. (Photos by Jamie MacMillan)

SCRAPBOOK

Ideas about law enforcement have changed with time

Practical jokes were popular in a different era

By Marilyn Boss

It is with fond memories that I remember in years gone by, how the law enforcement officials handled many situations in town. The following are amusing stories which I recall seeing or hearing.

Oscar Stroud tells the story of the time he worked in the A & P store, located in the building where Koucky Gallery is now. Clarence Heise was chief of police. He and his brother, Charlie, were always playing jokes. One Saturday evening, an inebriated woman was making her way down Bridge Street. Clarence grabbed her and sat her in the front seat of Charlie's wife's car. Oscar and the other clerks were looking out the front window to see what would happen. After about 15 minutes, Mrs. Heise came to get in the driver's seat. She was shocked to see this woman sitting in her car. Suspecting foul play, she furiously jumped out of her car to find the perpetrator of the deed. She turned around to find Oscar and the rest of the clerks laughing their heads off. Needless to say, the police chief returned later and escorted the lady home.

There was a little man about 5 feet tall, who lived in Norwood. His name was Tinker Carmen, and he was affectionately called the "mayor of Norwood."

Every day he would walk toward Charlevoix, and usually someone would pick him up and take him one way or the other. He wore a pin-striped suit, and walked with a very fast gait. On Saturday night, he would walk down Bridge Street as fast as he could go. About every seventh step, he would veer sideways to keep his balance, going from one bar to the other. One Saturday night, as legend has it, he had a little too much to drink in the bar that is now known as the Townhouse, and they kicked him out. He went down the street to the Birches, the other local bar, which was located where Whitney's was. Being the witty person that he was, after about 15 minutes, he decided that he would get back at the owners of the first bar. He went back to the bar, opened the front door, cupped his hands and hollered, "Big fire at the Birches!" "Big fire at the Birches!" This emptied the bar for the rest of the night. The patrons all followed him down to the other bar, where, there was of course, no fire.

One summer afternoon, our family of seven children, and Dale and I, headed for Fisherman's Island. We were walking down the beach, and started to wade across the water, which was low that year. All of a sudden one of the kids said, "Those people don't have any clothes on!" As we began to wade through the water, the adults in the group stood up in an attempt to shock us into leaving. Several other people on the beach were enjoying our reactions to the situation. They encouraged us to go to town and notify the sheriff. Sheriff Rose had three deputies in his office. They all began to argue about who would go to check the situation out. Earl Crandall used his seniority to take the assignment. We followed him, but stayed back from the scene about a half-mile. There was a boy around 10 years old, who was playing with a little rowboat near the crossing to the island. Not wanting to get his feet wet, Officer Crandall commandeered the boat, and had the boy row him across. You can imagine how funny it looked to see this tall, dignified officer being ferried across this short expanse of water in a boat made only for one person, not two. The nudist family were brought in to the jail, fined and told not to appear in public like that again.

I can remember how my grandfather, who was sheriff prior to Glenn Rose, would put the inebriated men in jail overnight — much like Sheriff Andy Taylor did in Mayberry. They would be safe, have a meal, sober up and go on their merry way the next morning.

We were living in a different era, where everyone looked after one another. There were a lot of fun times, and a lot of "characters" in town, with practical jokes being the norm of the day.

"Titanic" movie triggers family memories

Charlevoix woman's relatives were aboard the doomed ship

By Jamie MacMillan

When Francie Martin went to the movie Titanic, she, like everyone else, got caught up in the horrific fate that befell the passengers. Unlike most, though, she watched the movie and got a glimpse of what her family members went through.

Martin's aunt, Mahala Dutton Douglas, and uncle, Walter Donald Douglas, were among the 2,200 passengers on the great ship's maiden voyage across the Atlantic.

Walter's father had started the Quaker Oats cereal company and by the time Walter, a Cedar Rapids, Iowa native, boarded the Titanic he had amassed a fortune of at least $4 million through a variety of business ventures.

He and his new wife Mahala, also from Cedar Rapids, had just moved and built a mansion on bluffs overlooking Lake Minnetonka as Walter was entering the linseed oil business in Minneapolis. The pair embarked on a three month European holiday to find proper furnishings for their new estate. They booked their return passage on the Titanic for first class.

"For both of them it was a second marriage and they only had been married a few years," Martin explained. "Just like the movie, their story was a love story."

The couple lived it up with the other first class passengers in the plush accommodations. On board, first class passengers had access to exquisite dining, a Turkish bath, swimming pools and a gymnasium with a squash court. While dining with Russians and Dutch people, Mahala learned the appreciation of fine wines, Martin said.

Martin noted that, while walking the ## Forum will give input to Venetian festival

By Laurie Lounsbury

Does the Venetian Festival have a future? That's one question that may be asked at the Venetian Festival Community Forum, hosted by the Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce at 7 p.m. Tuesday, Jan. 20.

Chamber president Jacqueline Merta and chamber board members discussed the Venetian Festival at their recent annual retreat in December. The group decided the community needs to be involved with decisions about the Venetian Festival.

After a fireworks explosion at last year's festival killed one person and injured many others, the future of Charlevoix's Venetian Festival is uncertain.

"We don't know what the community thinks or wants," said Merta. "This (the festival) is a community event, and because there was a tragic accident last year that affected the entire community, we want community input before we address the future of the Venetian Festival."

The chamber asked Tom Kern, executive director of the National Cherry Festival in Traverse City, and Church O'Connor, Cherry Festival organizer, to facilitate the community forum.

"It's good to have an objective party listening and facilitating at a forum like this," Merta said. "These men have done community forums in Traverse City for their festival."

The two men have certainly had plenty of experience dealing with the community's sentiments toward the Cherry Festival. In 1993, the town received so many complaints about the size and duration of the Cherry Festival that they put it to the voters. With a three-to-one margin of approval, the voters said they wanted the festival to last 10 days instead of shortening it to a long weekend.

"Part of the decision after the referendum in 1993 was to create a community input mechanism," Kern said. "We developed the community forums from that. They're not like a typical public hearing. The forums are more like a round table situation, where people give input and also help to create solutions."

Because of the forums in Traverse City, more than 100 changes were made to the Cherry Festival. Kern and O'Connor's success with community forums has made them popular facilitators in other communities that would like to change their festivals.

"I remembered reading in the newspaper that they'd done these community forums and I thought it would be good to get their help for the Venetian Festival," Merta said.

After last week's announcement of a community forum, townspeople are already voicing their opinions about the 67-year-old festival.

Local woman's uncle went down with the ship

ship, Mahala noticed that crewman in charge of tracking the ocean's temperature to better gauge the whereabouts of ice fields were shirking their duty. Their thermometer could not reach the water with the size string they had tied onto it. Instead of finding longer string, the crewman were dipping the device into a pail of tap water.

In the panic that ensued while the ship went down, Mahala and the couple's French maid, Berthe LeRoy, escaped on Lifeboat 2. Walter meanwhile, dressed in his best attire, refused to board a lifeboat, reportedly saying it would make him less of a man and continued to load passengers onto lifeboats.

He perished in the sinking and his body was later recovered by the cable ship MacKay Bennett whose task it was to troll the disaster site for bodies. When found, Walter still wore his evening dress and had a gold watch, gold cigarette case, a pocket letter case with 551 English pounds, and playing cards.

Mahala's lifeboat was picked up by the rescue ship Carpathia and later she testified at the American Senate inquiry. She told the inquiry that safety shortcomings caused the disaster — notably that the ship lacked a searchlight to check for icebergs, life vests were faulty as they left cork remnants in the water, and there weren't enough lifeboats.

She moved back to their estate where she lived until her death at age 81 in 1945. Martin said her aunt developed an eye infection as the result of the intensity of her crying after the disaster.

Martin, who has been fascinated with the ship since she was 10 years old, said the movie's accuracy was "100 percent history." She noted her uncle might have been one of the many who fell to their death as the ship tipped into the ocean. When his body was recovered it had numerous humps and bruises.

She leapt out of her seat at the movie's outset when one of the characters in the dive scene explained that Rose, the heroine, settled in Cedar Rapids after the sinking.

Forum for festival ideas

Carey's Shoes on Bridge Street, were happy to know that there will be a time and place for people to express their opinions. The Careys regretted that they'll be out of town on a business trip at the time of the forum.

"We have strong feelings about Venetian and about the carnival," Nancy said. "A Venetian Festival is supposed to be a water festival, based on Italy's festival in Venice. We're hoping the festival can focus on the treasure and resource that Charlevoix has — the water."

Randy Carey would like to see the carnival eliminated from the festival, saying that the carnival takes up valuable parking spots that could otherwise be used by visitors to town.

According to the Careys, a survey taken last year showed that about 80 percent of the downtown merchants were opposed to the carnival.

But the carnival is a money-maker for the chamber of commerce, which earns a percentage of the profits from the event. While Merta didn't reveal the exact amount the chamber earns from the carnival, she did say that all carnival revenue is used for Venetian-related expenses.

Other suggestions made by the Careys included a daytime boat parade, a wooden boat show, a laser

"It's a coincidence, but I wonder if they looked at the passenger list to see who was in first class," Martin said. "We all just jumped."

Well versed with the tragedy, Martin didn't get choked up during the film. She did feel some tugs of emotion at the end, though, when Rose stood alone in the rain with the Statue of Liberty in the background.

"I saw her as my Aunt Mahala," Martin said. "Suddenly she was all alone wondering, 'Why am I here?'" show instead of a fireworks display, and more activities such as concerts or boater safety demonstrations with Round Lake at the center of the activity.

Merta was glad to hear that both merchants like the Careys and town residents were already expressing ideas about the community forum.

"I've gotten the feeling that people think it's really good we're involving the community and letting everyone have their suggestions," Merta said.

The community forum will take place at 7 p.m. Tuesday, Jan. 20, at the United Methodist Church, 104 State St. in Charlevoix.

"All you need to have a carnival is a piece of dirt — there's nothing special about that."
— Nancy Carey, discussing the future of the Venetian Festival and her desire to see the downtown carnival eliminated from the event.

"It's not so much that we're looking for answers as we're looking for input. The end result, hopefully, is a great deal of input and a listing of deficiencies, along with creative ideas about how to resolve the deficiencies."

What a doll — house!

By Laurie Lounsbury

With today's ever-inflating real estate prices, winning a $10,000 house doesn't sound like much.

But when the $10,000 house is a Victorian doll house, the value takes on new meaning.

Tonia Zellers of Charlevoix was the lucky person to win the amazing Victorian doll house — complete with a deed to the home — in the Crooked Tree Arts Council Raffle.

"I'm really enjoying it," Zellers said. "I can spend hours looking at all the little details."

The doll house, which was anonymously donated to the arts council by a Charlevoix resident, has come back to its hometown. The winning ticket landed in Zeller's hands when her stepfather and daughter, Melissa, bought her raffle tickets for a Christmas present.

"My stepfather really wanted it — he's a collector of everything," Zellers said. "He gave me the tickets and said, 'You have these for Christmas.'"

The family visited the arts center in Petoskey when Melissa's photography was on display in a juried photography contest. Zeller's stepfather fell in love with the exquisite doll house and promptly bought raffle tickets for it.

When Zellers received a phone call from the arts center on Dec. 19, she assumed they were calling about her daughter's photography.

"I couldn't believe it when they told me I won the doll house," Zellers said.

By Christmas Eve, the doll house was set up for display in Zeller's dining room, where a stream of friends came to see the miniature wonder. Tiny lights twinkled from little rooms, including lights on a miniature Christmas tree.

"I've had tons of people looking at it," Zellers said.

"It took Zellers and a friend several hours to set up the doll house. Hundreds of miniature items had to be carefully unwrapped from the tissue paper that protected them during their trip to Charlevoix. The three-story Victorian house is dripping with authentic detail, such as tiny magazines and tiny photo albums with real photos, miniature napkins in napkin rings for the dining room, and even a deck of cards for the parlor room.

"We had to be really careful when we were moving things around," Zellers said.

The man who made it all possible — Zeller's stepfather — returned to Charlevoix Tuesday, when he got his first glimpse of the doll house in its new Charlevoix home.

Tonia Zellers was astounded when she learned she was the winner of a Victorian doll house in the Crooked Tree Arts Council raffle. The value of the doll house was estimated at $10,000. Zellers has the perfectly scaled house on display in the dining room of her home on State Street. (Photo by Laurie Lounsbury)

OPINIONS

Community forum for Venetian Festival is overdue

The Venetian Festival has a giant black eye from the hit it took last summer. A fireworks explosion that killed one person and injured many others definitely delivered a knock-down punch to popular summer festival in Charlevoix.

But last summer's tragedy doesn't mean the festival has to be down for the count.

In fact, breathing new life into the festival is a great idea.

Many local residents spend the month of July dreading the arrival of Venetian Festival weekend. It brings with it abysmal traffic jams, litter, carnival noise and drained wallets from kids wanting to go on all the rides.

Quite a few regular resorters steer clear of town during Venetian Festival, preferring to find quiet beaches on Lake Charlevoix's South Arm or Boyne City during the downtown chaos.

Even local retailers find the festival reaches a point of diminishing returns — too many crowds, too much jostling and too little parking deters visitors from doing any shopping in town.

Giving Venetian Festival an overhaul could make it a safer, more enjoyable weekend for everyone.

Ideas already circulating through town show that people want to continue with the Venetian Festival, but are ready to consider alternative ways of celebrating.

Nancy Carey said that in Italy, the original Venetian Festival is hosted to welcome visitors to town. Our festival should serve the same purpose.

Daytime boat parades in Round Lake would allow boats of all sizes and boaters of all ages to participate. No generators are needed if boats are decorated with-out lights.

The traditional evening electrical boat parade could continue for bigger boats.

A wooden and classic boat show seems like it would fit right in with the Venetian theme.

Hauling out Christmas tree lights is a good idea too — keep string colors limited to red, white and blue and be patriotic about the whole thing. Green, leafy trees and bushes adorned with lights in the summer would be spectacular.

A laser light show over Round Lake sounds like a terrific display, maybe even more dazzling than fireworks — certainly a safer endeavor.

More concerts in East Park seems to be a natural for Venetian weekend. There's a wealth of musical talent in northern Michigan.

Seems like we could harness a fair amount of it for the festival. Even looking in our own back yard, our city band, high school and charter school bands could entertain during the weekend. Other teens have formed several rock bands and jazz bands — let's give them a place to showcase their talent.

Charlevoix schools have a long history of producing artistically talented students. Maybe a youth art and photography show would be in order.

Since the Venetian Queen Pageant no longer includes a talent competition, maybe the Charlevoix High School Performing Arts team could take center stage with a performance at the band shell in East Park.

With a blue light in the window of each home, to show we care.

Letters to the editor

Women's Resource Center grateful for town support

Editor:

The support shown during our recent Harvest Food and Supply Drive was truly outstanding. Area schools, churches, service organizations, social clubs, agencies and individuals donated literally thousands of items (food, household supplies, toys, books, holiday gifts, etc.) to our Safe Home.

These gifts allow our agency to continue providing shelter and safety to hundreds of abused families from Emmet, Charlevoix, Cheboygan, Otsego and Antrim Counties.

We are fortunate and proud to be part of such a giving and caring community. On behalf of the Women's Resource Center of Northern Michigan, many thanks to you all.

EDITORIAL

The Tastes and Sounds of Charlevoix fund raising event for Venetian fireworks victims was hugely successful. Maybe that concept could be woven into the Venetian Festival. It might be too much to ask of Charlevoix restaurants to operate a booth during Venetian Festival, but maybe restaurants in outlying areas would like to bring their samples to town for an afternoon.

Charlevoix is a jewel of a town — a polished gem, not a lump of coal. Let's make the Venetian Festival an equally polished event. Let the towns in the flat lands and cornfields host carnivals and fireworks. We can do better.

The possibilities are endless. It only takes concerned people willing to come forward with ideas and suggestions to make it happen.

What happened at last year's Venetian Festival was terrible.

What happens this year, as an outcropping of the tragedy, could be wonderful.

County community foundation announces grant recipients

A host of local nonprofit organizations received some good news to help them ring in the new year. The Charlevoix County Community Foundation will award grants of $101,420 to support their programs and projects.

"This is such a gratifying time of year for us," said Mike Stowe, president of the foundation board of trustees. "We're seeing how much good can be accomplished when generous people invest in the future of our communities."

Grant making dollars come from income earned on the community foundation's permanent endowment made of donations from individuals, families and businesses, in the Charlevoix County area. Since only part of the investment income is used to make grants, the foundation's endowment continues to grow over time and benefit the area for generations to come. In the past few years, community foundations have become one of the nation's fastest growing forms of philanthropy — in large part because they allow people of all income levels to join together and maximize their charitable power. The Charlevoix County Community Foundation was established in 1992 by a group of this area's civic leaders.

Grants announced by the community foundation and their amounts are: From the General Fund, used to support a variety of This computer age can yield some intriguing things. E-mail can link us instantly with family, friends or business acquaintances around the world. Some of the greetings that can come across your computer screen really speak to your heart. Others, well you wonder what people do with their time to create them! One such intriguing piece came my way last week.

"Announcing the new Built-in Orderly Organized Knowledge device (BOOK). It is a revolutionary break through in technology; no wires, no electric circuits, no batteries, nothing to be connected or switched on. It is so easy even a child can operate it. Just lift its cover. Compact and portable, it can be used anywhere, even sitting in an armchair by a fire, yet it is powerful enough to hold as much information as a compact disk.

"Here's how it works. Each BOOK is constructed of sequentially numbered sheets of paper (recyclable), each capable of holding thousands of bits of information. These pages are locked together with a custom fit device called a binder, which keeps the sheets in their correct sequence. By using both sides of the sheet, manufacturers are able to cut cost in half.

"Each sheet is scanned optically, registering information directly into your brain. A flick of the finger takes you to the next sheet. The BOOK may be taken up at any time and used merely by opening it. The 'browse' feature allows you to move instantly to any sheet and move forward or backward as you wish. Most come with an 'index' feature which pinpoints the exact location of any selected information for instant retrieval...

"Portable, durable, and affordable, the BOOK is the entertainment wave of the future, and many new titles are expected soon due to the surge of its programming tool, the Portable Erasable Nih Cryptic Intercommunication Language Stylus" (that's PENCILS for short).

If that made you smile, I'm glad. I shared it to make a point. In a world that seems to be increasingly more complicated by the day, we cannot afford to let the basic, the simple things in life slip away from us. In a world that seems to be increasingly more complicated by the day, we've got to realize that there are times when the simple things in life are the preferred way to meet a challenge we might be facing. And one of the biggest challenges we face is accepting God's commission to go into the world with gospel and share His love.

One of the simplest ways we have been blessed to meet that challenge is by exercising our faith. If we are totally open to the moving and working of God in our lives, it can amaze you to learn what He is prepared to do for those who truly wish to honor Him. He'll help you move mountains. He'll bring light into the darkest moments imaginable. Though others may walk away and let you fend for yourself, God will always be there.

People have listened to preachers say that for years. They have also forgotten, slept through and ignored more sermons than those of us who follow God's call would care to admit. If they chose not to listen to God's servants declare His message, where will they hear it? From you! You are a living sermon every day. Your actions, your words and your love are the basic tools God seeks in order to change the world.

It may indeed be an ever-increasing technological age, but the best way to meet some of its most difficult challenges will never change. Be God's daughter or son. Let the light of His love shine through you and never be surprised at what real faith can do!

School board considers ban of tobacco use on property

By Jamie MacMillan
Furthering its zero tolerance policy, the Charlevoix Board of Education discussed Monday night a "total ban" of tobacco products for everyone on school grounds and during any school sponsored events.

"Everything and everywhere," superintendent Roberta Jackson said.

According to a draft of the new policy modeled after similar policies in Gaylord, Petoskey, and Boyne City, any use of tobacco — cigars, cigarettes, pipes or chewing tobacco — will be prohibited 24 hours a day on school property and during any school event that takes place on or off school grounds.

School grounds include all buildings, school board meeting places, bus garages, maintenance buildings and sports facilities.

Those quick smoke breaks at intermission of basketball games will be a thing of the past, and violators could be subjected to a misdemeanor charge punishable by a $50 fine. Each building principal will serve as a compliance officer for their building and grounds and will refer violators to be prosecuted to the superintendent.

"We've had a number of policies evolve over the years," board member Larry Levensgood said. "This would be the final step."

Previously, the district experimented with two separate lounges with one being specifically for smokers, allowing smoking only outside of the buildings, and their present policy of prohibiting smoking on any school grounds on school days until 6 p.m.

"I think we should do it," board member Ike Boss said. "Other schools are doing it, we should move on with it."

The policy does have some gray areas that the board wanted to clarify, such as school activities not on school grounds. Baseball, softball and sporting events at Shananan Field present enforcement problems. Levensgood was concerned about community education classes involving adults who might step outside for a smoke during a break. He also mentioned that some faculty might be affected who stay late at night working and employees at the bus garage.

Also at issue was the date the policy would go into effect. It was recommended to begin the policy at the start of the next school year so as to get the new policy in student handbooks and school newsletters and to give the community time to realize the new rules.

"The people who smoke don't get handbooks," board member Barney Way said. "I say we begin to make announcements at every activity and go from there."

After discussion it was determined that some leeway time should be given for people to adjust to the new policy. The board seemed to agree to implement the rules on April 1, 1998, just prior to the beginning of the 1998 spring sports season.

The board will be voting on the new policy at their next meeting.

In other action, the board voted to abolish its community round table sessions before meetings. Instead, board meetings will begin at 7 p.m. in order to give people more time to officially address the board.

The board also voted without dissent to purchase two new 71-passenger buses for a total of $101,403. Jackson later explained that the purchases are part of a planned replacement program where the district alternates between buying one bus and two buses every other year. In the past, there was no system in place and the district was forced to

Alpena Republican to run for 106th State House seat

By Jamie MacMillan

Bucking the thought that experience counts the most in the state political landscape, Joseph Gammons announced last week that he will run for the 106th State House of Representatives seat being vacated by Rep. Beverly Bodem (R-Alpena).

Bodem, who has served the district for six years, cannot run for reelection because of term limit laws, so a new face will represent Charlevoix, Cheboygan, Presque Isle and Alpena Counties.

Gammons, a 23-year-old Republican from Alpena, points to history to prove he can be an effective leader in Lansing despite his young age.

"John Engler was 21 when he won his first house seat," Gammons said. "That should quell any fears that a young person can't make a difference and influence the political process."

Gammons has been active in state politics for four years. He began as a staff assistant under Assistant Senate Majority Leader John Pridnia (R-Hubbard Lake) before serving as Deputy Director of Constituent Relations to Senator Walter H. North (R-St. Ignace). He worked for North from 1994 until last fall, when he stepped down to pursue his own place as a state legislator.

"As a legislator, you're put in a position where you can truly help people, while as a staff member you're in more of a position to help the legislator," Gammons said of the desire to intensify his role in politics.

At the moment, Gammons isn't running on an agenda of issues. He said the economy is doing well, so people haven't flooded him with complaints. When pressed, he said his main goal will be to make sure northern Michigan is not the "forgotten region."

"One thing I've seen, in these four counties in particular, is that they continually get passed over for Oakland, Wayne and Kent counties."

Gammons, who called himself the "biggest fan of local control around," said he would continue to fight against the governor's quest to place state jurisdiction on county roads. Presently, the legislation is dying a slow death in committee, but Gammons predicted the issue will be revisited.

Education is close to Gammons' heart, as he grew up in a family of educators. He labeled the Teacher's Bill of Rights legislation as something that will be a big positive for northern Michigan education.

The legislation is a series of protective and punitive measures hoped to instill order, control and a safer classroom environment. He said the laws will give "schools back to the teachers — they are not able to teach when they're babysitting." Gammons did concede that parts of the bill such as the provision to reinstate corporal punishment he did not favor.

Gammons is a graduate of Alpena High School and Michigan State University. He is a member of the National Rifle Association, the Alpena County Right to Life, the Huron Shore Farm Bureau, Toastmasters International, and is Vice President of the Alpena County MSU Alumni Association. He attends Word of Life Baptist Church in Alpena.

Smiling on the job

Newspaper boy Jon Reid was smiling with the arrival of new snow, even though it meant he had to deliver his papers by riding his bike on slippery snow. In one week's time the weather has changed from unseasonably warm to seasonably cold, snowy and windy. The temperature Tuesday morning was a scant 4 degrees, with high winds making it feel much colder. (Photo by Laurie Lounsbury)

New buses, new coaches needed for school district

school's general funds.

"With all the events our kids attend we need a few more than just the regular route buses," Jackson said. She also noted that with the new buses, this would be the final year the district will use vans to transport students.

Finally, the board accepted the resignation of varsity softball coach Rick Grunch after three years on the job.

Grunch later said that his expanded duties at the Belvedere Golf Club, combined with a desire to follow his son playing baseball, which plays concurrently with softball, led to his decision.

Athletic Director Keith Haske reported that, in addition to varsity softball, the district has two other varsity head coach openings: tennis and football.

The tennis and softball positions are posted and need to be filled as soon as possible, Haske said.

Eight people have sent in applications to the district for the football job and Haske said he would probably whittle the list down to three candidates and conduct interviews from there. He hopes to have a coach named sometime in February or March. Todd Klinger coached the squad on an interim basis this past season.

"Number one, Todd did a great job, and number two our teaching openings may not be conducive to football coaches," Haske said Monday afternoon. "If we go outside the district we would want to combine a teaching position with the coach."

The board next meets at 7 p.m. Monday, Feb. 9 in the middle school cafeteria.

Local doctor receives board certification in obstetrics

Dr. James L. Jeakle, obstetrician and gynecologist in Charlevoix, recently became board certified by the American College of Obstetrics and Gynecology. Dr. Jeakle has been board certified by the American Academy of Family Practice.

Jeakle began the practice of obstetrics and gynecology in Charlevoix in August 1995. His office is located with Dr. William Mosher at 14700 Park Ave., where both physicians are members of the Charlevoix Area Hospital staff. Dr. Jeakle delivers newborns at Charlevoix Area Hospital's birthing center, and he has privileges at Northern Michigan Hospital in

James Jeakle

Petoskey. "It really doesn't mean that much to the average patient, it's simply the final stamp of approval," Jeakle said of the recent board certification.

Dr. Jeakle received his Bachelor of Science degree from Michigan State University in 1984 and his medical degree from Michigan State University College of Human Medicine in 1989. He served a three-year residency in family practice at St. Mary's Hospital in Grand Rapids and completed a three-year residency in obstetrics and gynecology at William Beaumont Hospital in Royal Oak.

Patients who wish to make appointments with either Dr. Jeakle or Dr. Mosher may call 547-4477.

SCRAPBOOK

Charlevoix residents were important part of past wars

From the Archives

One Charlevoix woman served in early war

By Geoffrey D. Reynolds

With the new year comes two important anniversaries for Charlevoix and its numerous veterans. And with these anniversaries I hope to gather some much needed information about Charlevoix area veterans of the Spanish-American War and World War I.

The year 1998 marks the centennial of Charlevoix's part in the Spanish-American War. Fought mostly on the island of Cuba and in the Philippines, many Charlevoix men and one woman took an active part in this successful "splendid little war," most remembered by the sinking of the American warship Maine and Teddy Roosevelt's famous charge up San Juan Hill. Some of those veterans we can account for are listed below:

Henry Aley, William Bache, William Bates, Carl Beaman, Louis C. (Bellenger) Bellanger, Edward Bennett, Louis DeChain, Charles Ferguson, Bruce Hanshaw, Samuel Lindsay, Eugene Martineau, Grace Merritt, Archie Miller, James E. Moran, Walter Mossington, Garfield Myers, William Newman, Fred O. Poquette, Charles Russell, Frank Sherman, Walter Smith, E. C. Waller, Jr., Frank Wilkinson, Calvin Wright and Fred Wright.

Also celebrated this year will be the 80th anniversary of the Charlevoix men coming home from World War I in Europe. Besides action seen in France, evidence has been found that links Charlevoix men to the famous "Polar Bears," an infantry unit that fought in Russia. Additional information is also needed concerning the flu epidemic that struck the home front as well as the battlefield. Some of those veterans we can account for are listed below:

William J. Burns, Dave Cromberger, George Crouter, Joseph Hollecheck, Lawrence Montgomery, Oscar Nelson, Douglas Nettleton, Lee Newson, Norris Oscar, Harry Potter, Joseph E. Powers, John E. Rosquist, Dean C. Scroggie, Leslie T. Shapton, Raymond F. Solomon.

While some information about our local veterans is available through the accounts of the local newspapers of the time, little has been written about the personal side of the war and its effect on local families. I hope to remedy that gap through the stories and papers you might know of and would be willing to let me review. This would also add some much needed archival material on these subjects to the Charlevoix Historical Society's collection.

If you are aware of any information pertaining to the men and women listed above please contact the Charlevoix Historical Society at 103 State St., Charlevoix, MI 49720 or by phone at 547-0373 and leave a message.

Building fees to increase in Charlevoix County

By Jamie MacMillan

Homeowners doing some building this year will incur more costs due to an increase in county building fees, the first such increase since 1984.

Typically, building fees bring in a surplus for the building inspection department, but with the addition of one-and-a-half staff members, county officials said an increase in fees was necessary to keep up.

"We want the department to keep paying for itself," county commissioner James Behling said. "We've held our own without raising fees, but we don't want to wait until we fall behind."

Behling chairs the committee which gave the thumbs up to a revised fee schedule. Carl Price and Joan Blanchard also serve on the committee. The county board will be voting on the new fee schedule later this month.

Building fees are based on cost estimates. Under the new rules, any one/two family residential construction between $10,000 and $100,000 will cost $60 plus $4 for every $1,000 over $10,000 in construction cost. Previously, the fees had been a base of $48 plus $3 for every $1,000 over $10,000 in cost.

To compare, in 1998 for a 1,200 square-foot ranch home with a 1,200 square-foot basement and 600 square-foot garage with an estimated building cost of $81,408, the county would impose a $344 fee ($60 for the first $10,000 and $4 times 71 for the remainder). Under the old fees, a similar project would only incur an extra fee of $261.

Despite the increase in fees, Charlevoix County will still be charging less per building project than neighboring counties. With the above example, Emmet County would charge a fee of $411 while Grand Traverse County would charge $427.

In 1997, the county's building inspection department brought in just under $123,000 in permit fees, but still had $18,000 listed as uncollected fees. Even if the county collects all of the outstanding fees, it would still fall short of 1996 figures that brought in over $145,000 in permit fees.

Amid an era of record-setting construction projects in the county, the building inspection department has seen their workload and their staff increase. In 1995, the county registered a record 583 projects, which was broken quickly in 1996 with 618 projects.

In the last two years, the department has added one-and-a-half staff members to their payroll, which has gradually raised their expenses from $192,000 in 1996 to $216,000 in 1997.

"There's still a lot of building in the county, and we're probably still understaffed," Behling said.

Across the board, fees for 1998 projects will increase. Projects estimated at $1,000 or less will be charged $15, up from $10 for projects below $500 and $12 from those between $500 and $1,000.

Projects costing between $1,000 and $10,000 will now be charged a base fee of $15 plus an additional $5 for every $1,000 over $1,000, up from a base fee of $12 plus $4 for every extra $1,000.

Projects beyond $100,000 will be charged a base fee of $420 plus $4 for every $1,000 over $100,000, an increase from a $318 base fee plus $3 for every additional $1,000 in projected cost.

Big Rock Point employee violated Nuclear Regulatory Commission policy

By Laurie Lounsbury

A 1996 incident at Big Rock Point Nuclear Power Plant led to an investigation by the Nuclear Regulatory Commission (NRC) and the subsequent resignation of former employee Darrel T. Rich.

In July and September of 1996, Rich, a resident of Indian River, falsified records on two separate occasions, showing that he had performed routine radiation sample surveys.

On one occasion, Rich was supposed to confirm the accuracy of the Continuous Air Monitoring system, which is inside the containment sphere. On the second occasion, Rich falsely claimed he tested the building that houses low level radiation waste products.

Because Big Rock Point has a security system with access cards assigned to each employee, the company was able to determine that Rich was never in the locations where he claimed he did the radiation surveys.

"Big Rock Point management discovered the discrepancies and immediately notified the NRC," said Tim Petrosky, public affairs director at Big Rock. Shortly after discovering the discrepancies, Rich resigned from the company. He had been employed at Big Rock since 1988.

The actions of Rich brought a level four NRC violation against Consumer's Energy. Violations are ranked from one to four, with four being the least significant level of violations. No fines or disciplinary actions were imposed on Consumer's Energy with the violation.

"You don't want this to happen, but level four violations are common at nuclear power plants," Petrosky said. "There is no safety significance with this level four violation."

In the last year, Big Rock Point has received 10 level four violations and one level three violation. None of the violations resulted in fines or disciplinary action.

"With those violations, the procedure is to respond to the NRC and let them know what corrective actions you're taking," Petrosky said.

After the NRC investigation into Rich's work performance, he was notified in September, 1997 by the NRC that he has until Jan. 25 to appeal their findings. In the meantime, Rich has been banned from the nuclear industry for three years. Months have passed since Rich received the notification — he has not yet responded or appealed their findings.

NRC spokesperson Angela Greenman said the action took over a year to complete because of the seriousness of the charge.

"What he (Rich) was doing was routine work, but this was not a normal, routine investigation," Greenman said.

Big Rock Point has an on-site NRC inspector who monitors regular plant activity. The on-site inspector makes sure that procedures are being followed according to NRC regulations and that the plant is operating safely. Because this was a serious incident involving falsification of records by one employee, the NRC sent special investigators to look into the situation.

"A normal violation would take four weeks to investigate," Greenman said.

"The nuclear industry has high standards that demand accurate record keeping," Petrosky said. "Consumer's Energy and its employees are expected and required to perform to these standards. Anything less will not be tolerated."

Big Rock Point shut down in August 1997, after generating power for 35 years.

Newly elected officers of the convention and visitors bureau board are: Steve Bennett, president, MacDougall House Bed and Breakfast; John McKown, vice president, Bridge Street Inn; and Tracy Sell, treasurer, Edgewater Inn.

Awards will be presented to the Outstanding Citizen, the Ambassador of the Year and the President's Award recipient.

Lou Hollow is tops with chamber

By Laurie Lounsbury

"You've got the wrong guy," Lou Hollow said modestly when he was presented with his award.

But everyone else attending the Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce annual meeting was quite sure the chamber got the right guy for the Outstanding Citizen Award, presented to Hollow by chamber president Jacqueline Merta.

In all, three awards were presented at the chamber meeting last Friday at the Charlevoix Country Club. One award was a surprise to everyone — Hollow's award was a big surprise to himself.

Hollow has had a tremendous impact on Charlevoix with his participation in civic organizations and professional organizations. He is always available to help people, both in his private life and business life.

As a member of the Lions Club, Hollow has been a devoted supporter of club activities, including cooking hundreds of chickens during the Venetian Festival to raise funds for the club's charitable activities. He has also served as the King Lion.

Hollow currently contributes his time by serving on the board of directors of the Charlevoix County Community Foundation and the Northern Michigan Community Mental Health board of directors.

As a founder and CEO of Charlevoix's community bank, Charlevoix State Bank, Hollow serves the town and remains active in many professional organizations.

He is on the board of directors of the Workers Compensation Board of Michigan Bankers Association and serves as chairman on the board of directors for the Michigan Association of Community Banks.

On the water, Hollow is best known for his eye-catching spinnaker with a bald eagle. He is a member of the Charlevoix Yacht Club and has volunteered many hours to help with activities and fund raisers for the club.

Breaking with tradition, the Ambassador's Award was awarded to not one person, but many. This year, the Ambassador's Award went to all the people who devoted countless hours to the Venetian Fireworks Victim's Fund.

Within days of the explosion that killed one person and injured many others, a group of people realized that the victims and their families would soon have significant and immediate financial and personal needs.

The Charlevoix Fireworks Victims Fund was quickly created, with an estimated 150 volunteers who worked to raise a goal of $100,000.

Whitney's garbage won't be moving

By Laurie Lounsbury

The city council found their answer to the Whitneys' garbage dilemma by looking at precedents that have already been set.

"We have a precedent for permitted trespass for a Dumpster. We have a precedent for use of other property for a Dumpster. That sets a precedent for the city's blessing provided it's your (Whitneys') arrangement for your use," Mayor Josh Barnes said at Monday's city council meeting.

Chuck and Gina Whitney, owners of Whitney's Oyster Bar, delayed plans to rebuild their business while they waited for the city to approve a site for their garbage container. After reviewing all the possible options with the city, their Dumpster will be placed exactly where it was placed before the fire — behind their neighboring building, which houses Splash.

The only difference is that now the dumpster will be hidden behind an enclosure to block it from public view.

While Barnes cited many precedents that allow restaurants to put Dumpsters on city property or other business property, he wanted to make it clear that the city would not assist the Whitneys if they lost their Dumpster

Ambassador's Award went to victims volunteers

By creating a Taste and Sounds of Charlevoix fund raising event, along with other fund raising activities, the group actually raised $300,000.

In light of the tremendous success of the group to raise money for fireworks victims, the Ambassador of the Year Award went to the Charlevoix Fireworks Victims Fund Committee.

Judy Corley took home the President's Award, given to a citizen who makes an outstanding contribution that helps the chamber accomplish projects and events that benefit the area.

Lynn DeGrow, who presented the award, said Corley has been invaluable to the operation of chamber programs during the past year. Corley devotes one day a week to the chamber office on a volunteer basis, something she's done for the last six years.

"At one time, I thought she was an employee of the chamber," DeGrow said of her regular presence at the chamber office.

Corley is active in the Charlevoix United Methodist Church by helping office staff, providing food for fund raising and funeral luncheons and by serving as backup to the financial secretary.

Corley is also a member of the Kepp Charlevoix Beautiful board and chaired this year's Christmas residential lighting contest.

Charlevoix High School receives bomb threat

By Jamie MacMillan

A week after both Charlevoix and Petoskey schools fell victim to bomb threats, the investigation into who made the calls is progressing with no suspects. However, according to Charlevoix police chief Dennis Halverson, police are looking into student involvement and "the real possibility that it is one and the same caller."

The bomb threats were both phoned into school offices during the morning hours of Wednesday, Jan. 14. Charlevoix received a call at 10:20 a.m. and Petoskey was phoned at 10:25 a.m. The proximity of times, a similarly pitched voice and similar dialogue while on the phone gave police an initial indication that both calls were made by the same party.

Despite the fact that police have little to go on in terms of eyewitnesses and identifying tracks, Halverson is confident they'll decipher who made the calls, possibly through phone records. He noted that historically the success rate for solving such crimes is high, but that "it might take a little time."

According to Halverson, whoever phoned the threat could be charged with use of a phone to make a bomb threat, a misdemeanor punishable with 90 days in jail.

Both Halverson and Charlevoix High School principal Gary Grundman said holding students in their classrooms instead of evacuating outside was not only the correct way to handle the situation, but the safest.

Grundman called 9-1-1 from his office upon hearing from an office worker that a threat had been phoned in. He then alerted teachers, who were instructed to search and secure their rooms while keeping their students inside the doors and out of the hallways.

Grundman said the school's classrooms were deemed safe five to seven minutes after the threat was made.

City and state police responded within three minutes of the 9-1-1 call, and began a locker by locker search of the school and its surrounding premises.

Halverson said having teachers sweep their own classroom is natural, as they could judge best if anything suspicious has been added to the environment. Had they chosen to evacuate the building, students would have been forced to walk through areas of the school which hadn't been secured or searched. Also, students would not have been permitted to go into their lockers so there were concerns about leaving students outside in 12 degree weather for an hour without coats, hats or gloves.

"The idea is to find a location as quick as you can that you are reasonably sure is safe while still maintaining control and limiting access to areas not checked," Halverson said.

Grundman, who as principal of the Allen Park School District in the Detroit area dealt with at least eight bomb threats, said their reaction was "cut and dry textbook." Students were alerted of the threat as soon as it was determined that the classrooms were safe. One student, leaning his head out of an open window, joked with assistant principal Keith Haske, who was walking the outer perimeter of the school, that Haske was escaping the school and leaving students behind.

"By 11:30 a.m., we were back on the task of teaching kids," Grundman said.

While the call appears to be a prank, Halverson still considers it a viable threat.

"To call it a prank is to downplay the significance of disrupting a school with 400 students and having our emergency services tied up," Halverson said. "I don't think calling it a prank does justice."

Garbage issue solved

"Is there a clear understanding that if you lose that site, it's your baby and you'll have to make your own arrangements to find a new site?" Barnes asked. "Would you be willing to sign a document stating that you understand it is your responsibility in the future?"

Whitney's attorney Dan Barron said there was indeed a clear understanding and they would sign a document to that effect.

With the garbage mess cleaned up, the council voted unanimously to approve Whitney's development plan.

In other business, the council voted to approve the purchase of a new city fire department tanker truck. The cost of the tanker truck will be about $118,876.

Recouping a tiny bit of that investment, the city voted to sell their old, 1968 fire engine to St. James Township on Beaver Island for $2,500.

Corrections

In last week's story about Francie Martin's relatives, who were aboard the Titanic, we erroneously stated that Mahala Dutton Douglas was Martin's aunt. She was actually Martin's great-aunt. Martin is obviously not old enough to be the niece of a woman who was on the Titanic. We regret the error.

What people are saying

"If you come up with an idea, you have to take ownership of it. It's for naught if people don't follow up with the work."

— John Taylor, Venetian Festival chairman, on the tendency of people to make suggestions but not volunteer to do the work required.

"I'm saying that 85 percent of the downtown merchants like the carnival."

— Bill Supernaw, owner of Cinema III, responding to Randy Carey's claim that 80 percent of the downtown merchants don't want the carnival.

"He was way ahead of his time. Other people couldn't even grasp his ideas."

— Former wife Jacqueline Merta, talking about her late husband, Tom Merta.

"I like it the way it is. I'd never blow $11,000 to change it."

— Mayor Josh Barnes, on the new city fire truck, which is currently painted lime green. A cost estimate for a new paint job was $11,000.

Tom Merta brought joy to all who knew him

By Laurie Lounsbury

With some people, it's easy to remember their face, but hard to recall their name.

That was never the case with Tom Merta.

The perpetual grin on his face, the amusing anecdotes he freely shared and his exuberant personality made it impossible to forget anything about Tom.

Although Tom died Dec. 30, he will be remembered for years to come. His work and his personality left an indelible stamp on Charlevoix.

Like a friendly virus, Tom was extremely infectious. Anyone who came in contact with him was immediately caught up with his laughter and quick wit.

"He had a fabulous sense of humor," said longtime friend Paul Keiswetter. "He was just hilarious."

Tom's sense of humor was rivaled only by his ability to succeed in business. Shortly after finishing school at North Central Michigan College, Tom and a few friends opened a Petoskey restaurant called The XIII Commandment.

"Before any of us had enough money to buy a hamburger, he owned a restaurant," Keiswetter said.

An excellent salesman, Sorbonne-trained artist and entrepreneur, Tom dabbled in many ventures in northern Michigan. He worked in sales and marketing for the Petoskey News-Review and subsequent publications for the United States Ski Association.

"The great thing about Tom was that he could sit down with a client and draw an ad on the spot," said friend Mike Harrington.

Tom's sociability and extroverted nature led him to his position as the Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce executive director.

It was at a New Year's Eve dinner party at the Weatherlane Restaurant when former owner George Richardson approached Tom and told him the chamber of commerce director position was going to be vacated and that Tom would be perfect for the job.

"That's how we ended up in Charlevoix," his former wife, Jacqueline Merta, said. "Just talking to people at the Weatherlane on New Year's Eve."

With seemingly limitless energy, Tom tackled many projects as the chamber director. During his tenure from 1971-73, he created the chamber of commerce spring and fall dinner dances, biannual flea markets and the Lake Charlevoix Bicycle Tour, which became one of the biggest biking events in the state.

Merta

was responsible for promoting Charlevoix as a French seaside village. The theme caught on, and resulted in three condominiums in town taking French names — La Havre, La Croft and Chez Charlevoix.

Finding a perfect outlet for his creative talents, Tom opened a printing and design business, Village Graphics (now Kwikie Duplating). His logos are still seen around town, such as the city of Charlevoix logo and the Charlevoix Public School logo.

"Tom Merta was always out there on the first wave," Keiswetter said. "He was very creative, and he always had something going. If you lived in northern Michigan prior to 1996 and you were able to make a living, you really had to have something going for you."

But it is Tom's exuberance for life that we will remember most. With a countenance like a perpetually happy pooch, Tom turned mishaps and misadventures into fodder for amusing stories.

"There was no such thing as a bad time with Tom," said old friend and business partner Kirk Schaller. "He made everything funny."

Jacqueline Merta would agree. "He could always get you out of a bad mood, he was so funny," Jacqueline said.

"With Tom, there was always something to look forward to."

Frost home destroyed by fire

It was not Al Frost's prized log cabin on Lake Charlevoix, but the original home next door to it that was completely consumed in a blaze Friday night.

Frost, who owns two homes on Lake Charlevoix's South Arm, was in his log cabin home on Sleepy Hollow Lane waiting for renters when he saw his home next door catch on fire.

At 6:55 p.m. Friday, Jan. 16, the East Jordan Fire Department responded to Frost's phone call. The East Jordan Fire Department was assisted by the Charlevoix Township Fire Department and the City of Charlevoix Fire Department in battling the blaze, which lasted until 1:30 a.m. Saturday.

"It was a long one," East Jordan fire chief said of the fire. The fire fighting process was made even longer by the home's location at the end of a steep, narrow dirt road. The road wasn't wide enough for two fire trucks to pass one another. As a result, tanker trucks couldn't enter the road from M-66 until one at the scene departed.

"It definitely hampered us," Thorman said.

The dry hydrant at Ironton was also no help to the fire department, who couldn't get any water out of the hydrant that accesses Lake Charlevoix.

"They had a problem with that hydrant last year with zebra mus-

EDITH

By Edith Gilbert

EDITH GILBERT

To my devoted readers, who are not yet computer literate, you too may find yourself subscribing to the Internet, after you read the following stories about three people who are experienced on-line.

Let's begin with my California nephew, Walter Smith, and his 9-year-old son, Christopher. While waiting their turn in the barber shop, there was a man seated nearby, reading a newspaper. Christopher glanced over the man's shoulder. Good naturedly, he turned to the boy and said, "Would you like to read the comics?"

"No, thank you. I'd like to read the business section."

When Walter laughingly repeated the story, he explained that the whole family, including Christopher, taps into the thousands of financial sites now on the Interments, what this next generation is going to achieve!

A few days later we came across another user of the Internet. Gary Osterbeck, former sales and marketing executive, has recently traced his family's lineage using the computer software program called Family Tree Maker. He has accumulated Osterbeck family history dating back to the 1500's. This successful search has become one of the highlights in his life.

The real excitement first began when he posted a note with the German Genealogy news group on Usenet News. A young librarian named Birgit Tenter came across the message, contacted Osterbeck and offered her help. It turns out that Tenter's mother was from the same town as the Osterbecks, which is located just north of the Ruhr Valley. She sent both civil and Lutheran church records, along with maps from a 1830 census, that surprisingly showed a pink shaded area called the Oesterbeckhof. The Osterbecks (this was the original spelling) formerly owned a 136-acre farm, which today is a horse breeding farm with boarding stables, owned by Karl Koch, whose great-great-grandfather purchased the farm from Osterbecks'.

Still, can you imagine, when 9-year-olds cruise the Internet, follow market fluctuations and pick invest-great-great-grandfather in the middle of 1800.

Last fall, when the Osterbecks vacationed in Europe, they spent a memorable day visiting with cousins, with Birgit, and with the Koch family. At a lively family reunion, they celebrated with a tray of champagne, which was decorated with German and American flags. You can count on it, there are still more reunions and toasts with shouts of "Prosit!" planned for the near future.

Osterbeck believes that with the power of the Internet and today's technology, one can learn about anything and everything in this wide world, including the fascinating information of who one is and where one came from.

Finally we spoke to a third enthusiastic user of the Internet, Dr. Bill Jerome, a practicing dentist. He readily acknowledges what fun he is now having planning his forthcoming 10th wedding anniversary trip with wife, Diane.

Using the Web page, he connected to Netscape on his computer. He was able to see photographs, study maps and read descriptions of places the couple wanted to visit. Jerome spent a weekend faxing questions regarding room rates, service, meals, tour information and in return, received faxed confirmations for reservations to Le Cagnard, a 14th century residence, near Nice, in Cagnes sur Mer, overlooking the Mediterranean.

From Cagnes sur Mer the couple plan to take day trips and explore Antibes, St. Tropez, and Monaco. They will visit the Picasso Museum and Renoir's home. When not sightseeing, they will enjoy the beaches and fine restaurants in the area.

In addition to making room reservations, Jerome was also able to determine flight schedules on the Internet. He decided to fly with Northwest Airlines, from Traverse City, via Detroit and Amsterdam, to Nice. He preferred to make his reservations, however, through the Andrew Kan Travel Agency.

Jerome is also able to keep track of the currency exchange rates via Internet. Using "bookmarks" on his computer, with a simple click, he is able to recall any and all information regarding this proposed once-in-a-lifetime trip.

It certainly is challenging to learn from our Charlevoix friends the variety of interests one may pursue with this absorbing new technology.

West." Their convincing victory in California vindicated the Big 10's humiliating losses suffered by Michigan State, Ohio State and Pennsylvania State.

C'mon, Laurie. Join the many Michigan alumni in Charlevoix and hand it to "the conquering heroes." And next December please act a little more like a responsible newspaper editor.

Pooches will bring more money to Charlevoix County

New animal control laws mean more local power for animal officer

By Jamie MacMillan

With a new animal control ordinance, county officials are hoping to give their animal control officer a greater scope of control. Part of that control includes allowing fines to be collected at the county level and to update present statutes left untouched since 1919.

"It'll make citations a little bit stronger," animal control officer Julie Whitley said of the pending legislation. "There are a lot of inconsiderate people out there, and now we can issue citations and get them into court."

The ordinance will be scrutinized through a public hearing during the county commissioners' next meeting at 7 p.m. Wednesday, Jan. 28.

The new laws pave the way for dogs and their owners to be penalized for dogs running at large, creating a menace by biting a person or simply excessive barking and destroying property.

Penalties include 90 days in the county jail, a $100 fine and impoundment of the dog. In extreme cases, the ordinance allows for euthanizing dogs.

The ordinance also places restrictions on poultry and livestock owners from having their animals running loose, which previously had not been addressed. The ordinance doesn't include anything about cats and Whitley said in the future she would like to see tougher standards in place for cruelty cases.

In addition to giving more teeth to the control officer, the county is expected to see increased revenues with the new laws. As it stands, Whitley works as a state agent, writing tickets that violate state statutes, with any fines levied collected by the state.

With a county ordinance, "it is expected that 100 percent of fines levied would be collected by the county and for the county. Whitley guessed she wrote 50 "dogs running at large" tickets in 1997, a $50 misdemeanor. That's a possible $3,000 funneled to the state, that county officials would rather see going into the county coffers to be used for animal education programs.

"It's time to start getting some of the money back," said Phil Johnson, chairman of the Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners.

Other financial aspects of the laws require dog owners to license their animals by March 1 of every year at a cost of $6, reduced to $3 should the dog be spayed or neutered. The license fee increases to $12 if an owner fails to get a license before March 1. The ordinance also calls for a $6 daily fee for impoundment as well as a $15 pick-up fee for dogs caught running at large. That fee increases to $20 for the second offense, and a third offense could lead to official prosecution.

"We don't want fees to go too high so people don't pick up their animals," Johnson said. "We don't want to price people out of their pets."

An interesting part of the legislation is that it officially updates antiquated laws written in 1919 that have been left relatively untouched. For example, still on the books is the provision that requires a dog census conducted after June 1 of every year. Afterward, the sheriff's office is supposed to then go on a "search and destroy" mission to euthanize all unlicensed dogs.

"It's hard to understand and want to enforce any policy that makes you kill dogs if they're unlicensed," Whitley said.

After a public hearing, county commissioners are expected to vote on the laws next Wednesday.

Country J. Middleton, the son of Samantha Hibbler, of Charlevoix, has joined the United States Army under the Delayed Entry program at the U.S. Army Recruiting Station in Petoskey.

The program gives young men or women the opportunity to delay enlistment into the Army for up to one year before reporting to basic military training.

The enlistment gives the new soldier the option to learn a new skill, travel and become eligible to receive as much as $40,000 toward a college education. After completion of basic training, soldiers receive advanced individual training in their career specialty.

Middleton, a 1995 graduate of Charlevoix High School, will report to Fort Leonard Wood, Waynesville, Mo., for basic training Jan. 22, 1998.

Dispute resolution board adds two new members

Two people have joined the Board of Directors for the Citizens Dispute Resolution Services which serves Emmet and Charlevoix Counties.

Joining the board are Gail Grunwald of Harbor Springs, the Executive Director of the Tip of the Mitt Watershed Council, and Marilyn Hall of Charlevoix, a former State Court Administrator.

"We're fortunate to add two people with such strong backgrounds in the legal system," says CDRS President Murray Kilgour. "They will be able to provide some valuable insight as we continue to fulfill our mission."

The CDRS is a not-for-profit organization which provides mediation services as an alternative to court for individuals, businesses

Obituaries

Thomas E. Merta

Former Charlevoix resident Thomas E. Merta, 55, died of cancer at Medical City in Dallas, Texas Dec. 30, 1997.

A memorial mass was held Tuesday, Jan. 20 at St. Mary's Catholic church in Charlevoix.

Tom was born in Detroit Sept. 30, 1942, the son of Sophie Angeline (Kozlowski) and Edwin George Merta. He graduated from Lee M. Thurston High School in 1960. He attended Northwood Institute, North Central Michigan College and graduated with a degree in business management. He also attended the University of Paris, la Sorbonne, in Paris, France.

Tom began his advertising and marketing career in Petoskey in 1967 selling for Albert Schaller at the Petoskey News-Review and was promoted to other Schaller publications, the Otsego County Herald-Times and Central Skiland (USSA publication).

Tom's creativity and entrepreneurial spirit led to ownership in several businesses. His business interests started with The XIII Commandment, a restaurant in Petoskey established by Tom and college friends while attending NCMC. His next venture was Chippewa Totem Village in St. Ignace, which he owned while managing Central Skiland.

Tom made Charlevoix his home from 1971 to 1986. Tom and his former wife, Jacqueline Collins Merta, with their son, Thomas Jr., moved to Charlevoix when he accepted the position as Executive Director of the Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce. During his tenure, Tom's enthusiasm and ideas resulted in many new and exciting projects and expanded business for Charlevoix. He was responsible for promoting the "French Seaside Village" theme for the city of Charlevoix, and as a result, condominiums took French names — Le Havre, La Croft and Chez Charlevoix.

BEACONS

Beacons of Blessing
By Rev. Bruce Hamilton

It never ceases to amaze me how the Lord can arrange opportunities to minister in totally unexpected ways and places. I was in Wal-Mart picking up a few necessities. Several times, while trekking down different aisles, I passed a young mother and her newborn baby. I didn't really think much about it at the time but I even ended up right behind her in the check-out line.

I was busily loading my dog food and diet sodas in the trunk when I heard this voice calling me. "Sir, oh sir!" I suppose at 47 I am officially a "sir" but I do feel kind of old when someone says that. Anyway, I looked toward the voice and it was this young mother I had seen in the store. In her haste to get her baby out of the cold and to load her own items in her car, she had set her purse and keys down on the front seat and without thinking about what doors were locked or unlocked, proceeded to lock them all with her baby inside. "What should I do? What should I do?" she said in a mild panic.

I told her not to worry and took her back inside where we called 911 and asked for a police officer to come out with their car-opening tool. She was so worried about the baby that we walked back out to the car to wait, and all the while I talked to her about other things.

When I asked her about her husband, she said that they had met in church. I happened to say praise the Lord to that and she said, "You know the Lord? Isn't He wonderful? That explains why I turned to you for help." I saw the police car before she did and waved him down. He had her into her car with her baby in short order. "I can't tell you how much you being here meant to me." I told her I'd hope that someone would be there for my wife if she needed help, and after all that was what God's family was for. There are moments in our daily walk that can catch us totally unaware. Where all was calm and bright, suddenly things can become dark and fearful — unless you remember who it is that shares all of life's journey with you. When you listen, really listen to the words of Jesus, his assurance can banish the darkness and remind us all that we never need lose the light of His love.

Jesus said, "Let not your hearts be troubled. Ye believe in God believe also in me. In my Father's house are many mansions. If it were not so, I would have told you." If anyone understands what the stress and panic of life are like, it's Jesus. He's been through every human experience you can imagine from disappointment and heartbreak to triumph and success. It is because He has been through it all that you can take Him at His word and know that you will get through it all too.

It's easy to "gear up" for a difficult moment when you know it's on the horizon. It can be tougher when it takes you by surprise. Just like He had me at the parking lot to help that young mom in distress, He'll have someone there for you if you take Him at His word. For that matter, don't be surprised if you end up being there for someone else! After all, we are family and if we can't help each other... what's God's family for?

In 1960, Mr. Miller built and launched "My Paula," a 20-foot cabin cruiser named after his loving wife of 36 years, Paula Ballou Miller. His meticulous care of his vintage wooden "pride and joy" epitomized his perfectionist nature. Mr. Miller's craftsmanship also brought joy to those around him. He reveled in building models — cars, airplanes, boats — for his children and grandchildren, and he took great pleasure in helping his family and friends put the finishing touches on their home renovations.

He saved his biggest and most impressive project for last. After retiring from Detroit Edison in 1987, following 39 years of dedicated service as an electrician, he built his dream house from the ground up on the shores of Lake Charlevoix.

Mr. Miller died in his beloved home Thursday, Jan. 15, following a lengthy bout with cancer. He was 68 years old.

Mr. Miller was reared by Luther and Helen Miller in Fern-dale, Mich. After attending Fern-dale High School, he enlisted in the U.S. Navy where he served as chief mess cook. Following his naval tour of duty, he began a long, industrious career at Detroit Edison. In 1991, he was recipient of the prestigious Alex Dow Award for "Innovative design and leadership."

Mr. Miller also had numerous hobbies. An accomplished private pilot, he was thrilled to be a member of the Charlevoix Soaring Club, where he served as treasurer. He also enjoyed building and flying remote-controlled model airplanes, fishing, snow skiing and boating — especially sailing. In addition, Mr. Miller was a member of Christ Episcopal Church in Charlevoix.

Mr. Miller is survived by his wife, Paula; mother, Helen Miller; children, Dawn Bodo, Joan Wafer, Audrey Allison, Rich Swenson and Carl Swenson; brothers Donald and Thomas Miller; 11 grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

The funeral service was Saturday, Jan. 17 at Christ Episcopal Church in Charlevoix. The Rev. Lander Carter officiated. Burial services followed at St. Mary's Cemetery in Charlevoix.

Donations on Mr. Miller's behalf can be made to the Charlevoix County Hospice in care of the Winchester Funeral Home in Charlevoix.

June Marie Peters

June Marie Peters, 93, of Charlevoix, died Jan. 17, 1998, at her home. She was born Sept. 1, 1904, in Roxann Township, Eaton County, Mich., the daughter of Carson Day and Clara Elita (Bishop) Moyer. She was raised in Charlotte and graduated from Charlotte High School in 1922. She then received a Life Certificate from Ypsilanti Normal College (now Eastern Michigan University).

On June 22, 1926, she married Dewitt B. Peters in Charlotte, Mich. They moved to Charlevoix in 1945, where they owned and operated the Turkey Wing Restaurant for 20 years, retiring in 1966. Mr. Peters preceded her in death on Feb. 20, 1987.

She is survived by her son, Armand L. Peters, of Charlevoix; grandsons, Anthony John Peters and Kevin Lee and his wife, Kathy Peters, all of Wyoming, Mich.; six great-grandchildren; and a sister, Julia M. Shaw of Middleville, Mich.

Memorial contributions may be made to Hospice of Little Traverse Bay, 416 Connable, Petoskey, MI 49770. Interment will be in Maple Hill Cemetery in Charlotte, Mich. There will be no services. Arrangements are being handled by the Winchester Funeral Home in Charlevoix.

Ann L. Antinossi

Ann L. Antinossi of Charlevoix and formerly of Norwood, died Jan. 18, 1998, at Boulevard Park Terrace Nursing Home in Charlevoix.

Funeral service will be at 11 a.m. Thursday, Jan. 22 at St. Mary's Catholic Church in Charlevoix. The Rev. Thomas Neis will officiate. Burial will take place in St. Mary's Cemetery in Charlevoix.

She was born in Bay City to Oswald Hafdean and Jennie Mary Margaret (Jackson) Lund.

Mrs. Antinossi is survived by her son, Nicolas Antinossi, of Ellsworth, and by Ziaja and her husband, Henry, of Dearborn; Alexis Donnelly and her husband, Thomas, of Charlevoix; Dominique Havens and her husband, Christopher, of Charlevoix; and Bouy Chusid and her husband, Sheldon, of Romulus. Mrs. Antinossi is also survived by 16 grandchildren; one great-grandchild; a brother, William D. Lund and his wife, Jean, of Fayetteville, N.C.; sister, Kathleen Bleicher and her husband, Jay, of Essexville, Mich.; and by one sister-in-law, Elaine Lund, of Marshall, Mich.

She was preceded in death by her husband, Armand; son, Andre; and daughter-in-law, Marcella.

Friends may call from 2-4 p.m. and 7-9 p.m. Wednesday, Jan. 21, with a rosary at 8 p.m. at Winchester Funeral Home in Charlevoix.

The family suggests memorial contributions be made to the Salvation Army.

Blame it on El Nino — veggies are pricey

By Jamie MacMillan

In order to get their daily supply of vegetables in their diet, consumers have been paying — in some cases — triple the normal prices for greens at grocery stores.

A combination of extraordinary weather circumstances has led to the increase in prices. Growing areas in the U.S. Southwest such as Yuma, Arizona were blanketed with 12 days of frost last month, where typically the area would see one or two days of frost all winter. California and Florida, meanwhile, have been deluged with rain so much that November, 1997 has been labeled the wettest month in central California history, according to the National Weather Service.

Such conditions have wreaked havoc on crop size and quality, leaving consumers paying between two and three times as much for vegetables, according to John Wood, a buyer at Besteman's Produce, a distributor in Grand Rapids.

"It's really been a double whammy," he said. "Demand peaks with the holidays, but with the lack of availability it's really affected pricing."

For local grocers it has not gone unnoticed. "Every year there is something in the weather causing a problem, but it gets corrected in a matter of weeks," said Susan Shepperly, produce manager at Glen's. "This year it has been more of an ongoing situation."

Don Haney of Don's I.G.A. said that "80 percent" remains within decent price ranges, but other items, such as asparagus at $5.99 a pound are "sky high."

Among the hardest hit has been lettuce, which can be bought for 99 cents a head, but has peaked as high as $1.89. A grocer can expect to buy a case of lettuce for between $12 and $15, but Haney reported that during a recent shipment a case of lettuce cost $34.

Broccoli, normally 89 cents a stalk, has been priced between $1.29 and $1.69 during recent weeks. A head of cauliflower will cost $3.99, up a full dollar from normal prices. Red and yellow bell peppers are at least a dollar higher than normal at $6.99 a pound, while individual green peppers are being sold between 25-50 cents more than usual. Tomatoes are $2.99 a pound instead of $1.79.

Woods said that in some cases the tomato crop was further devastated by growers' utilization of a high-tech seed which doesn't require water to bud. With the record rains, the seed designed to help during drought conditions mostly perished.

"We'll be fine if the weather breaks, but if the weather out there remains lousy our problem will be just stocking our shelves, not prices," Haney said.

Many do expect the price pattern to improve for the consumer by the end of January. Climates have steadied the last few weeks, but it takes time before it affects the prices. Woods warned of a yo-yo effect on vegetable prices.

Prices skyrocket due to simple supply and demand, come down slightly with improved conditions, only to climb again as consumers rush the veggies off the shelf. Supply is already diminished, he said, and only will be high for a limited time, then prices will rise again. Since prices began higher than normal, they could surpass levels which, Shepperly noted, caused in some situations the highest they've been in her 11 years handling produce.

Rayders claim first victory of the season

By Jamie MacMillan

Using a variety of well-placed scoring spurts, the Charlevoix Rayders hested Kalkaska 86-74 for their first win of the basketball season.

The Rayders dropped their first seven games of the season, and the trend was slow starts which forced the club to play catch-up just to stay in the hall game.

Not a problem against Kalkaska, as Charlevoix seized the lead midway through the first quarter and never relinquished it throughout the game.

"Defensively, we were a lot better," coach Keith Haske said. "We put on more pressure, created more steals, and we seemed to be coming up with more loose balls."

"It was a tremendous team effort on both offense and defense."

At the outset, it appeared that trend of being behind early would continue as Kalkaska blazed to a quick 7-1 lead. The Rayders wasted no time and shot-off an 8-0 run on three-pointers from Jim Kanine and Matt McClellan for a two point lead.

After Kalkaska tied the score and regained the lead, Charlevoix then scored nine consecutive points, four from Kanine, en route to a 20-16 advantage after one quarter.

The Rayders started the second quarter with a 7-0 run with five points from Justin Thorp. The run extended their lead to 11 points, a margin that remained through much of the game going as high as 15 midway through the third quarter and as low as six, when Kalkaska huried a jumper to end the third quarter with a 63-57 score.

Charlevoix, though, saved their best and most decisive scoring run for last. With their lead in jeopardy, they began the fourth quarter with an 17-3 run that hallooned their lead to 80-60 with just four minutes in the game.

"When we're playing the style of hall I like, that's how it goes," Haske said of the scoring outburst. "A spurt here, a spurt there, and one of those spurts usually ends the game."

Kanine and Colin Carr led six Rayders in double figures with 15 points apiece. Thorp, McClellan and Sean Stockman each had 12, Brian Ward scored ten, and Tom Cunningham pitched in nine, nearly becoming the seventh Rayder in double figures.

"I was pretty impressed," Haske said of the balance. "My philosophy is, it's across the board, and that scoring can come from anybody."

Thorp gathered in 10 of the team's 31 rebounds and Carr swiped five of the club's 15 steals. Carr also dished out five assists and Kanine dished out four.

The Rayders, playing at home for the third time in eight starts, had their most-accurate night of the season, shooting just over 50 percent, making 31 of 60 attempts. Kalkaska shot 44 percent, making 23 of 52. For the first time this year, the Rayders had the advantage on the foul line, making 17 of 28 versus 8 of 15 for Kalkaska.

The Rayders look to continue their winning ways this week in rematches of earlier contests. They played at a highly-touted Petoskey on Tuesday.

The squad is at home Friday, Jan. 23 against the Whitmore-Prescott Cardinals. The Cardinals are coached by former Charlevoix resident and varsity girl's basketball coach Joe Powers. A junior varsity game tips-off the action at 6 p.m.

Above: Rayder forward Justin Thorp muscles to the hoop for an easy lay-up. In the Rayders 12 point win, Thorp registered his second straight double-double with 12 points and 10 rebounds. Front page: Matt McClellan arches his body to get this shot up to the hoop. (Photos by Jamie MacMillan)

Lady Rayders aim for top division spot

By Jamie MacMillan

The Rayder volleyball team will take a break from conference play this week with a road game against Central Lake, but their eyes will be focused on an early season showdown for the top spot in the Lake Michigan Division next Monday, Jan. 26 against East Jordan.

Both clubs entered this week's play undefeated in league contests. Charlevoix stands 4-0 after last week's 15-10, 15-3, 15-5 win over Kalkaska. The Rayders have already bested Boyne City, Traverse City St. Francis and Elk Rapids.

East Jordan stands at 3-0 with wins over Boyne City, Harbor Springs and Kalkaska. Everybody else in the league has at least one loss. While the Rayders will warm-up for the tussle with non-conference foe Central Lake (6 p.m., Thursday, Jan. 22), the Red Devils have a league game against Elk Rapids to stay focused on before the "big" game.

For Brenda Bryan's Rayder club, the showdown comes just as the team is beginning to round into shape.

"I've been impressed with our play," Bryan said. "We're playing more as a group, talking a lot, and picking up the ball better."

The team has had trouble with their serving, but in the sweep of Kalkaska the problem was solved.

Lyndsey Blechel and Carrie Blanchard each served three aces, and Bryan noted that Blechel missed just one serve the entire match.

"As a team, we just had a lot more focus when we were serving."

While the game was not their best on the defensive side, they employed an interesting strategy when countering the Blue Blazers' spikers. Early in the game, Kalkaska had trouble landing their returns in bounds, so the Rayders time and time again let the ball bounce rather than return their hit until Kalkaska became consistent enough to warrant longer volleys of play.

Amanda Eaton led the offense with four kills, followed by Jamie Gowell, three, and Ann Spang, two. The battle for first place against East Jordan begins with a junior varsity game at 6 p.m. Monday, Jan. 26. The match will be at Charlevoix.

Rayder wrestling team small but mighty

By Jamie MacMillan

Joe Johnston's young but improving Rayder wrestling squad will make their third and final appearance at home, grappling with Kalkaska 6:30 p.m. Thursday, Jan. 22 in the Charlevoix High School gymnasium.

The Rayders still don't have enough wrestlers to enter every weight class, so chances of a team victory are slim. If recent results are any indicator, though, the grapplers should will wear the maroon and white should do more than hold their own.

In three meets over the last two weeks, for example, Charlevoix junior James Pop, who is 5-0 in the 171-pound weight class, defeated wrestlers from Mesick, Cheboygan, St. Ignace, Kalkaska and Benzie Central. He has three pins during that span and one victory where he trailed by two points, but in the last 30 seconds reversed positions and flipped his opponent onto his back for five points and eventual victory.

"He's really turned the corner," Johnson said of Pop. "He's being aggressive, more determined to win, and he obviously doesn't give up on a match early."

During that same time span Ryan Novotny won three tussles, Robert Torres, two, and Ben Macks, one.

While the team finished third in tri-meets with Cheboygan/St. Ignace and Kalkaska/Benzie Central, they wrestled to a tie with Mesick, behind wins from Pop, Torres, and Novotny. Much like Charlevoix, Mesick fields a team with low numbers and couldn't fill out their entire roster.

"I wish we had some more people, but the ones we have are getting a lot of experience under their belts," Johnson said.

Flying to the forefront

Middle school skiers started their racing season with a six-school meet at Nub's Nob last Thursday.

The Northwest Academy boys' team flew to a second place finish overall, with Roscoe Serrels taking third, York Smith, ninth, Trevor Kline, 18th and Brad Long, 28th.

The Charlevoix Middle School boys' team took fourth place overall, with Chad Johnson in 10th place, Lee Barrett, 19th, Eric Meier, 29th and Taylor Fisher, 36th.

The girls' team, comprised of three sixth graders and one seventh grader, took sixth place overall, with Anna Trubilowicz in 35th place, Lindsey Miller, 41st, Sam Kupka, 68th and Brooke Blanchard, 72nd.

Little League meeting planned for parents will be eight years old or older before Aug. 1 and is interested in playing Little League, your attendance is important. The upcoming

The teen center is located at 208 W. Lincoln St. in Charlevoix.

SCRAPBOOK

Deputies doing fancy footwork in Eveline Twp.

The Charlevoix Sheriff's department spent the better part of the afternoon on foot Wednesday, Jan. 14, tracking a fleeing man who was suspected of stealing firewood on Holy Island.

The police officer responding to a 9-1-1 call found a vehicle that met the description given by a witness departing Holy Island Road near M-66. The vehicle was stopped by the officer. As the officer approached the vehicle, the passenger bolted from the truck and ran into the nearby woods.

The officer placed the driver, Michael John Dionne, 24, of Charlevoix, under arrest and called for backup units to search for the fleeing suspect.

Additional officers from the sheriff's office were joined by officers from the East Jordan Police Department and officers from the Department of Natural Resources. They tracked Michael David Grutsch, 24, for about two hours.

Assistance was also provided by a local citizen who provided the officers with a snowmobile to help with the search. Without that assistance, the search would have taken considerably longer and Grutsch might have escaped.

Grutsch was finally found and taken into custody, charged with larceny under $100 and attempted resisting and obstructing a police officer. There was also a warrant out of Sanilac County for Friend of the Court for Grutsch. Additional charges are pending from a separate investigation.

Dionne was charged with larceny under $100. He was sentenced to three days in jail and was released Jan. 16.

Grutsch, who lives on Dutchman's Bay Road in East Jordan, posted bond of $300.

Also in Eveline Township, the sheriff's department arrested two Charlevoix residents for invading homes. Michael Shawn Bathrick, 23, and Cecelia Jeanette Bennett, 26, were arrested for entering a residence during the daytime on Jan. 15 and stealing approximately $100 in coins and a glass piggy bank. Deputies tracked one suspect through the snow and obtained footwear evidence. Deputies then checked with a local bank the following morning and learned that the money had just been deposited into an account.

The deputies got a search warrant for the residence of the suspect and searched it the following day. Evidence was recovered from the home on State Street.

The deputies then found the suspects in an East Jordan restaurant and arrested them.

Both have been formally charged with home invasion, second degree, a 15-year felony. Bond has been set by the 90th District Court and both remain lodged in the Charlevoix County Jail.

Bathrick was also arrested on a warrant from the Michigan State Police in Gladwin County for home invasion and safe breaking.

He also admitted to being involved in other home invasions in Charlevoix County.

Sharing ideas

Venetian Festival forum prompted over 100 people to express their views

By Laurie Lounsbury

Those who came to gripe quickly found themselves working on solutions for a better Venetian Festival at the community forum, conducted Tuesday, Jan. 20, by National Cherry Festival director Tom Kern.

The forum gave Charlevoix citizens a chance to voice their concerns. It also prompted them to come up with solutions to chronic Venetian Festival problems.

And when it was all said and done, long lists of new ideas were posted throughout the room.

Kern guided the group of more than 100 people through the process of evaluating the Venetian Festival, for both its positive attributes and its negative impact.

On the plus side, the tradition of friends and families gathering at the festival ranked as an important element of the festival.

"It sounds like this festival is a big family party for everyone who's lived here or grown up here," Kern said.

On the minus side, the downtown location of the carnival and traffic congestion were considered negative elements of the event.

The fireworks display was considered both a positive and negative element of Venetian Festival.

It was last year's fireworks explosion, which killed one person and injured many others, that prompted the Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce to host the community forum.

The general sentiment expressed by those who attended the forum was that the fireworks display is a very popular feature of the Venetian Festival, but safety precautions must be exercised if the town is to host another fireworks show.

"You can learn from a tragedy, you don't necessarily have to run from it," Kern said, responding to suggestions that fireworks be canceled next year.

Chamber of commerce board member Gary Anderson agreed.

"I think it would be a disaster (for the festival) not to have fireworks," Anderson said.

Suggestions made for a future fireworks display included following the national guidelines for safety, having a qualified person run-

People who attended the Venetian Festival forum were asked to put a sticker beside the things they liked most and least about the festival. ning the display, having sufficient emergency responders available, having appropriate insurance policies in place, and moving the staging area to a safer place.

School board mulls land options in private

By Jamie MacMillan

Despite concluding each of their last three meetings with closed sessions to hash out a future facility plan, the Charlevoix Board of Education is no closer to securing land for a new school than they were last June. In the June millage election, voters gave a thumbs-down to a proposed site on M-66 across the street from Castle Farms.

Conversations with board members indicate that familiar problems are plaguing the planning — the board is unimpressed about their land options and they have yet to settle exactly what kind of school building needs to be built.

So far, the board has targeted their queries on a quartet of land choices: a series of small lots on May Street, an eight-acre lot lodged between Division Street and U.S. 31, three parcels totaling 54 acres of triangular-shaped land bordered by Mercer and Waller Roads and U.S. 31, and 40 acres along Old Orchard Road across from Stroud Hall.

"There is no easy and evident piece of land out there," board member Larry Levengood said. "Every piece has drawbacks to it."

For example, soil reports show the larger pieces to be wet with high water tables which could make future building a challenge. According to one board member there was concern over the "triangle" property's distance from downtown. The Division Street property was deemed too small to build a school by some board members.

Board member Barney Way confirmed that the search into the May Street properties hit a roadblock because property owners weren't interested in selling.

Way labeled the search a big struggle and hinted that it might be feasible to revisit the M-66 land.

Levengood said it was wrong to go back to M-66 and suggested that the board rate the properties they've looked at to determine which one is the best choice.

Forum results will help chamber move forward with festival

Former mayor Dave Novotny said the group should consider the importance of a fireworks display in relation to the overall success of a Venetian Festival.

"Does that bring people into town and does it keep them here?" Novotny asked.

Other aspects of the festival discussed at the forum were: traffic and pedestrian congestion, the boat and street parade, the carnival and its location downtown, the lack of events geared for teens and excessive alcohol consumption on land and water.

While the overwhelming majority of people at the forum were opposed to a downtown carnival, the fact that the carnival makes money for the chamber of commerce couldn't be overlooked.

"The carnival brings in $30-$40,000 for the chamber to fund the festival," Kern told the audience.

If the carnival is moved or eliminated, other sources of funding must be considered.

"Most everything we do does have a price tag," said John Taylor, festival chairman. "If you get down to the nitty-gritty and want to add things to the festival, you have to come up with more money."

Getting corporate sponsors is one possibility of funding the festival, but it has its drawbacks, Kern said.

"If you're going to do the corporate sponsor dance, you've got to be willing to pay the price of commercialization," Kern said. The idea of a commercial product or name attached to the festival wasn't palatable to most people.

At the end of the forum, Kern explained that he will take all of the information presented at the forum back to his office and compile it into a readable document.

"The board can utilize the document to move this event forward," Kern said.

Board president Steve Andrae was pleased with the forum's success.

"This has been more powerful and more creative than anybody imagined," Andrae said.

Fixing the festival problems

For every negative problem with Venetian Festival, a positive solution was recommended at the Venetian Forum, hosted last week by the chamber of commerce.

The results brought forth the following suggestions and ideas.

— Problem: Safety and location of fireworks.

Solutions: Hire a professional and shoot fireworks from one of the following locations; top of Mt. McSaubia, a barge on Lake Charlevoix, Old Island near the Coast Guard Station, or Lake Michigan Beach. Other possibilities were to eliminate the fireworks display and substitute a laser light show or a bigger electrical boat parade.

— Problem: Car, pedestrian and boat congestion downtown and in Round Lake.

Solutions: Create more pedestrian crossing areas; reroute traffic one-way north on Bridge Street and one-way south on State Street during the festival; post a sign asking boats going through the Pine River Channel to lower their antennae (so the bridge wouldn't have to be open as much); have more auxiliary officers directing traffic flow; have more patrol boats in Round Lake; or limit the number of anchored boats in Round Lake.

— Problem: Location of carnival.

Solutions: Move carnival outside of the central business district, with possible sites being any of the three schools; eliminate the carnival altogether; upgrade the carnival to a more tasteful attraction; create alternative entertainment for traditional carnival attendees.

— Problem: Quality of the street and boat parades.

Solutions for the street parade: Get corporate sponsors to attract more floats — dentists, lawyers, accountants, doctors, or bankers could each sponsor a float. Develop a new theme every year, with entrants following the theme. Have a queen and a king of the Venetian Festival. Eliminate political entries. Try to draw more hands and have a larger reviewing stand downtown.

Solutions for the boat parade: Expand the categories of boats that can enter; get corporate sponsors; have better lighting on the boats; and ask other area yacht clubs to participate.

— Problem: Lack of teen activities during the festival.

Solutions: Get input from school teens about what they'd like to see at the festival; have more sports activities, such as a volleyball tournament or 3-on-3 basketball tournament; have the performing arts team put on a show; bring in a motivational speaker for teens; set up a skateboard half-pipe for demonstrations or competition; have afternoon concerts in the park geared for students.

— Problem: Excessive alcohol consumption during the festival.

Solutions: Hire private security and additional water patrol to enforce drinking laws; ask businesses not to serve minors or people who are already inebriated; adopt a zero tolerance policy on the water; don't allow open beverage containers on public property; advertise the festival as a zero tolerance event.

Change in pool policy leaves kids out of the swim

Unless adults get in the water

By Laurie Lounsbury

Just when the new pool was gaining popularity in the community, the Charlevoix Community Pool abruptly changed their policy for parents and swimmers who are in the elementary or middle school age group.

A new policy, which went into effect this month, requires all elementary school students to be accompanied in the water by an adult.

Middle school students must have a parent or adult accompany them to the pool and remain on the premises.

"We're in a start-up mode, and I think this is a very reasonable starting place," said interim pool director Libby Hicks.

The Charlevoix pool supervision requirements are more restrictive than those of other pools in northern Michigan.

The Harbor Springs Pool requires children less than 10 years of age to be accompanied by an adult, but the adult does not have to be in the water with them.

East Jordan draws the line at 12-year-olds, requiring kids under 12 to be accompanied by an adult who is prepared to swim.

"We haven't made people come in swim suits, but they have to be on the premises," said East Jordan pool supervisor Kim Prebble.

The community pool in Gaylord requires an adult to be in the water with children age 8 or younger.

"I wasn't aware of other pool policies," Hicks said. "Given that this is a privately funded pool, the board can do whatever they want."

According to pool president Steve Hansen, what they want to do is follow the recommendations made by Hicks.

"Our current director feels quite strongly about this," Hansen said. "This policy is more stringent than the pools around us, but she feels it's in everybody's best interest."

The new policy is raising the ire of parents in the community.

"We were going to the pool quite a bit," said Margie Tamminga, mother of three children. "I don't necessarily always want to go in the water with them. If they can swim, I don't think parents should have to go in with them."

At the root of the new policy are two issues — the pool board doesn't want middle school students swimming unattended, and the pool board wants to protect itself from liability issues.

"Water is a high risk environment, always," Hicks said. "It's inherently dangerous. I don't think convenience is a trade-off for safety."

While middle school students tend to want to do activities with their friends rather than their parents, the pool director wants to avoid that scenario.

"We don't want to become a drop-off site," Hicks said. "It's that kind of thing we want to avoid, so kids don't just get dumped here."

Hicks and Hansen both agreed that rules can be tried and changed if they don't work, but they want to try the new policy for awhile.

"I don't think it's overly restrictive," Hicks said. "The whole thing is a safety issue."

Hansen realizes the new policy is causing a stir in the community.

"There's quite a bit of controversy, but for the time being, we feel we've hired a new director and we should follow her recommendations," Hansen said. "If she thinks this is the way to go, then we think it's the way to go. It could be that the other pools are out of step and they need to catch up."

While lifeguards are always on duty during public swim times, Hicks and Hansen said it's not a lifeguard's job to police swimmers.

"The lifeguards are responsible for the whole pool, not just one person," Hicks said. "It comes down to a liability issue, and the courts say the ultimate responsibility rests with the parents."

An exception to the rule is for groups of kids who are at the pool for a special occasion, such as a birthday party or a scout outing. In those cases, the pool should be notified ahead of time so it can be staffed properly.

One adult per group will be sufficient.

McGoff remembered as a big, kind-hearted Irishman

By Laurie Lounsbury

Charlevoix's John McGoff, who died last Wednesday, was probably best known in the state of Michigan as a conservative newspaper publisher and devoted Republican.

But to another Charlevoix resident and newspaper man, McGoff was known as a superb human being.

"He was a big, kind-hearted Irishman," said Frank Shepherd, who was both business associate and friend to McGoff for 29 years.

Shepherd joined McGoff's company, PANAX Corporation, in 1968, and stayed with McGoff until 1981, when the corporation was sold.

"I had converted a weekly paper in Utica to a daily," Shepherd said. "John had just bought the Ingham County News, a weekly, and wanted to convert it to a daily. He kept asking me to go to work for him, and he finally made me an offer I couldn't refuse."

Although McGoff had a reputation for being a controversial newspaper publisher, Shepherd had no trouble working for him.

"He had his moments, like we all do," Shepherd said. "But he was a superb person. I've never had a finer boss. His generosity would fill a room."

After selling PANAX, McGoff remained a minority shareholder in the Macomb Daily Journal, which Shepherd now owns.

"One of the happiest times I've had was last August in Charlevoix, when I told John I was buying the Macomb Daily," Shepherd said. "He was thrilled. It brought tears to his eyes."

After the sale of PANAX, McGoff got into the cruise ship business. Among his dinner cruise ships was the Star of Charlevoix, which flourished for many years before slowly losing its popularity. The cruise ship operated out of Round Lake from 1978 to 1988.

Chamber of commerce president Jacqueline Merta worked as marketing director for McGoff.

"I thought he was a very honorable man," Merta said, recounting the story of a company meeting when other executives wanted to cut the pay rate of summer employees on the Star in order to save money.

"John said, 'This ship will close up before we take money away from students trying to earn money for college,'" Merta recalled.

McGoff loved trains, boats and trolleys so much that, at one time, he operated all three in Charlevoix.

A train commuted between Petoskey and Charlevoix, and a trolley picked up passengers and took them to the boat dock.

"He absolutely loved Charlevoix and did a lot for this town," Merta said.

—What people are saying—

"The safest thing is to let no one go in the water — that would be ridiculous."

— Charlevoix Friends of the Pool president Steve Hansen, discussing where to draw the line on safety restrictions at the community pool.

"Just because airlines have a crash they don't quit flying."

— Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce board member Gary Anderson, discussing the future of a fireworks display at next year's Venetian Festival.

"We could put a tax on alcohol, but that kind of goes completely against our last discussion."

— Ken Powers, discussing ways to raise money for the Venetian Festival, immediately after discussion on how to reduce excessive alcohol consumption during the event.

New pool regulation hangs kids out to dry

Laurie Lounsbury

Under the guise of safety, another freedom has been taken away from the citizens of Charlevoix.

It's all about safety. That's what Charlevoix Community Pool director Libby Hicks said when she discussed the new, restrictive, supervision policy being imposed on elementary and middle school students.

But it's not about safety. It's about liability. It's about fear.

It's about a recreational place sacrificing the pleasure of many for the litigious intents of a few — if any.

Maybe Friends of the Pool president Steve Hansen summed it up best when he said, "The safest thing would be not to let anyone go in the water — but that would be ridiculous."

Being overly restrictive is almost as ridiculous.

The pool's new supervision policy requires all elementary school kids to have an adult in the water with them. Middle school kids must have an adult on the premises with them.

Think about it. A 12-, 13- or 14-year-old can drive a boat on Lake Michigan by themselves legally, but they can't go for a swim in the pool without mom or dad.

Twelve-year-old kids can earn a baby-sitting certificate at the middle school and baby-sit for infants. They can earn a CPR certificate and resuscitate people.

But they can't splash around in a four-lane pool by themselves.

Hicks said the middle school supervision policy is because they don't want the pool to become a drop-off place where parents

"dump their kids."

When did it become a filthy crime to take your young teen to a recreational facility and leave them there for a couple of hours?

I walked, by myself, to the community pool every single day of my adolescent summers. The lifeguard supervised an entire battalion of puberty-prone kids.

I swam and swam and swam, day after day, without my mother looking over my shoulder. Had my mother's presence been required, I probably wouldn't have gone to the pool more than twice a month.

But instead I went every day, unchaperoned.

As a frisky adolescent, I occasionally goofed around at the pool, which triggered the shrill whistle of the lifeguard and a sharp bark — "Lounsbury! Five minutes on the bench!"

It wasn't a big deal. We all learned to play by the rules.

After all those years of unchaperoned swimming, I got hooked on scent of chlorine and ended up swimming on the varsity team for the University of Arizona.

Not bad for an unsupervised kid whose mom "dumped her kid" at the community pool.

Hicks compared the pool to Mt. McSaubia, citing last year's lawsuit against ski hill employees as something the pool staff wants to avoid.

I don't think the circumstances are even remotely similar.

It was a kindergarten who was left unattended at Mt. McSaubia. Kindergarten-aged kids shouldn't be left anywhere unattended — Not at a ski hill, not at a pool, not even in their own back yard.

It's true, a person could drown in a swimming pool. But a good lifeguard can reach any section of a pool within seconds. People don't drown in seconds. They drown in minutes.

And if a comparison between Mt. McSaubia and the pool is valid, then let's compare supervision policies. Middle school kids may ski at Mt. McSaubia without parental supervision. So may elementary school students.

Even after a costly lawsuit, the city chose to continue opening the ski hill to kids without adult supervision. Perhaps they knew they'd go broke if they did otherwise.

So will the pool.

I have no quarrel with asking parents to get in the water with young children who can't yet swim on their own. And I have no objection to a policy that requires parental presence for kids in elementary school.

But to say that parents must be in the water, swimming with a fourth or fifth grade student (who can probably swim circles around his or her parent) is absurd.

And to say that a parent or adult must accompany a middle school student to the pool will effectively eliminate the pool as a recreational outlet for these kids.

The middle school kids now being discriminated against are the very same group of kids who worked hard to raise money for the pool last year. They own bricks on the patio. Will they ever get to sit there by themselves and see their bricks?

What's next? Requiring that middle school kids be accompanied to the park? To the ball field? To the beaches? At this rate, middle school kids will have nowhere to go except home to watch TV.

Or they can always find an older kid with a fake ID to sneak down to the liquor store and buy them something to do.

Letters to the editor

Parent unhappy with new pool policy

Editor:

This letter is in reference to the little girl who can't go swimming at the Charlevoix Community Pool because her mother has to be in the water with her (1/21/98).

I am appalled at this new (January 1998) ridiculous rule. I have three children, ages 4-1/2, 10, and 11 who loved going to the pool. The 10- and 11-year-old have been swimming very well since they were each 5 years old.

When I called the pool, the pool director got very defensive when I asked her about this rule and who determined this regulation, which I never got an answer to.

I agree that parents of elementary school children should not drop their children off at the pool, but please, why can't you read a book or magazine or even socialize with other parents there in the pool area?

Why is there a lifeguard present if all the parents need to be in the water?

What about birthday parties at the pool, which there were quite a few of last year? What is the new rule on this?

There are a lot of children who enjoy the pool, mine included, but if I have to get in the water each time, I, along with a lot of other parents, probably won't be going.

I wonder how the contributors, public and private, will feel now, knowing children will be unable to swim if their parents choose not to stay in the water with them when they could be there sitting in the pool area. So much for a Community Pool!

Sincerely,
Margie Tamminga

Pool changes rules for supervision

Editor:

Swimmers at the Charlevoix Community Pool will notice that a swim at the beach and a swim at the pool don't have the same rules pertaining to children. The pool is warmer, yes, but also deeper and more crowded. In our start-up period, the pool staff has decided to take an especially safe approach to the participation of children. The staff has found that the involvement of parents or significant adults produces a safer, less rowdy and better swimming experience for everyone. We ask that children, fifth grade and younger, be accompanied in the water by an adult, and children sixth through eighth grade be accompanied by an adult on the pool deck or in the lobby, if not in the water.

As our experience with each other grows, these rules can be changed. As our programming grows, we will have more and more organized activities for elementary and middle school students. In the organized activities, the children can be at the pool unaccompanied, if necessary. Activities we are planning include an expanded schedule of swimming lessons for children of all ages, basic synchronized swimming and recreational water polo. Teenagers and adults can call the pool to learn the expanded schedule for aqua-exercise.

Book Shelf

By Dianne Foster

For everyone who has enjoyed Jan Karon's "Mitford" series, while waiting for the fifth Mitford book you will treasure Lois Battle's "Bed and Breakfast" ($12.95, paperback, Penguin). Battle is one of Karon's "favorite" authors.

With Southern sensibility, Battle sets her story in Beaufort, South Carolina. Josie Tatterhall — a military widow turned B&B proprietor — invites her three grown daughters home for the Christmas holidays after resolving that life is too short to let old grievances stand in the way of family togetherness. There are no heroes in this family drama, no villains either — just regular folks, which makes the story so appealing and entirely recognizable.

"Bed and Breakfast" is a literate, comical, compassionate, shrewd, and entertaining portrait of a family with secrets, old misunderstandings, and unspoken loyalties. Battle's sensitivity to human frailty and her sharp-eyed wit guarantees a reading escape of both laughter and tears.

A less light read is Arthur Golden's "Memoirs of a Geisha" ($25, hardcover, Knopf). In a word, astonishing. I read it twice. It's a brilliant debut novel by a Tennessee-born, well-educated (Harvard, Columbia, Boston University) new writer.

Through the voice of Nitta Sayuri, with seamless authenticity and a startling act of literary impersonation, Golden tells the story of her life as a geisha. Sayuri's story begins in a poor fishing village of Japan in 1929, when, as a 9-year-old with haunting blue-gray eyes, she is taken from her home and sold into slavery to a renowned geisha house. We witness her transformation as she learns the rigorous arts of the geisha. When World War II erupts, the geisha houses are forced to close and Sayuri must reinvent herself all over again to find a rare kind of freedom on her own terms.

What is astonishing about "Memoirs of a Geisha" is that an American male so seamlessly entered the soul of a Japanese geisha, and caught not only her world but her foreign heart and her hopes with such perfection. The story is rich with detail and a vast knowledge of Japanese history.

It is a dazzling literary achievement of empathy and grace. It is a window into a culture where truth lies beyond our American imagination.

Teams of horses, four sleighs and approximately 80 people took a sleigh ride through the woods and fields in the Barnard area south of Charlevoix Saturday afternoon during an annual Barnard Grange event. Following the sleigh ride, everyone returned to the Grange Hall for chili, corn bread, cookies, coffee and hot cocoa and some good toe-tapping music. ## Ballet production comes to area

The Crooked Tree Arts Council of Petoskey announced receipt of a $33,100 grant from the Frey Foundation in Grand Rapids, Mich., to bring the Grand Rapids Ballet's original production of "Alice" to Petoskey in March. This is the first time a professional ballet will perform in the northern Michigan area.

The Grand Rapids Ballet's executive director, Dale Hill, said, "We're particularly excited to bring 'Alice' to Petoskey. Not only is touring a part of our mission as the only classically based ballet in the state, but 'Alice" is special: it's the only ballet choreographed, performed, staged and costumed entirely by Michigan talents.

Choreographer Robert Estner will be in Petoskey the week of Feb. 8 to audition local dancers for small parts in the professionally staged production. Up to 15 youngsters will be added to the cast, while another 15 or more will be recruited to assist in other aspects of the two performances.

"Alice" will be performed at Petoskey Middle School at 8 p.m. Saturday, March 21, and at 2 p.m. Sunday, March 22. The ballet's senior dance company will arrive in Petoskey the week of March 16 to address students in area schools about their profession and to rehearse with northern Michigan dancers selected to perform in the two productions.

Frey Foundation president James M. Richmond, said, "We're pleased to support this effort. I saw 'Alice' when it debuted in Grand Rapids last spring and found it to be one of the finest, most exciting productions I'd ever seen."

By Lowell Anderson

If you have ever hiked in open wilderness areas, or traveled in unfamiliar territory, you know how important it is to have a compass, map, or at least have fixed reference points — the sun, a tall tree, a mountain peak, etc. To attempt to navigate in unfamiliar areas without a fixed standard of reference is to court disaster. We wouldn't think of taking an automobile trip across the country without a map. We wouldn't think of getting on an airplane bound for a distant city that had known malfunctioning navigational systems. We wouldn't dream of sailing the Atlantic without at least a compass. Ironically, as a culture we seem to be trying to navigate the good ship SS America without a moral compass — without a fixed standard of reference. We are adrift, without direction and courting disaster.

The loss of belief in objective right and wrong is not just a problem of the American culture in general, but of the American church as well. In 1994, 3,795 youth from 13 denominations were surveyed regarding four categories: love and sex, marriage and family, faith and religion and attitudes and lifestyles. A very small sample from among scores of things the survey revealed are the following disturbing statistics:

- * 66 percent lied to their parents within the past three months.
- * 36 percent cheated within the last 3 months
- * 23 percent tried to hurt someone in the same period
- * 55 percent have engaged in sexual activity by age 18

The moral compass of Biblical absolutes is becoming lost to a generation that is having to navigate seas more treacherous than any previous generation had to face. Technological advances in communication and medicine, to cite just two examples, have brought us face-to-face with moral and ethical situations that were not even imagined two generations ago. Before motion picture, television and the worldwide web, the dissemination of sexually explicit materials and issues of "free speech" were much less complicated. Before respirators, CT Scan and open heart surgery, the issues of life and death were more clear cut. The moral and ethical absolutes that guided our nation as we entered the 20th century are even more necessary to guide us into the 21st century!

Assessing the problem and lamenting the situation is not enough. Hand-wringing and blame-fixing will not solve the dilemma. A strategy must be found and employed to regain our fixed standard of reference — Biblical absolutes.

Such a strategy has already been set in motion on a nation-wide scale. Josh McDowell, internationally known Christian leader and head of a major non-denominational para-church ministry, has networked with leaders and pastors from many denominations across the country to restore objective right and wrong to the church — and ultimately to our culture. Under the simple title, RIGHT FROM WRONG, a whole spectrum of printed and audio-visual resources has been made available. These tools have been made available to enable the church to fix its broken moral compass so that an otherwise inevitable shipwreck of SS AMERICA does not occur.

Pastors and leaders from several churches in our community have secured the RIGHT FROM WRONG resources and will be using them in their church soon, if they have not already done so. When the series comes to your church, make every effort to participate. If your moral compass is broken, fix it. If it is no longer accurate, recalibrate it.

The church has the responsibility to maintain the fixed standard of reference with which the great ship SS AMERICA can safely navigate its treacherous moral sea. Without the moral compass of Biblical absolutes there will be a shipwreck of the SS AMERICA that will make the sinking of the Titanic pale into insignificance. It is within our power to save the ship! With God's help, we will!

Board meets in closed sessions to discuss land

Even if the board can settle on where to build, a second hurdle faces them — deciding what to build.

Relying on survey information from 1996 and recent estimates that it needs close to $1 million in repair work, much of the conventional focus has been on erecting a new middle school.

Discussion during the open session of their January meeting centered around the school's repair needs, specifically a leaky roof which could cost the district $184,000 to patch this summer.

According to principal Dennis VanGuilder, the roof has leaked puddles into school on four different occasions this year, once in Steve Hopkins' room, in the school's main office and twice in the gymnasium.

Voters approved a sinking fund millage last June for repairs at the district's schools, but none of that money is being funneled toward any projects for the middle school. Board president Allen Telgenhof noted that the district might not have the money to fix the roof.

"Before we spend a quarter, we should take something to the voters," board member Ike Boss said during the meeting. "We can have a new middle school by 1999 if the community builds us one."

In a separate conversation, Levegood hacked that thought, saying building a new middle school would be "the logical thing to do."

He did say that the board has yet to make an absolute decision in regard to what to build.

At least one board member has been pushing for a new high school.

Way said building a new middle school on a tiny piece of property based on the fact that it might be the easiest proposal to get voter approval is "a short term band-aid approach."

He suggested the possibility of building a new high school and relocating the middle school plus fifth-graders to the present high school on Garfield Street. This would upgrade the current situation in all three schools for the price of one building, he said. With one less grade, the K-5 overcrowding would lessen, middle school students would have the technology and athletic fields they crave, and high schoolers would have a new facility that "they could feel good about when they graduate."

The board is not looking at a date for another millage proposal, although some hold out hope for a bond issue for a June election. For the most part, the board will continue sifting their way through various options behind closed doors.

"Our focus has been finding the right piece of property rather than by a certain time," Telgenhof said. "At some point it becomes detrimental to do this in an open forum."

The board next meets 7 p.m. Monday, Feb. 9 in the middle school cafeteria.

Park Avenue resident wants zoning change for home

By Jamie MacMillan

Charlevoix Township planners tabled a rezone request that could allow for an expanded Charlevoix Area Hospital.

The request was made by township resident Calvin Gould, who asked planners to change the R-1, residential, label from his Park Avenue property to a professional office zone. The property is diagonally across the street from the hospital.

Gould wants to sell his land to the Charlevoix Area Hospital, which in turn hopes to develop the land into office buildings for their doctors.

Hospital president William Jackson attended the meeting explaining to planners that the hospital has no set plans for the land, but that growth projections for the facility foresees the need for at least three more doctors in the upcoming years.

"It's in our best interest to attempt to buy it to give us flexibility for future office space," he said.

A handful of residents in the neighborhood, though, voiced their disapproval of the rezone by either speaking out at the meeting or through correspondence with the board.

Attorney Lynn Steadman, representing the Gould's next-door neighbor Julia Baer, said the change would "dramatically shift the character of the neighborhood from residential to commercial in her backyard."

Another neighbor, Tim Matter, objected to the rezone, fearing that pavement for a parking lot to accompany an office building could run right up to his property line.

Jackson, though, said professional offices make good neighbors in a residential district because they don't occupy the building 24 hours a day or on the weekends.

Planning commission chairman Chuck Center agreed that it would be a nice mix in the area, but that the board had an obligation to the neighbors.

To that end, planners attempted to manage a compromise between the parties that would allow the hospital to build office space on the land while granting a larger green belt buffer than usual to protect neighboring property.

Since the hospital owns vacant property on the other side of Gould's property, Steadman said the hospital could afford a 40-foot green belt. With the required 10-foot side yard setbacks, it would keep any development 50 feet away from his client's property.

Jackson suggested a 20-foot green belt to go along with the 10-foot setback.

"I smell a compromise with this," Center said, noting the parties should split the difference.

Jackson said he was not prepared to lose 40 percent of the property and said the hospital needs time to reevaluate their needs to see if they could be accomplished with fewer square feet.

The planners agreed, voting 5-0 to table the notion while advising the opposing sides to get together before the next meeting to work out an acceptable compromise.

The township planners next meet 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, March 18 at Stroud Hall.

Family Independence Agency erases county line

Clients can get services where it's convenient

By Jamie MacMillan

A small step will be taken Monday, Feb. 1 toward a possible merging of the Family Independence Agencies of Charlevoix and Emmet counties.

According to F.I.A. director Terry Salacina, who handles the directorship chores for both counties, at the start of next month, residents of Emmet and Charlevoix counties will be allowed to receive F.I.A. services in either county regardless of residency.

As it is now, you must be a resident of the same county from which you receive services.

Salacina explained it would benefit people who live in one county, but work, attend school, or send children to day care services in the next. In some instances Charlevoix County residents, such as those living near Walloon Lake, may actually live closer to Petoskey and would have a shorter drive to Emmet County F.I.A. offices.

"I don't know if it will affect 1,000 people or just three," Salacina said, "but our system ought not be a barrier for people trying to work their way off welfare."

This endeavor will be the first of its kind in Michigan's lower peninsula, and is modeled after a four-county arrangement in the Upper Peninsula counties of Chippewa, Mackinaw, Schoolcraft and Luce. Salacina noted if operations run smoothly, perhaps it will expand to include Otsego and Antrim counties.

As for merging F.I.A. boards beyond the simple extension of services, commissioners from both counties say it is not happening — yet. A hang-up was the fact that the separate care facilities were funded differently. Grandvue in East Jordan receives revenue through a millage while the Emmet County Care Facility in Harbor Springs sees a revenue stream come directly from county coffers.

While county commissioners say a merge is still in the dis-ance, the agency, now with an invisible county line, practically sees no difference between the two counties. Not only is Salacina director for both counties, but nearly one-third of his staff has dual county responsibilities with five additional staff members up for review for similar roles. When an illness or other circumstances depletes staff, the counties substitute from one another and all training is done together. Also, social services money for Emmet County is currently transferred through the Charlevoix County's treasurer's office.

Rayders rack up second win

By Jamie MacMillan

With large scoring outbursts in the second and third quarters, the Charlevoix Rayders cruised to a 95-85 win last Friday night over Whittemore-Prescott.

In the process, the Rayders gained a little revenge in tallying their second win of the season. In December, the Cardinals bested Charlevoix 86-82 in what proved to be a complete reversal of what occurred Friday night at the Charlevoix High School gymnasium.

In the teams' first match-up, the Rayders came out sluggish due to the long bus drive. They played catch-up all during the game, falling short at the end.

The shoe was on the other foot, in the rematch as the Rayders jumped out to a quick 9-2 lead en route to a 18-14 first quarter lead.

"It's a tough trip with a long bus ride and for them I don't think they played all that well," Rayder coach Keith Haske said. "We came ready to play. We took off and kept building the lead."

The Rayders blasted off in the second period, ringing up 36 points in the eight minute span for a 54-41 advantage at the half. The Rayders hounded the Cardinals with the pressing attack, forcing the Cardinals to throw the ball away time after time.

The trend continued in the second half as Charlevoix outscored the Cardinals 27-16 in the third quarter for a 22-point lead. The Rayders built their lead to 90-62 in the first minutes of the last quarter, and only a late rally by Whittemore-Prescott made the final score appear close.

The Rayders have won two of their last three games, upping the record to 2-8.

"We have a better sense of what we want to do," Haske said of his team's improved play. "When you're 0-7, the kids begin to question what we're doing, but after seeing it work a few times for wins we'll get better."

Colin Carr led the Rayders with 23 points. Sean Stockman added 17 points and nine rebounds, Matt McClellan poured in 16, and Justin Thorp added 12 while grabbing nine rebounds. Jim Kanine dished out a season-high 15 assists to go along with his eight points.

Haske said improved and controlled play from both Kanine and Carr have sparked the team's turnaround. Kanine is beginning to assert himself more as the team's leader while running the offense and Carr has shown more touch to his game, notably the pull-up jump shot.

Charlevoix will play at home Friday, Jan. 30 against Harbor Springs. A junior varsity game tips-off the action at 6 p.m. in the Charlevoix High School gymnasium.

Whittemore-Prescott scores win against JV Rayders

The Rayders' junior varsity team dropped two contests last week, 73-52 to Petoskey and 60-54 to Whittemore-Prescott.

Against the Northmen, Shay Hutchinson and Russ Ward led the Rayders with 15 and 13 points respectively. Hutchinson also grabbed five rebounds while Ward dished out six assists.

Friday night against the Cardinals, the Rayders were going for a season sweep, having bested Whittemore 60-50 in December. The game was tight, but the outcome different from their first match-up as the Rayders fell short of victory.

Adam Wood scored 13 points and Andy Granath chipped in 13 to lead Charlevoix. Ward and Granath were the team's leading rebounders grabbing nine and six respectively. Jon Boss handed out five assists and Michael Ricks swiped three steals.

The Rayders' record stands at 4-6.

"The kids are still working hard," coach Todd Klinger said.

"We're hoping to get better and more aggressive as the year goes on."

The Rayders play at home this Friday, Jan. 30 against Harbor Springs. Tip-off is at 6 p.m.

Rayder skiers finish in top ten

With five top-10 finishes, the Charlevoix Rayder ski teams performed well in a conference quad-meet at Nub's Nob last week.

The boys' team, with 95 points, placed third behind two teams from Harbor Springs, whose "A" team won the meet with 22 points. Traverse City St. Francis placed fourth with 125 points and Kalkaska was fifth with 147.

The meet belonged to Harbor Springs, whose skiers placed 1-2-3 in both the slalom and giant slalom (GS). Zach Ford won the slalom followed by George Peet and Will Baker while Peet took the GS followed by Ford and Todd Matelski.

Charlevoix sophomore Todd

Freidinger took a fifth place finish in the slalom and seventh place in GS.

Other Rayder results were: Shawn MacMillan, 11th slalom, 16th GS; Steve Pirie, 15th slalom, 11th GS; Eric Halverson, 13th slalom, 21st GS; Joel Trubilowicz, 14th slalom, 18th GS; and Wally Wujcik, 22nd, slalom.

Despite entering the girls' event with just two skiers, Charlevoix still made their mark. Sophomore Tiffany Fisher, following up a strong freshman season, crossed the finish line with second place finishes in both slalom and GS events. Kirsten Brendtro skied to a 10th place in slalom and 13th in GS.

Anna Craig of Harbor Springs took first place in the slalom while her teammate Stephanie Baker won the giant slalom.

Like the boys' meet, Harbor Springs "A" team took top honors with 29 points and their "B" team came in second place with 78 points. Traverse City St. Francis was third with 104 and Kalkaska fourth with 151.

With only two skiers, the Charlevoix girls' team did not factor into the team standings.

The next ski meet is 2:30 p.m. Thursday, Jan. 29 at Boyne Mountain against Boyne City.

Lady Rayders continue volleyball winning streak

By Jamie MacMillan

In a classic contest between East Jordan's heavy hitting offense and Charlevoix's rock steady defense, the Rayders and defense won in a close five-game volleyball match in Charlevoix Monday night, 15-7, 6-15, 15-9, 8-15, 15-7.

The win kept the Rayders undefeated, 5-0, in Lake Michigan Division play and gave them the inside track to the league title as every other league team has at least two losses. The loss was the second in a row for East Jordan, after losing a four-game match to Elk Rapids last week. The Red Devils are lodged in a three-way tie for second place with Kalkaska and Traverse City St. Francis with 3-2 records.

Like a typical five-game match, momentum continually swung back and forth. In the deciding game, the match was finally tipped in Charlevoix's favor on the fate of two key plays.

With the score 3-2 Charlevoix, Amanda Eaton served, beginning a minute-long rally that put the volley in volleyball. Charlevoix's Christine Sweeney, Jamie Gowell, Eaton, and East Jordan's Jenny Goebel and Raissa Schroeder each made diving saves to keep play going before Sweeney nailed a shot just out of the reach of a sprawled out Suzie Malpass. The Rayders were able to earn two more points during that serve for a four-point margin they never relinquished.

Later, with Charlevoix up 11-7, Goebel was serving for the Devils, looking to spark a rally to get her club back in the match. Her serve looked like an ace, but Laura Maltese saved it just as it was about to hit the floor, helping the Rayders earn a side-out. The Devils never got the serve back as Charlevoix closed the match with four straight points.

Also helping the Rayders during that game was a defense that forced four consecutive side-outs without giving up points while the outcome was still in doubt. Eaton, Sweeney, and Ann Spang had kills during that span.

Derby Dervish: Cub scouts and boy scouts experienced the thrill of car racing during the annual Pinewood Derby Monday night. Four cars at a time, made by the scouts, were launched from the top of the ramp and zoomed to the bottom with split-second times. The scouts either kept a close eye on the start (above) or waited breathlessly at the finish line (right). Photos by Laurie Lounsbury

Times change, issues don't

Editor's note: The following is an excerpt from a Courier column Bob Clock wrote March 1, 1967, about the Charlevoix school board. We found the similarities to the issues then and now rather ironic.

Just when you start thinking the people's so-called right-to-know is as well established in this country as Plymouth Rock, someone upsets the apple cart.

This time it's the so-called Charlevoix Board of Education.

I was one of the two reporters who was asked to leave a "discussion" session of the board last Monday night. The other was Glen Sheppard.

Not that I actually minded being asked to leave the meeting. There is nothing like an outright confrontation with the pomp of elected officials to stoke the smoldering fires of righteous indignation. It certainly kicks in the teeth any sense of complacency you may have picked up.

"Take land acquisition... A premature disclosure might send prices sky high. Many times in the past we have had school board projects ruined because information got out too soon in the papers."

— Former school board member Dale Boss, discussing the need for closed meetings

I have no idea what the board was discussing Monday night when we walked in. The meeting stopped

In 1966, quite a few young women joined the Future Homemakers of America club, to prepare themselves for a career in homemaking. We don't believe the club still exists today. We do know that several women pictured here added jobs outside the home to their homemaking roles. Installation of officers of the 1966 Charlevoix High School Chapter of the Future Homemakers of America are (from left) Mary Ann Himebauch, Ruth Bogart, Millie Sherwood, Mary Browe, Beatrice Farkas, Nancy LaBrequé and Kathy Milligan.

abruptly as we entered. I do know that the last meeting I was asked to leave a few weeks ago involved a presentation by Architect Jack Begrow on furnishing and decoration of the new library on Clinton Street. Really top drawer stuff, as you can imagine.

According to the by-laws under which the board operates, two meetings are held each month on the first and third Mondays. The first meeting has been designated as the "official" meeting. However, with all the business the board has to handle, meetings are often held more frequently, sometimes once a week.

The board has the idea that only "business" meetings, that is those meetings at which a vote is taken, should be open to the public. All other meetings — when the hard work is done, when issues are picked apart, when the real decisions are made — are closed.

I THINK the board clings to a too narrow definition of the word "business." So many "Ayes" and many "Nays" don't make much sense unless you know the thinking behind them.

AS IMPORTANT as the people's right-to-know is at this point, whether or not Charlevoix gets its new school is equally important. Probably more classrooms are needed, the way Charlevoix is growing. But I can't see how the people of the school district can, in good conscience, endorse a bond issue and extra millage when we haven't been made privy to the facts of the case.

Rest assured there will be a big propaganda campaign starting about mid-April to drum up support for the new school. We'll be besieged by facts and figures — supplied by the school board — about how Charlevoix's school population is growing. But we'll never know what alternatives were discussed by the board, or whether expansion of existing school buildings might be more desirable and less costly.

DON'T GET me wrong. It would be impossible for one editor and reporter to cover all of the public meetings held in the Charlevoix area. Yet there are nights when we do have someone available when the board is meeting but the press, and, incidentally, the public is not welcome. Charlevoix teachers, who are as intimately tied up with education as any group I can think of, are not even allowed to have one of their number sit in. Not even the principals are permitted to attend.

Bald eagles nesting in Charlevoix County

Winging it for dinner

Just south of the bridge in East Jordan, a pair of bald eagles entertained bird watchers with their dining rituals. Clockwise from upper left: The first bird on the scene swooped in on a large dead fish, making a perfect landing with its feet on the food. Since dinner was too big to take home, a second eagle joined the first for some strategic planning. They put their heads together for quite some time, contemplating the problem. Eagle number two eventually lost interest in the project and flew away. The first eagle made an impressive effort, trying to fly away with his find, but the weight of it soon brought him back to earth. It's believed that the eagles are nesting nearby on the Jordan River.

Forging ahead with faith

Cancer victim devotes her remaining time to homeless children in Romania

By Laurie Lounsbury

At a time when most people's lives would have come to a devastating, screeching halt, Rosalind Stump kept moving forward, undeterred.

Stump, who successfully battled breast cancer over five years ago, heard in December the words she dreaded most — the cancer was back.

Not one, not two, but seven tumors were discovered in her lungs.

And her doctor wrote in his report to the Charlevoix School District, where Stump is employed as a bus driver, that her condition was "incurable breast cancer."

Without any treatment, Stump was told she had a year to 18 months to live. With radiation treatment, she could stretch her life expectancy a bit by shrinking the tumors. By adding chemotherapy treatments, she could increase her odds to a 50 percent chance that the cancer would go into remission.

"Incurable breast cancer doesn't mean it's the end," Stump said. "I firmly believe the doctors do the best they can with the limited knowledge and resources available to them, but my faith in God, and my belief in the Bible is where my ultimate healing lies."

So Stump, carrying her strong religious convictions and $6,000 in cash, left for Romania three days after her first radiation treatment.

Her destination was The Little Church in Romania, a group that takes care of the homeless children in the formerly Communist country.

"I needed to go and say goodbye in case I couldn't ever go back," Stump said.

It was Stump's third trip to Romania, and with every visit she grows more attached to the people working to help street kids; and more adoring of the street kids themselves.

Sometimes called "talking animals" by other Romanians, the kids who were raised in the sewers and run through the streets in packs are the result of former dictator, Nicolae Ceausescu's actions. The dictator banned contraception for all Romanian women and ordered them to bear at least five children. Women and families already living in poverty abandoned their children, leaving them to raise themselves in the streets.

Ceausescu was later assassinated and the country freed of Communist rule, but the unwanted children remained in the sewers, streets and alleys, where they begged or stole food.

County to start regional transit system

Medical patients get first crack at new bus service

By Jamie MacMillan

County transit authorities are hoping to have at least half of their experimental regional transit system giving citizens a lift by the start of next week.

According to Charlevoix County transit director Ari Saworski, three, seven-seat vans used to transport people for non-emergency medical purposes could be winding around a five-county area as soon as next Monday.

Saworski stressed that vans will only be used to take people to and from area hospitals and doctor's offices for their appointments. The vans won't be used as an alternative for ambulances, he said.

To catch a ride, Saworski said, call 1-800-2BUS-RIDE to reserve a seat and set-up an appropriate pick-up spot. A round-trip ticket will cost $10.

All this is just half of a larger effort to create a regional transit system for residents of Charlevoix, Kalkaska, Antrim, Benzie and Grand Traverse counties.

Armed with a fleet of seven 14-passenger buses, the transit director envisions a system that will allow anyone who needs to get to work, do their shopping, or simply visit friends and family to do so without the hassle of scraping for a ride.

"We have created a lot of interest," Saworski said. "The purpose is to interconnect our cities so if someone lives in Boyne City but needs to go to Kalkaska or from Mancelona to Elk Rapids, they can do it."

The system, however, has experienced more stops than starts. Originally intended to begin last fall, the starting date has been indefinitely been delayed because the counties haven't received the buses yet.

"It's out of our control," Saworski said of the buses, which were built by a Salinas, Kan. company. Now, the buses are lodged in Grand Rapids for finishing touches. In a phone interview, Saworski said they hope to have the buses rolling by the start of March, but it isn't "a definite."

Meanwhile, Saworski said their focus has been setting up routes and a fee schedule so when buses do arrive, they can switch the ignition without further delay.

Buses will begin their route from the Charlevoix Transit Authority in Boyne City. They'll splinter off in two directions. One will head north to Charlevoix and then travel to the Traverse City area along U.S. 31. The other will wind down M-75 to Boyne Falls before routing to the Traverse City area along U.S. 131.

As for stops along the way, Saworski said they haven't settled on any, but they'll

1998

New buses will serve five counties

be flexible based on demand as the system get under way. The end point in Traverse City will be at the Bay Area Transit Authority (BAYTA).

"There will be quite a number of factors to determine stops, such as, are people going to a particular job site in Traverse City," Saworski said. "We want to give people a good choice."

The fees for rides has yet to be decided, but Saworski hinted at a pay rate based on how far you ride.

The buses for the system were paid for through an $800,000 state grant promoting the creation of regional transit systems. A portion of that money — $216,000 — will be used to cover two-thirds of the system's first year operational budget of $308,000. The remainder will be covered by bus fares.

Last year, Charlevoix County Commissioners agreed to be sponsors of the grant application in a 5-1 vote. Commissioner Shirley Roloff dissented, fearing that more traffic would damage roads further.

Corrections

We misspelled two names in the Jan. 28 issue of the Courier. A birth announcement should have said this:

Rebekah Christine Riley, weighing 7 pounds, 13 ounces, was born to Natalie and Patrick Riley of Jackson on Jan. 2. Grandparents are Mike and Wanda Riley of Rockford and Lonnie and Donnell Jones of Charlevoix.

In the sports section, we misspelled the name of a basketball player on the Air Angels team based on incorrect information given to us. It should have said this: The Air Angels flew over the Char-Heels 45-19 with Natasha Kleiber's 19 points paving the way.

We regret the errors.

Her faith will take her to Romania — again

daughter of John and Nella Andrews, who embarked on a campaign to provide food and shelter for the children. Andrews started by leaving food in a park for the kids every day at 3 p.m.

From there, the project grew until Andrews was able to buy two homes for the children — one for the boys and one for the girls.

Andrews now tackles the overwhelming job of teaching the children things that most people take for granted.

"They have to be taught how to bathe, how to use utensils, how to read and write," Stump said. Although the kids are school-age, the government won't let the street kids attend their public schools. Dirty and often covered with lice, the orphans aren't accepted by the conservative Romanian government.

Stump threw her full support behind the project after getting to know the Andrews and the children. She brought their remarkable tale back to the United States.

"When I told the story of the children back here, people wanted to give and help them," Stump said.

Through Stump's church, the Assembly of God Church in Petoskey, $6,000 was raised to take to the Little Church project. Stump smuggled the money into Romania, where American dollars go a long way.

"We were able to pay their church rent for a year — $27 American a month," Stump said.

With the money, Stump also helped Laura Andrews buy three washing machines for the two children's homes. Before that vital purchase, the group was doing laundry for 15 kids by hand.

The Little Church still has pressing needs, which Stump has vowed to correct.

"They need a new kitchen badly," Stump said, showing pictures of antiquated stoves that malfunction most of the time.

"My goal now is to raise money for the kitchen," Stump said.

But will Stump live long enough to see the new kitchen completed? Her faith has an answer to that.

Rosalind Stump presents Laura Andrews with $6,000 in American cash, which Stump had to smuggle into the country. Smuggling goods into Romania and dodging border patrols was all a part of the Romanian experience for Stump.

"Yes, I am going back again. This time I want to take some muscle people back with me who don't mind working so we can build a kitchen," Stump said.

Until that time, Stump is undergoing chemotherapy treatments and praying for the best. "God brought me through this five-and-a-half years ago, which has allowed me to do many projects for His glory."

"I believe He still has work for me to do here, such as the leg work to raise more money for kitchen equipment. And since I don't believe God starts a project and then stops before it's completed, I'm planning to return to Romania at least one more time."

Anyone who would like to contribute may send a donation to the Assembly of God Church, 600 N. Division Road, Petoskey, MI, 49770.

All donations should be marked "Romanian Project."

When skiing, think about wearing a brain bucket

EDITH

By Edith Gilbert

Some people wonder if Sonny Bono or Michael Kennedy had worn helmets while skiing, would they be alive today?

Most people must think so, because, according to Greg Smith, owner of the Bahnhof ski shop, "BOOM, everybody is buying helmets!" His entire stock of helmets was sold out one week after the two celebrity accidents. He said the demand for helmets this year is nationwide. Even his supplier was completely sold out.

EDITH GILBERT

Originally, helmets were only worn by racers in downhill speed events and in giant slalom skiing, but gradually recreational skiers adopted the fashion. People, who ski in control, wear them, not only because it's a cool fashion statement, but as a protection against other skiers.

When Greg's son, Ryan Smith, retired from downhill racing for his high school team in Park City, Utah, he continued to wear his helmet because he said, "It's comfortable, it's warm and it's safe." Fortunately, he also decided to wear a face guard.

The first day he wore it, he crashed into a slalom pole, and would have lost his teeth if he hadn't had this extra protection.

Ski helmets are surprisingly light because the hard outer shell is insulated to protect the wearer with a foam rubber pad, and is lined with Styrofoam, the same light material that's used to make picnic containers. Prices range from $89 to $140, while some sell as high as $300. They come in four sizes; small, medium, large and extra-large.

Edith dons a helmet

When Greg heard his parents, Mary and Owen Smith, say, "We think we ought to wear helmets," it solved his problem as to what to give them for Christmas. They always wear them now, because they feel safer and more protected. Even though Owen Smith, at age 73, has had a hip and knee replacement, he still keeps up with his son and grandson on all the challenging slopes.

The three generation family business grew from one small store, which was started in 1961 by Greg's father in-law, Lionel Hager, at the Ostego Ski Club, to the present nine outlets — four in northern Michigan, one in Wisconsin, two in Colorado and two in Utah. It was a natural endeavor for Hager, who had served in the 10th Mountain Army Division, which was made up of US Ski troops during World War II. And it was just as natural for his daughter, Lindy, to grow up on skis and become the Junior National Downhill Champion in 1964.

The Smith family took over the profitable business in 1976. At this moment Greg is supervising the shop in Petoskey; Lindy and son, Ryan, are overseeing the Park City, Utah operation, and daughter Sarah is moving to Breckenridge to tend to the family shop there.

The helmet controversy, according to Greg, now seems to be, "should helmets be required for recreational skiers?" According to the United States Ski Association, all racers are required to wear helmets, but Greg still feels they should be an option for recreational skiers, and the same ought to be true for snow boarding. We'll have to wait and see how this tricky issue will be resolved in the near future.

Letters to the editor

Pool supporter thought column made waves while going nowhere

Dear Editor:

Several months ago you devoted a whole editorial on how you planned to generate "controversy" as a useful tool for drawing reader attention to the particular cause you happened to be featuring at the moment. However, there are times when I compare the way you use your style of controversy to that of a person who jumps into a rowboat, pushes away from shore and flails away with only one oar in the water — making lots of waves while going nowhere.

In my opinion that is how you dealt with the recently introduced pool rules that pair young children with their parents as a requirement for entering the pool. To me the rule is an application of the "buddy" system, long a tradition at summer camps, except that one of the "buddies" has direct control over the behavior of the other.

In regard to your wave-making concerning the pool rule that requires parents to be in the building while their middle school-aged children are in the water — it would appear that you are against parents involving themselves directly in the behavior of their own children. To me, the rules provide wonderful opportunities for parents and children to spend some special times together in very pleasant surroundings.

As has been previously stated by the pool manager, these rules are intended to promote the most in safe and responsible behavior in and around water — where a single momentary inattention can so quickly have deadly results.

Please, dear editor, give the new rules a chance to work while the pool people work on solving objections without sacrificing safety. And next time when you climb into your "editorial boat" — please use both oars and create a wake not just waves. Thank you.

Sincerely,
Bern Cannan
Charlevoix

Editor's note: I never wrote that I "planned to generate controversy as a useful tool for drawing reader attention..." Charlevoix never lacks for controversial issues, as any Courier editor can attest to. We don't generate controversy — we merely report about it. I did write a Courier column dated Oct. 15, 1997, where I stated, "I think con- trovery is healthy. It means people care enough to get involved and express their feelings."

News fan disgusted with national media

Editor:

I am a news addict, but our TV has been silent for days and I'm disgusted with the press. The coverage of President Clinton and the intimacies and allegations of his sex life are insulting at best and at worst treasonous, undermining the greatness of this country. We have not had one perfect President yet, and I suspect we will not have one soon.

It's time for the press and media and politicians to address real issues that effect the health and well being of our country and our world. If I were Saddam Hussein, I'd be funding Paula Jones and Kenneth Starr too. How would the governing abilities of F.D.R., J.F.K., Jefferson and Reagan have fared under similar inspection and glaring exposure?

In the interest of preserving some kind of national dignity, and some respect for government, we need to find new ways to hold our elected officials accountable for their civilian actions. Ways that will not undermine the ability of the President of the United States of America to be credible and effective in leading and representing this great nation.

Jo Ann Beemon
Charlevoix

P.S. It is good to see small town newspapers like the Courier, cover community news with dignity and respect.

School board didn't address any curriculum issues

Dear Editor:

Recently, I reviewed the challenging goals set forth by the Charlevoix Public Schools Board of Education for the 1998-1999 school year. They covered the subject areas of school support, budget, staffing needs, land acquisition, higher expectations and Rayder pride. Absent from this list was any mention of curriculum. How the curriculum is researched, applied, discussed, revised and acted upon, forms the backbone of any school and its inclusive community.

It would be appropriate for the policy-making body governing any school to have at least one goal pertaining to the acquisition and implementation of curriculum, and its relevance to the community.

Sincerely,
Mary Lee Campbell

Community blood drive a success in spite of flu season

Dear Editor:

I would like to thank everyone who participated in the success of the Charlevoix community blood drive on Jan. 22.

Even though it was held during peak flu and cold season, we made it over our goal of 100 units by collecting 103 transfusable units!

Thanks to the cheerful donors and volunteers, the Lions Club, Ole-son's Foods and city employees. I greatly appreciate all the businesses and city offices who helped to promote the bloodmobile with posters and flyers.

The next scheduled Red Cross blood drive in Charlevoix is Thursday, May 28. See you then.

Reader enjoyed Marilyn Boss's column

Dear Editor,

It was a real treat to read Marilyn Boss's rendering of the Charlie and Clarence Heise story (Jan. 7). Charlie was my grandfather and I heard several versions of this event — usually at the dinner table up on State Street. This town could probably write a book about the antics Charlie and Clarence used to express their profound love for one another.

Over Christmas, Charlie Bleha retold another story involving Charlie Heise and that A & P store (now Koucky's). The alley behind the A & P was shared by Charlevoix Coal and Ice (now Birdie's hair salon) which Grandpa Heise owned. Charlie Heise figured out how to jigger the latch on the back door of the grocery store. He would sneak through the alley between the two shops, "borrow" a six-pack of beer from the cooler and take it back to the coal office (and probably sample one too).

Then grandpa would call up Charlie Bleha, proprietor of the A & P and rightful owner of the stolen beer, to come through the alley to have one "on him."

Charlie Bleha laughs now, saying that he was glad when he finally figured out why his inventory was sometimes a hit off. He didn't let on to grandpa that he knew, however — because he enjoyed a break now and then from the 16-hour days spent running the grocery store.

Performing arts team takes home awards from district meet
Special awards for original script and score

The Charlevoix High School performing arts team competed at district championships Jan. 31 at John Glenn High School in Bay City. They presented "Isle of Tears," a play written by coach Connie Ford, with musical score written by Sulane Hamilton.

Competing against seven other schools, the group finished in third place, missing second place by just one point.

Three superior awards were given at the competition, and Charlevoix took one for the entire ensemble, meaning that each student took a superior acting award.

Other awards earned by Charlevoix students were: Excellence awards in acting, presented to Nick Kessler, Caleb Levensgood, Jennifer Ricks and Danica Kilander; excellence for sets, set design and costuming, presented to the crew.

The cast will go to the regional competition Feb. 14. State competition will be Feb. 20-21.

The play will be presented to the public in Charlevoix Feb. 28 and March 1.

Special awards went to Ford and Hamilton for their writing of the play and the musical score.

The Rayders were no doubt helped along to their third win in a row by the Charlevoix varsity cheerleaders.

Area man honored for help with Vietnam Monument

Thomas W. Browe of Charlevoix recently became a Founding Sponsor of the Michigan Vietnam Monument. Browe participated in the campaign to raise funds to build the monument in Lansing on the State Capitol grounds.

The Vietnam Monument is well on its way to reaching its fund raising goal of $2.3 million. The names of all Founding Sponsors will be listed in the Founding Sponsor Registry, which will be maintained at the Michigan Department of Military and Veterans' Affairs in Lansing.

The monument project is a collaboration between the public and private sectors in honoring the patriotism of Michigan citizens who served, died, were imprisoned or are missing because of America's longest and most controversial war.

The grounds will offer a place of quiet reflection and provide a sense of closure for Michigan Vietnam veterans and their families.

Charlevoix grads earn spots on Dean's Lists

Jessica VanGuilder, daughter of Dennis and Dianne VanGuilder of Charlevoix, was named to the Dean's List at Calvin College. VanGuilder maintained a grade point average of at least 3.5 and had a cumulative grade point average of 3.3 to earn a spot on the Dean's List.

Kristin Czerkes, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Steve Czerkes of Charlevoix, was named to the Dean's List at Ferris State University. To be eligible, Czerkes had to maintain a 3.5 grade point average in at least 12 semester hours of work.

Alma College has named nearly 400 students to the Dean's List for outstanding academic performance during the 1997 fall term, which ended Dec. 12.

Students who achieved a 3.5 or better grade point average during a term, while carrying a minimum of 13 credits (at least eight of which are evaluative grades), were named to the Dean's List. Making the Dean's List at Alma College are Charlevoix High School graduates Jamie Doan and Jeffrey Joy.

Amy Gale Phillips, daughter of Dave and Gale Phillips of Charlevoix was on the Dean's list last semester with a 3.5 grade point average at Central Michigan University.

Amy is currently interning in the news department at TV 9&10.

Rainbow Shoppe helps many community organizations

The year 1997 proved to be a most successful year for the Rainbow Shoppe. Their policy throughout the 14 years they have been in business is to reach out to nonprofit organizations.

Among the Charlevoix recipients who benefitted from the Rainbow Shoppe are the Ministerial Association, Senior Center, Charlevoix Area Hospital, Teen Center, Historical Society, Community Food Pantry, Christmas Project, Camp McSaubia Camper-ship, Yaeger and Dobrowski fireworks victims, Matthew 25 Food Pantry, the high school class party, the K-5 class trip, Camp Quality, Serenity House and the Emergency Housing Task Force.

Others who have received their help are Keryx Prison Ministry, Wagbo Peace Center, Habitat for Humanity, Grandvue Ministries, Crisis Pregnancy, "Who's in Charge," Airos Ministry (prison), Salvation Army, Grandvue Memory Walk, Nehemiah House, Youth for Christ, Open Door Christian Coffee House (East Jordan) and Northern Michigan Hospital Chaplaincy.

In addition to these recipients, the Rainbow Shoppe has helped many destitute families with clothing or medical bills and to people that have been burned out of their homes.

This all added up to $60,000 and with the continued help from the community, they will be able to reach out again next year.

Women's Resource Center provides college scholarships at NCMC

The Women's Resource Center of Northern Michigan, Inc. has a program to assist men and women with qualifying for college tuition assistance at North Central Michigan College (NCMC). For the 1997/1998 school year, over $17,000 of assistance has been awarded to students through the program.

The assistance helps students with course costs, texts, and child care expenses associated with their studies.

The program is primarily targeted to assist single parents, displaced homemakers, single pregnant women, and homemakers with the costs of completing occupational studies. In addition, any person contemplating an occupation considered "non-traditional" for the individual's gender might also be a candidate for the Sex Equity portion of these grants. Women taking engineering, drafting, or criminal justice careers, and men considering secretarial or nursing degrees are examples of non-traditional opportunities available at NCMC.

To find out if you meet eligibility guidelines, call 347-0067 and request a tuition assistance application. All applicants must also apply for federal financial aid (Pell Grant), provide proof of income, and complete interest and aptitude tests. Fully completed applications received by May 11 will be given greatest consideration. Classes for the summer semester are scheduled to begin June 15.

BEACONS

Beacons of Blessings
By Joe Johnston, Associate Pastor
Charlevoix Assembly of God

Would you die for a lie?

A number of years ago I had the opportunity to talk to a man about his need for a Savior. I was visiting one of the southern states and just happened to engage in conversation with this man on a park bench. He was a very nice man and I soon came to realize that he was a Jew.

In our conversation he admitted his need for a Savior but was unwilling to trust that Jesus was the Christ, the Messiah. At one point he told me that, according to his opinion, Jesus was not resurrected from the dead. Now, being a Jew, he had a background in Jewish history, so he knew that the life of Jesus is a historical fact. But "the fact of the resurrection is too far fetched," he said.

So, let me ask you, would you die for a lie? What does a lie and death have to do with the resurrection of Jesus from the dead? This is it. If the resurrection had not happened, then surely the disciples would have known about it. Did they fake it? I do not think so.

Do you remember the Watergate trial? There were seven men that cleverly concocted an intricate lie to protect the President of the United States. The examiners of the men were amazed how the stories were in the beginning exactly the same. Their lie seemed to be foolproof. However, after two months of repeated questioning, their lie for the Commander-in-Chief began to unravel. In the end, the men backed off of their stand. Their stories changed because they were not willing to take the full load of the guilty verdict. The truth finally came out.

Now, who could possibly believe the followers of Jesus would have concocted an elaborate lie and back it up with their lives? Did they die for a lie? Would you? Look at the disciples. Peter was crucified upside down. Matthew was beheaded. Andrew, James, Philip, Simon and Bartholomew were all crucified. James, the brother of Jesus, was stoned to death. Thomas was thrust through with a spear and Thaddeus was killed by arrows. There were also others who were hoiled in oil or pulled to pieces.

It does not seem logical to think these people would have given their lives for a story. Thus, the bodily resurrection of Jesus Christ is true and factual.

Let me challenge you to become more secure about what you believe which is factual about Jesus. He is Lord and Savior of all who repent and accept Him. If you want more information contact me at 547-6430.

It's Sno time!

Mt. McSaubia Sno Challenge offers new schedule of events

By Jamie MacMillan

With all the buzz recently over changes in the Venetian Festival, it's easy to forget that Charlevoix's winter carnival, the Mt. McSaubia Sno Challenge, is just around the corner.

While it remains unclear if any changes will be made for the summer festival, the 41st Sno Challenge will wear a different look than usual this February.

Typically a two-day affair on Saturday and Sunday, this year the challenge will be split up, with the ski races running the evening of Thursday, Feb. 12 and the truck and snowmobile drag races on the afternoon of Saturday, Feb. 14.

City recreation director Ike Boss said the changes hope to maximize crowds. The ski races had been the Sunday afternoon portion of the festival, but number of participants had dropped down into the 30s.

"Doing the skiing at night should give us a better turnout with kids and parents," Boss said. "We'd like to get back to around 100 racers."

Boss also said freeing up Sunday afternoon would give the festival a cushion day, should weather factors force a postponement. If there's no need for an extra day, the slope can remain open to the general public for at least part of the weekend.

"We turn away a lot of skiers," Boss said. "It's a busy weekend, people come up and want to ski, but find out we're closed."

Two other changes will mark this year's festival. No fireworks will be launched during the event, and the downhill thunder tube races have been canceled. Liability for both were deemed too high, Boss said.

The format for everything else will remain the same.

Registration for the ski and snowboard races begins at 5 p.m., with races starting at 6 p.m. Trophies will be awarded for the three finishers in each age group and all racers will earn ribbons. Entry fee is $2.

Saturday, the 4X4 truck hill climb-drag race will begin at 11 a.m., with registration opening at 10 a.m. The snowmobile side-by-side drag races will begin at 1 p.m., with registration starting at noon. Entry fee is $10 and participants must be at least 18 years old.

The Charlevoix Fire Department will sell concessions.

The truck hill climb and drag races will run all afternoon Saturday, Feb. 14 during the Sno Challenge. Children's ski and snowboard races have been moved to Thursday night, with the hope of drawing more participants and spectators. (Courier file photo)

Gym gets new sound system

By Jamie MacMillan

If the voices from the loudspeakers in the Charlevoix High School gymnasium sound more clear and crisp than usual, don't check your ears.

The reason is simple — the board of education recently invested some money to revamp the current sound system, labeled by one board member during their last meeting as "an embarrassment to Charlevoix."

"By all accounts it was judged that the present system was poor and needed an upgrade," assistant principal Keith Haske said.

Ascom North Inc., a sound store in Acme, was awarded the job during a special board meeting Thursday, Jan. 22, over Buday's Sound Advice and Sight and Sound.

Ascom's bill will be $3,711.92 for one Electro-Voice handheld microphone with a 20-foot cord and stand and two Soundsphere ceiling speakers.

Haske noted that Ascom's bid was not only the cheapest, but that they had more experience setting up systems for gymnasiums. Ascom worked on Boyne City High School's sound system last year.

The system is expected to be installed during the first week of February.

The district had looked into doing a more expensive job on the sound upgrade but ruled it out.

"In this time of budgetary concerns, the board felt they didn't want to do anything extravagant," Haske reported. "If two speakers is a good enough investment, then great. We can always go back for two more if it doesn't make us happy."

Haske noted that all the events taking place in the gymnasium from athletic contests to graduation, band, performing arts performances and school dances will improve due to better sound.

No more thunder

Sadly, the Thunder tube races have been eliminated from the Sno Challenge Festival because of the liability risk. If you want to ride on a Thunder tube, you must now travel to Australia, where the lack of contingency lawyers enables the folks Down Under to continue with the wild and crazy event of Thunder tube racing.

New gift shop for unusual items

By Laurie Lounsbury

It was a fluke of life that brought Debbie and John Peterson to northern Michigan, but it was no fluke when Debbie opened a gift shop in Charlevoix.

"This is something I've wanted to do forever," Debbie said. "It's always been a dream of mine."

The Petersons were living downstate in Redford Township 15 years ago when their lives were turned upside down.

They had put their home up for sale with the intention of moving closer to John's place of employment. Thinking it would take six months to a year to sell their house, the Petersons hadn't even started looking for another home. To their surprise, their home sold immediately. In that same week, John was informed that the company he worked for was closing.

"We said to ourselves, 'We've got nothing here, so let's go to Charlevoix and start over,'" Debbie said.

Charlevoix was the place that the Petersons had visited every weekend to go camping, so they were quite familiar with the area.

John got a job at Manthei and has worked there since they moved to Charlevoix. Debbie worked part time at various places, waiting for the right time to launch a business.

The time came two weeks ago, when Debbie and her daughter, Dawn, opened Waterland Creations Gift Shop on U.S. 31 south, in the Airport Plaza. The Petersons will be assisted at the store by sales associate Beverly Morris.

The store features Christmas and Jewish gifts all year, along with a wide variety of unusual gifts.

"We're trying to have a little bit of everything," Debbie said.

Not missing a corner of the gift market, the store will have a bridal registry, high school graduate gifts, a line of outdoor wildlife gifts, lighted, stained glass lighthouses and seasonal gifts. Debbie will listen to customer's needs and requests to decide what to carry.

"For the first year, it (the inventory) will probably change every day," Debbie said.

Gifts will range in price and variety to suit any customer. Lines of local suppliers, such as Rocky Top jams, Bullfrog candles, and Iverson snowshoes are always available.

Unique religious pieces, such as Nativity scenes by Fontanini, are also available.

"We don't want to be a regular gift store," Debbie said. "We're looking for unusual gifts."

Providing extra customer service is part of Debbie's plan for the store. They will offer gift-wrapping, not only for gifts from their store but gifts from other businesses, for a small charge. They will also offer a flexible layaway program.

"I've been in that boat before, where you really want something, but can't afford to pay for it all at once," Debbie said.

Waterland Creations will be hosting a grand opening Saturday, Feb. 7 from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. Regular store hours are Monday-Saturday from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. and Sunday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

For more information, call the store at 547-7550.

James Pop grapples his way to the top

By Jamic MacMillan

Charlevoix junior James Pop continues to be a shining star in what has been another rebuilding year for the Rayder wrestling program.

With barely enough grapplers to fill out half of the weight divisions, Pop has been a model for those who will follow on the team.

In five contests last week, Pop, wrestling in the 171-pound division, won three matches, pinning his opponent in each win.

The week started last Thursday in a tri-meet with Rogers City and Onaway. Pop easily pinned both his opponents. His teammate Robert Torres also pinned an opponent from Onaway for a victory, but lost his match against Rogers City. Torres wrestles in the 125-pound division.

Ben Macks, 160, and Jerry Borths, heavyweight, also wrestled but lost both of their contests.

Pop was the only Rayder that coach Joe Johnston brought to last Saturday's Northern Michigan Tournament of Champions in Gaylord.

"There was a lot of tough competition," Johnson said of the field that had wrestlers from 24 high schools. Petoskey, Cheboygan, Gaylord, Onaway, Roscommon and Cadillac were some of the schools that participated in the double-elimination tournament.

In the first round, Pop grappled with a wrestler from Munising. Locked in an even battle, Pop found himself tied up and after 20 seconds of fighting was pinned midway in the second period.

Wrestling matches are divided into three, two minute periods.

Pop rebounded in his second match against Eric Rice of Petoskey. After alternating take downs, Pop found himself up 6-3 before subduing and pinning Rice with 20 seconds left in the second round.

"They have such a good program it's always good to beat them," Johnston said.

In the third match, Pop was pitted against Nick Gabara of Alpena. Pop quickly earned a 2-1 advantage in the first round. Neither wrestler earned any advantage in the second round, but Gabara rallied to pin Pop with just over a minute left in the match.

Rayder wrestlers will be in action twice this week. On Tuesday, they'll be in Mesick for a tri-meet with Mesick and Cadillac beginning at 6:30 p.m. Thursday, they'll wrestle at Grayling at 6 p.m.

JV and freshmen follow in varsity footsteps with two-win sweep

Charlevoix's junior varsity and freshmen teams matched their varsity counterparts with two game sweeps last week vs. East Jordan and Harbor Springs.

Todd Klinger's JV squad was trailing 21-16 on the road against East Jordan in the early second quarter, but exploded on a 45-5 run over the next two quarters, opening a 61-26 advantage. The Rayders cruised in the fourth quarter for a 75-42 win.

"We turned it up defensively which translated into scoring opportunities for us," Klinger said.

Shay Hutchison led all scorers with 25 points, 11 in the third quarter. Russ Ward added 13 and Adam Wood scored 11.

They were in more of a battle last Friday night against Harbor Springs as the Rams stymied the Rayder attack with some sticky zone defense. Harbor led 15-14 after one quarter, 26-24 at the half, and 39-37 after three quarters.

Ward scored all nine of his points in the fourth quarter as Charlevoix survived 52-50.

Hutchison led the Rayders with 23 points and 10 rebounds. Ward had nine boards to go with his nine points and Andy Granath also pulled in seven rebounds. Ryan Vogelheim swiped four steals.

The JV's record is even at 6-6. This week they play Tuesday, Feb. 3 vs. Roscommon and Friday, Feb. 6 at Traverse City St. Francis.

The freshmen squad notched their second and third wins of the season with a 69-43 drubbing of East Jordan and a 54-50 win over Harbor Springs.

The Rayders jumped to a 40-25 halftime lead against East Jordan. Ben Coen led the team with 14 points, Zach Dennis scored 12 and Dennis Mitchell chipped in 11.

Against the Rams, Charlevoix was on the wrong end of a 36-24 halftime score, but bounced back for the win, outscoring Harbor 30-14 in the second half.

Matt Horon scored 13 points, Will Wright scored nine, and Doug Reick added eight with two three-pointers. Wright and Ben Vanguilder grabbed eight rebounds apiece and Ryan Leitner dished out five assists and swiped three steals.

Despite scoring just one basket, George Sikorski lifted the club through a tight fourth quarter with a couple blocked shots and a key offensive rebound.

"His play sparked us," coach Brandon Bruce said. "The kids were motivated and rallied behind that."

The team next plays Friday, Feb. 6 at Traverse City St. Francis. Tip-off is 4:15 p.m.

Volleyball teams get unexpected break in schedule

Charlevoix's volleyball teams received an unexpected break from their schedule this week when their contest at Harbor Springs last Thursday evening was canceled.

A flu bug, which caused many absences in Charlevoix earlier in January and forced the suspension of classes for two days in neighboring Boyne City, breezed into Harbor, forcing their district to close down last Thursday.

According to Charlevoix athletic director Keith Haske, the game has been rescheduled for Monday, Feb. 23. The game will be in Harbor Springs and first serve in the JV contest will be at 6 p.m.

This week, the squads will square off with the Elk Rapids Elks in the Charlevoix High School gymnasium at 6 p.m. Thursday, Feb. 5.

An error in last week's volleyball story mentioned the Rayders were in first place with a 6-0 record and three teams lodged behind them at 3-2; East Jordan, Kalkaska, and Traverse City St. Francis.

Indeed, the Rayders are atop the league with an unblemished record, but it overlooked the Elks, who are bucking at the Rayders' heels with a 5-1 league mark.

We regret the error.

In December, the Rams upended the Elks 5-15, 15-12, 15-11, 15-5.

County board passes new law, raises building fees

By Jamie MacMillan
Charlevoix County Commissioner's tidied up some old business during their last session Wednesday evening.

Without dissent they passed an animal control ordinance and a resolution increasing building permit fees.

After a public hearing, in which only one resident illustrating his bad experiences with loose dogs spoke about the ordinance, the board easily passed the new laws.

The ordinance outlines duties for the county's animal control officer, but, more importantly, now gives the officer more control. It also enables prosecutors to haul violators into court for any offense committed by their pet such as running at large, excessive barking and assault.

Crimes are considered misdemeanors and owners could be subject to a $100 fine and 90 days in jail while their pooches can be confined as well and, in some cases, euthanized.

County planner Larry Sullivan noted the ordinance should be labeled a "dog ordinance" because nothing in the new laws pertain to cats. It was noted by commissioners that if deemed necessary at a later date they could always go back and amend the laws to include cats.

For the first time since 1984, county building fees will be increased after another unanimous decision.

Commissioner James Behling noted that the department of building inspection has gone $92,000 over budget for the last five years and an increase in fees will help prevent that.

The department has also added one-and-one-half staff members to their payroll, another reasoning behind the fee increase.

Finally, the board heard two more complaints from citizens regarding the Cedar Ridge Landfill expansion. Jerry Puhl, president of WATCH (Water Air Team Charlevoix), and Elmer Crain voiced their disapproval.

Frustrated by dealing with an issue already decided upon, the board mandated that any future opinions on the landfill be directed to the agendas of either the county planners or solid waste committee, the two government boards now charged with the solid waste future of the county. The commissioners next meet at 9:30 a.m. Wednesday, Feb. 11 in the commissioner's room adjacent to the county clerk's office.

SCRAPBOOK

High school test for diploma undergoes changes

By Jamie MacMillan

The High School Proficiency Test, which Michigan 11th grade students need to pass before receiving a state-endorsed diploma, will be undergoing a transformation in style and time line due to changes in six different pieces of state legislation.

While local educators endorse some of the changes, it still leaves them scratching their heads wondering about reinventing the wheel.

"It's peculiar," Charlevoix High School principal Gary Grundman said. "The test is so new, you wonder why they're changing so quickly."

Governor John Engler signed the legislation on Dec. 30, 1997 approving the changes which passed in both the Senate and House last month after tinkering with the bills' specific language.

Typically given during January of high-school students junior year, the proficiency test will now be taken sometime during the final 30 days of the school year. Other changes include reducing the time allotted for taking the test from 16 hours to eight, the addition of a social studies section, a reduction of scoring requirements to dual enroll in college courses, and having the test graded by a panel of Michigan educators instead of sending it out-of-state from grading.

Grundman said placing the test toward the end of the year will give schools more time to prepare their students. He said when the test was given in January it coincided with the beginning of a new semester, creating a strain on faculty and class scheduling.

"We basically take the juniors out of class for a week, and it disrupts our process," Grundman said. "We have to put our curriculum aside, redo class schedules, and throw away two good weeks of prime teaching time."

Xavier Gaudard, Boyne City High School principal, said moving the test so close to final exams was a worry and that the school may use the proficiency test as part of their finals. Overall, though, the move to the end of the year, he said, will help the test live up to its name.

"It'll be more of a high school proficiency test rather than a ninth and tenth grade proficiency test."

Grundman did say he was a bit leery of condensing the test to eight hours because it's a highly scrutinized test with high stakes.

He noted that with a smaller test, there's a fear of overemphasizing a subject that now won't be on the test while underemphasizing a subject that now has more importance. It'll be interesting, he said, how it affects overall scores.

Gaudard called the shorter test "great" because it frees up more class time.

A potential snag with the new test might be the addition of a social studies section, beginning with the 1999 exam. Students will be tested on economics, government, U.S. and world history, and geography. Some schools might be caught off guard and offer just basic courses in those subjects during freshman year rather than having continual curriculum on the subject.

Both Grundman and Gaudard said their schools are retooling their social studies courses to maximize results. Neither expect their scores to dip with a new section. Gaudard said his school has been aware of the new section and has been re-shaping curriculum for three years. Grundman, meanwhile, said most of the courses such as government are junior-level classes, so information will be fresh in students' minds heading into the exam.

As for dual enrollment requirements for students who want to enter a college level class that the high school does not offer, it's expected to have little local impact. In the past, a student had to pass all sections of the proficiency test in order to qualify for dual enrollment. With the changes, all a student needs to do is pass a specific section to qualify for dual enrollment within that field of study.

What's inside

From petunia-lined streets...

This is the first story in a series called, "From petunia-lined streets..." The series will look at young men and women from Charlevoix who are now in the working world. How well did Charlevoix — as a community and as a school district — prepare them for the world beyond our petunia-lined streets?

The sheepskin says she's Nancy Dammann, Harvard graduate, magna cum laude honors. But the grinning, ingenuous girl sitting cross-legged in front of the hearth says she's Nancy Dammann, Charlevoix local.

Indeed, she is both. So how does a rural Charlevoix kid get into — and out of — the scholarly halls of Harvard with a degree and top honors?

Rootedness. Groundedness. A sense of family and community.

These are a few of the things Dammann mentioned when she explained how she got a Harvard education without coming unglued in the process.

"I knew how to have a sense of balance," Dammann said. "I knew studying and school weren't the be-all and end-all of my life. And I knew having friends and family was really important."

Imagine a rural kid who grew up in the quiet serenity of the woods on Lake Charlevoix stepping into an imposing, ivy-covered Harvard building for the first time.

"It was really scary," Dammann said. "Being that far from home was really scary too."

Dammann was surrounded by intense, highly motivated kids from urban areas in New York, Massachusetts and Connecticut. Her peers had already been fast-tracking in preparatory schools along the eastern seaboard.

Y c t Dammann's rural background turned out to be her strength, not her undoing.

C o m i n g from Charlevoix, I had a real sense of rootedness," Dammann said.

"A lot of my friends who went to prep school didn't have that. There's definitely a Charlevoix attitude that family's important, and the community's important. There are a lot of good things here that aren't necessarily academic that helped prepare me."

"Suicides happen at schools like Harvard. Some kids feel disconnected. The kids who make it through there have family strength behind them."

Yet no one can deny that good academics are a huge criteria for survival in the hallowed halls of Harvard.

Did the Charlevoix School District help or hurt Dammann in the Ivy League arena?

Cops had a mixed bag of crime last year

By Jamie MacMillan

When city police chief Dennis Halverson and his officers reflect upon their careers, it is a good bet that 1997 will top their list of recollections.

From a fireworks explosion to a crack house bust to the first armed bank robbery in over a decade, city police saw a year punctuated with high intensity incidents.

"I can't ever recall so many high profile incidents within one calendar year," Halverson said.

The most traumatic and indelible event, Halverson said, was the Venetian fireworks explosion. He likened the scene to a war zone as he and his officers helped coordinate medical responses and keep the crowd and traffic from panicking. Making it more challenging was that nobody really had any idea of what had happened, only the result of the action.

"I was proud of how we handled that night," the chief recalled. "For most of us, we had not had any previous experience with an incident like that."

The year began on a hectic note for police when a homicide some 2,000 miles west of Charlevoix seeped into Halverson's jurisdiction.

The murder of Jon Benet Ramsey, the six-year-old beauty queen found dead in her parent's Colorado home, touched off a media crush never seen before in Charlevoix.

During January and February, when Charlevoix city police twice executed search warrants in the Ramsey's Belvedere Avenue summer home, Halverson said his home and office were besieged with at least five calls a day from a slew of media outlets. They were all seeking new insights and that elusive, not-yet-covered angle. What surprised Halverson was the range of media outlets, from prime time TV fame like 20/20, to locally obscure Colorado papers, to infamous tabloids like The Globe.

Throughout the year, Halverson said his office conducted numerous background interviews for Colorado detectives and spent time prepping for courtroom appearances when the sealing of the search warrants was being questioned. In all, he said he spent "hundreds of hours" working a case that occurred eight states west of Michigan.

Because of the attention devoted to the Ramsey case, Halverson said he felt that during the whole year "fewer things took more time."

When summer arrived, so did the Ramseys, with the tabloid press right behind them. This created a whole other aspect of the case, Halverson said, as police tried to balance the family's safety from tabloid harassment. Twice, police responded to harassment calls; once at the downtown hardware store and another time as the family was leaving the Episcopal Church on the corner of Clinton and State streets.

While the Ramsey case created ongoing strain, other singular incidents caused tense moments throughout the year.

In the morning hours of March 17, po-

Harvard grad says family, friends were biggest help

It was one Charlevoix High School teacher who unwittingly impacted Dammann's choice of study.

"I was positive I wanted to go into international diplomacy when I went to Harvard, but I still wanted to take a biology class," Dammann said. "I really like Spieles' bio class in high school, and I wanted to follow up with an advanced bio class."

Since biology has little to do with international diplomacy, Dammann found herself looking for the biology class in the school of environmental science. The department, she discovered, was small and friendly, much to her liking. She signed up for a biology class and a chemistry class.

"I was definitely very well-prepared in chemistry," she said.

Dammann found her niche in the field of environmental science, and graduated with a degree in environmental science and public policy.

"It's a degree for people who want to be in science and have an effect on public policy, or people who want to be in government and create environmental policy," Dammann explained.

Majoring in a scientific field didn't get Dammann out of a required, freshmen expository writing class. The class was one of the biggest hurdles Dammann had to clear.

"They taught a short, to-the-point, concise writing style," Dammann said. "It was completely different than what we learned here. At Charlevoix, you could get away with turning in these mondo term papers that wandered and wandered and weren't concise at all."

"That was definitely my worst habit. But I was well-prepared in other areas of English. I knew my grammar well, and I felt I was well-read."

The curriculum taught at Charlevoix High School put Dammann in a position of starting with entry level Harvard classes instead of leaping right into advanced placement classes.

"I felt like I had to play catch-up a little bit, but I did," Dammann said. "It was by no means insurmountable. I think taking entry level classes helped me build a better foundation."

Dammann was reluctant to pass judgment on the Charlevoix school system, knowing that curriculum and staffing changes have occurred since her departure.

The news of one change in the district brought a delighted smile to Dammann. It is the district's policy to include handicapped students in regular classes through the high school level. A close friend of Dammann's, who was wheelchair-bound, didn't attend high school with her, to Dammann's dismay.

"I think it's so wonderful and necessary to include handicapped kids," Dammann said. "Learning how to appreciate them and learning what they have to offer is so important. The world is filled with all different types of people, including people in wheelchairs."

The appreciation of diversity was something Dammann found lacking in some of her friends who attended eastern prep schools.

"Prep schools are filled with one type of kid," Dammann said. "If people think the world revolves around the Ivy League then they have a really limited view of the world.

"Charlevoix doesn't let you think that way. It's too small. Here, we deal with diversity, with all aspects of the community — everyone."

While Dammann found her niche at Harvard, she doesn't think it's the ideal school for everyone.

"Harvard doesn't necessarily encourage creativity," Dammann said. "Coming from here, where creativity was so important and encouraged, I was upset to have to give that up at Harvard."

Dammann enjoyed painting at Charlevoix High School, but couldn't fit any art classes into her demanding Harvard schedule.

Encouraging students to have big dreams is one thing Dammann would like to see happening more often in Charlevoix.

"I don't think kids are quite allowed to dream enough," Dammann said. "Kids are encouraged to be whatever they want to be, but not to go wherever they want to go (to college). There's a lot of emphasis on the financial aspects of college, but the reality is, you don't need that much (to go to an out-of-state school). Financial aid is available."

"Because we're a close community, sometimes people don't want to go to school far away from home. They have a fear of losing touch. For me, that fear was totally unwarranted."

Teacher support was also something Dammann said is needed in Charlevoix.

"I felt like a lot of the teachers (in Charlevoix) didn't get the support they needed so they were burned out," Dammann said. "They seemed overwhelmed, often with 30 kids in a class. Teachers need support and educational resources."

In the final analysis, Dammann didn't hesitate at all when asked what enabled her to earn a Harvard degree.

"It was 100 percent the support of my family and friends," Dammann said.

Answering almost simultaneously, her parents Tom and Sara Gay Dammann blurted out a different response —

"It was 100 percent Nancy," they said.

United Methodist Church will host women's health conference

There is a slow-dying myth in this country that heart disease is a man's problem. In fact, heart disease is the most frequent cause of death among women in the United States. There are facts women need to know to protect their health, and in some instances changes they need to make in their lives.

On Saturday, Feb. 14, Northwest Michigan Community Health Agency and the American Heart Association will sponsor a women's health conference. Heart, Mind and Spirit, a conference for women of all ages will be at the United Methodist Church in Charlevoix. The keynote speaker is Dr. Ruth B. Hoppe, associate Dean of Internal Medicine at the College of Human Medicine at Michigan State University. She is a geriatrician, and maintains a practice seeing primarily older women. She has a special interest in heart disease in women and has presented at many conferences and seminars.

"We're finding that heart disease looks the same in women as in men, although the signs and symptoms appear typically 10 to 15 years later in women," said Dr. Hoppe. When asked about things women can do to protect themselves from heart disease, Dr. Hoppe stressed the importance of hormone replacement therapy.

The featured speaker at Heart,

Mind, and Spirit will be Kimberly Stec, Miss Michigan 1997. Miss Stec is a senior at the University of Michigan pursuing a bachelor of science degree in engineering. Her mission as Miss Michigan is to promote healthy lifestyles in schools, work places and communities. She is a spokesperson for the American Heart Association. Registration fee is $20 including lunch and snacks.

To register, call Northwest Michigan Community Health Agency at 547-6523.

What people are saying

"It's mandatory that we grow older — but it's optional that we grow up."

— Hagen Manker, 47, after a long day of snow boarding that included several hard falls. Manker acknowledged the falling part was easier when he was a kid.

"We're clearing the fields so we can plant some crops."
— Tim Wieland, Whitney's Oyster Bar employee, who helped remove a giant cedar stump that was impeding the construction process. The crops, in this case, are a new basement and restaurant.

Complex cases took time

lice, along with SANE ( Straits Area Narcotic Enforcement team), culminated a long undercover operation by raiding what authorities dubbed a crack house on 214 Mason St. Police arrested two occupants who are now serving jail time, and confiscated amounts of cocaine and marijuana, most of the buy money used to stage a drug deal, and a potpourri of drug paraphernalia.

A wild trio of events preceded the first weekend of September. On Wednesday, Sept. 4 city police aided a sheriff's officer in subduing an armed gunman who had created a standoff between himself and authorities. The next night, city police helped maintain security during the Whitney's Oyster Bar fire. On Friday, Sept. 6, both the city and sheriff's department responded to an armed robbery of the First of America Bank on U.S. 31, the first armed bank robbery in Halverson's tenure as police chief.

Halverson said the high profile incidents reflect national trends of increased crime in rural small towns. While big city crime may be on the decline, the money needed for better equipment and training appear to be pushing the crime out into smaller communities. According to police statistics, crime in towns of less than 25,000 increased 53 percent between 1983 and 1995.

In addition to the high stakes crime, city police noted an increase in traffic accidents within city limits during 1997. Last year, city police responded to 323 fender-benders, up from 258 in 1996.

Accidents increased despite police receiving $2,000 in grant money, the equivalent of 100 hours of overtime pay so officers could devote extra time to patrolling traffic. Halverson said the extra cash and hours helped to curtail the increasing rate of accidents.

Halverson noted that parking lots such as Oleson's and Glen's were recurring accident sites. He said each site had between 15 and 20 accidents — at least once a week during the summer.

Police work has its lighter side

Not everything was a high profile crime in 1997, as city police responded to 2,574 general assistance calls. The following is a sampling of those calls, which reflect life in a small town.

Police responded to a call on June 16 reporting kids jumping in the fishpond. The kids left by the time police arrived, and no trout appeared violated.

On July 4, police dealt with a pot hole of stinky proportions — they responded to a report of a pile of horse manure on Park Avenue. After determining it was the carriage operator's horse and not the police horse who left the offending pile, the carriage operator agreed to clean it up.

On July 12, police came to the help of the Beaver Island Boat Company, which was having prickly problems with a porcupine. The porcupine, though, was never found, leaving police chief Halverson to speculate that it probably was a visiting Beaver Island porcupine who had to tend to some mainland business.

On July 23, police found themselves, as the song goes, working at the car wash. They were helping one of the Charlevoix Car Wash's clients recover a lost set of keys which had fallen down the floor drain. Whoever this was should not feel absent-minded, as Halverson said his office receives one call a day on the average of people locking keys in their car.

On Sept. 2, police were called to verify that 375 ping pong balls were in the chamber of commerce car drawing. No truth to the rumor that the entire force showed up barefoot to help.

On Oct. 18, city police rescued late night dinners for countless folks by helping Pizza Hut employees reenter their restaurant after locking themselves out.

Finally, on Nov. 26 an elderly subject had fallen out of his chair and police responded, brushed him off, and got the gentleman back on his feet again.

OPINIONS

Olympic commentators are part of the entertainment

Laurie Lounsbury

My first chance to watch any Olympic coverage came Sunday night when CBS was airing the men's snowboarding competition. Even in my post-weekend, exhausted frame of mind I was able to discern a noticeable change in sports commentary.

I guess I should have expected it.

Snowboarding is a wild and crazy, ride 'em cowboy type of sport.

The commentators matched their words to the event.

"This course is a lot turnier than most courses, which is great for this dude. He really likes turny courses," the announcer said.

Turney? Turnier? Are those words in Webster's Dictionary? No.

Most of the other words they used were in the dictionary, but their meaning has been altered by the snowboarding industry.

"Man, that was awesome — this guy's really stoked," was the description of one snowboarder's performance.

The snowboard commentators were a breath of fresh air — they were totally unhearsable, speaking with a youthful passion for their adolescent-aged sport.

They had a happy go lucky, I-can't-believe-they're-paying-me-to-do-this, Scott Stillings type of delivery.

I found it amusing to contrast the snowboard commentary with the other sports commentators.

"That was a very costly error," Scott Hamilton said in a well-mod-

"Man, he bashed it big time," was how the snowboard commentator described a snowboarding mistake of similar magnitude.

Each sport seems to have commentators who reflect the nature of their sporting event.

The speed skating commentators develop a sing-songy rhythm that matches the rhythm of the skater.

"He's rounding — the corner... "He's ahead — by three... "He'll set — a new record... "If he don't — hit a tree..."

OK — they didn't say that last line, but you get the idea.

The luge commentator talked really fast without saying much of anything. It figures. Luge racers go really fast without doing much of anything. Unless you count toe-pointing as a tremendous athletic skill.

The cross-country skiing commentator worked really hard to try and make the event sound exciting. The skiers worked really hard to try and make home-viewing a little more exciting. We particularly liked the racing tuck of one cross-country skier. She couldn't have been going faster than 1/2 mile-per-hour, yet she lowered her head and tucked for all it was worth while she glided ever so slowly to the finish line.

Downhill ski racing commentators have a Jimmy Stewart delivery that mimics the racers' run. Sometimes they deliver a smooth, complete sentence, and other times they crash and burn in the agony of de fragmented sentences.

"Tommy's looking really good as he rounds the fifth gate, he's turning high and well-positioned for his next — ahhh, ow — he's down and — ah, ohh — that had to hurt but now he's up — ohh, no he's not — yow, there goes the snow fence — back to you, Dick."

Even the slow time is filled with discussion that makes each event unique. The cross-country commentator told stories about the female competitors, their pregnancies, child birth, and how difficult it was for them to fit back into that tight ski suit. Figure skating commentators filled slow time with philosophical discussions of skater's music selections for the short program, or love stories among the pair skaters. Snowboard commentators filled in with an entirely different type of background information on the competitors.

"He took up snowboarding so he could go to parties," the commentator said of one athlete.

"Well, if he wins today he'll be raging," said the other commentator.

"The pairs triple toe loop is extremely difficult to synchronize," said the figure skating commentator.

"Listen to that ice, it's firm daddy," said the snowboard commentator.

"The death spiral is a required element of the short program," said the figure skating commentator.

"He's lettin' it all hang out, bashing those gates, but he skatched out on that one," said the snowboard commentator.

Obviously, each sporting event has its own jargon. But the snowboarding jargon is hip-hop, lively and colorful.

It's not just the new rage — it's raging, dude.

Letters to the editor

Pool should change ways and try to work with community

Editor:
Dear Mr. Hansen, Friends of the Pool president:

You say rules can change. You have certainly got that right — every time we come to the pool the rules change. You are way off base. You say we need to give Libby Hicks the pool director a chance. She had many chances and she's been rude and obnoxious to young and old alike. This is a community pool. Community, meaning a group of people having a common interest. Give the community a chance to put our ideas into action. Listen to us and not just one person. We as parents only want what is best for our children and we think sitting on the sidelines is much more effective than being in the water. If I'm in the pool swimming on one end, and my child is somewhere else, with all the noise it would be very difficult for me to know if she or he needed help. Sitting on deck I can scan everything more easily.

We all want a safe environment for our children, but demanding us to be in the water isn't safe. Some parents can't even swim. What about someone with health problems who can't go in the water? Then should we discriminate and say your child isn't allowed at the pool?

You say that in special cases such as a party, a parent can bring numerous children — how could she watch all of them? Doesn't sound safe to me.

Many parents are excellent swimmers but choose not to swim. It's sad that we live in one community and have to support pools in other towns for entertainment.

Charlevoix is a great place to live, but we can make it better, please listen to us.
Cindy Martin

Pool policy may change in March

Dear Editor:

The Charlevoix Community Pool board and staff want to report to your readers that we are mulling over a number of changes in our swim rules and program offerings. We are helped in our thinking by suggestions we have received from our patrons (a patron is a customer with an additional loyalty to the underlying concept of the product; we hope all users of the pool become patrons!).

We expect, in March, to begin instituting changes. We will develop changes which will make swimming more accessible, and, hopefully, still not lose the safety, information availability and overall constructive tone of family participation. These changes take into account the fact that sometimes a family can't, or even doesn't want to swim together. Of course, we won't stop promoting swimming as a family activity.

Please keep a look-out for new schedules in March, or call 547-0982.

Steven Hansen, President
Charlevoix Friends of the Pool

Family thankful for help after fire claimed home

Dear Editor:

On the night of Dec. 21, 1997, my family and I sat in our car watching our home go up in flames, helpless, not having any way to save our home.

There is no way I will ever be able to put into words the feelings and thoughts that were running through me at that time. The only thing my husband could even say was, "Thank God! We all made it out alive."

So right he was, because we can replace our home and our things. But I would never be able to replace my husband of 15 years or my two sons who I love with my whole heart.

At this time, I would like to thank everyone who gave us so much when we did not even have shoes. There were so many people who gave so much; not just in personal items, but in support, hugs and by saying if there was anything we needed, just to ask. All has meant so much to us. Thank you.

I never in my life knew so many caring people live in and around Charlevoix. We got cards and letters from people who knew Kenny and my family years ago. We also got cards and letters from Don's IGA customers.

I would like to thank every last person for giving my family a special Christmas and a new start for 1998. May God bless each and every one for your help and thoughts.

Lucinda (Cindy) Burke

Landmark building will get new purpose

By Laurie Lounsbery

On a snowy evening in 1994, a small group of Beaver Islanders met to discuss the possibility of preserving an abandoned downtown building.

But where did they meet?

In someone's home? In the Shamrock restaurant?

One thing is certain — at the time of their meeting, they had no community center where island residents could gather in large numbers.

As a result of that meeting, Beaver Island will soon have just such a gathering place. The group formed the Preservation Association of Beaver Island, with the goal of acquiring the historical downtown building that most recently housed the Dockside Market, and turning it into the Beaver Island Community House.

In the four years that passed since their first meeting, the group has jumped through countless bureaucratic hoops to buy the building.

"The building fell into State hands after being an Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) project," said Marilyn Buckner, project director.

Before it became an EPA project, the building was owned by islander Richard Gillespie. Unknown to Gillespie, the property was contaminated from years of storing leaking oil drums near the site, which caused ground water contamination. After cleaning the contaminated soil at the site, the State took over ownership of the 100-year-old building. The State then put many deed restrictions on the property, saying it could only be used as green space or for public use.

Islanders didn't want green space — they wanted their historic building on the harbor to serve an island purpose, as it had for generations.

Built around 1897, the building first housed James McCann and Sons general store on the first floor and a dance hall and opera house on the second floor.

In the 1950's, ownership passed on to the LaFrenieres, who operated an island general store with the slogan, "If we don't have it, you don't need it."

"They carried everything, including caskets," Buckner said.

Gillespie carried on the retail tradition, operating a convenience store in the building.

Through the years, islanders gathered in the building, either to chat in the grocery store aisles or dance and listen to music upstairs.

That tradition will continue.

Plans for the Beaver Island Community House include a theater, assembly hall, teen center, children's day care and senior center, and exercise area and a business/conference room.

Renovation will cost millions

preservation group has planned don't come without a hefty price tag.

"We need to raise $2.4 million to renovate the structure, and we plan to raise an equal amount for its perpetual care," Buckner said.

While it sounds like a daunting task to raise that much money, Buckner is confident they can do it.

"With all the love of Beaver Island from seasonal and part-time residents, it's not a far-fetched project," she said.

The group will first apply for foundation grants, then look to individuals for donations. The final fund raising step will be to sell engraved bricks for $50 each and engraved marble tiles for $250 each.

Permanent name recognition is offered in the community house for people who buy a lifetime membership. A donation of $1,000 buys a founding membership, while a charter membership comes with a $500 donation. The lifetime membership offer is available only in 1998.

The Beaver Island Community House project caught the attention of the Charlevoix County Community Foundation, which contributed $4,325 to the project. It is one of the first donations toward the grand plan.

"We didn't want to just look a few years into the future," Buckner said. "We wanted to do a project that will carry us well into the next century."

Anyone who would like to make a tax-deductible donation should contact the preservation group at (616) 448-2022 or at their toll free number, (888) 603-5700.

BEACONS

OF BLESSINGS

By Rev. Philip G. Schairbaum
First Congregational Church

On the first Sunday of February I preached a sermon entitled "An Encircling Love." It seemed fitting inasmuch as February traditionally is thought of as "love month." I concluded with a poem that was found on an old Valentine that had been kept for years in a scrapbook by an elderly woman in Charlevoix who I recently came to know. I share it again by request, believing that the love it refers to is not simply the human attractions we usually celebrate on Feb. 14 each year, but the very love of God made known to us in the life and love of Jesus.

Love is the richest gift that can bestow,
Love is the sweetest joy hearts ever know.
Who would not prize it, love strong and true?
Who would despise it? Surely not you!
Heart-whispers tell it, if words are few.

Is there a shadow love cannot chase?
Leaving a rainbow there in its place?
Is there a burden love will not bear?
Is there a danger love will not dare?
Is there a boon or joy love will not share?

There is no distance love cannot span;
Love knows no limit since earth began.
Is there a pathway love cannot smooth?
Is there an anxious care love cannot soothe?

There is no heart-wound love cannot heal.
There is no sympathy love cannot feel,
There is no happiness love cannot make.
Brighter, and sweeter still just for love's sake.

Would you possess it? This love so true?
Know it is waiting right now for you.

May we embrace and be embraced by the love of God, not only for a day or a season, but for a lifetime and an eternity. A blessed Valentine's Day to all!

"Isle of Tears" tells story of immigrants

Long before the blockbuster movie "Titanic" came to the silver screen, performing arts teacher Connie Ford and Sulane Hamilton were busy working on an original script and musical score for a high school play titled, "Isle of Tears." It is the story of immigrants who make the trip to America by boat in 1910. Ellis Island was often called the Isle of Tears because immigrants, after making the long voyage to America in search of a new life, were often rejected by the immigration officers and sent back to their native lands. The performing arts team has brought the play to life, depicting the fear, joy, sadness and anticipation of immigrants coming to America. The cast is headed for regional competition Feb. 14. The play will be performed in Charlevoix Feb. 28 and March 1.

Danica Kilander and Nick Grosberg are young lovers looking for a future together in America.

Attorney made partner in Charlevoix firm

By Jamie MacMillan

The Charlevoix law firm of Pointner, Joseph, and Corcoran announced last week the addition of a new partner, Allen Telgenhof.

Telgenhof has been an associate in the firm since October, 1994. His concentration with the firm covers litigation, real estate, stockbroker malpractice, school law, and domestic relations.

"Allen is a fine person and an excellent lawyer," said firm founder Thomas D. Pointner. "He has made an outstanding contribution to our firm since moving to Charlevoix in 1994. We are delighted to welcome him as a partner in our firm."

Nurse earns rehab certificate

Lynn Adams, R.N., of Boulder Park Terrace's Rehabilitation Center, recently earned her certificate in Rehabilitation Nursing.

Adams has worked at Boulder Park since it opened in 1992, where she started in the long term care part of the facility. A nurse since 1985, Adams now works as the Rehabilitation Coordinator for the unit.

She attended one week of classes and then studied for six months before taking the certification examination.

Adams said that she enjoys working with geriatric patients and likes the rehab environment.

"I think the thing I like most is working to help patients get back into their own environment. I work with physicians, therapists and families to help patients as they recover," she commented.

"These patients are special. For me, it's like having many grandparents. They're so full of knowledge and they teach me many things that I could never learn anywhere else. They know about things because they've lived through them."

Lady Rayders tied for first place with Elk Rapids

In their first rematch during the second go-around of conference play, the Charlevoix Rayders volleyball team dropped their first regular season match to Elk Rapids, 10-15, 15-8, 8-15, 5-15.

Amanda Eaton led the team with seven aces and nine kills. Jamie Gowell added a solid three aces and four kills, Christine Sweeney had eight kills, and Lyndsey Blechel had three aces.

The loss drops the Rayders into a first place tie in the Lake Michigan Conference standings with the Elks. Both have 5-1 records with the only blemish being to each other.

In December, the Rayders bested the Elks 5-15, 15-12, 15-11, 15-5.

Winning streak ends for Rayders

By Jamie MacMillan

The recent Rayder resurgence on the hardwood took a couple steps back last week with setbacks to Roscommon, 75-69, and Traverse City St. Francis, 81-56.

The defeats leave the Rayders with a 4-10 record, 3-4 in conference play. The losses come after the club won three in a row.

In Friday night's loss to the Gladiators, the Rayders were plagued by 18 turnovers in the first half. Offensively, Charlevoix was never in the contest, making only four baskets during the first half, three by Justin Thorp. Thorp led the club with nine points. The Rayders trailed at the half 40-21.

Any comeback chances were dashed in the third quarter when Thorp was whistled for his fourth foul early in the quarter, forcing the Rayders' top weapon to the bench.

Despite Matt Dennis filling the void well with eight points and eight rebounds, it was not to be for the Rayders that night as they shot an ugly 21 percent from the field, 14-50. They heaved 14 three-point shots, making just one.

"We didn't shoot well or pass well," said Rayder coach Keith Haske. "They (TCSF) weren't doing anything special, but we just didn't show up."

Earlier in the week against Roscommon, the Rayders jumped ahead 24-16 after one quarter, but the Bucks fought back to even the score at 50-50 after three quarters. The Bucks outscored the Rayders 25-19 to take the six point win.

The Rayders will try to rebound this Friday night against the highly touted Boyne City Ramblers. The game is in Charlevoix's gym, and Haske expects a home court advantage to give his club a chance.

During the rematch, though, the Rayders showed the rust of more than a week between games, coach Brenda Bryan said.

"We started fine, but at the bottom we dropped off," she said. "We were quiet, not talking to each other and kind of lost it. They outdid us."

Charlevoix once again played a strong game of back row defense, but a weak offense kept them from making up ground on the scoreboard.

Bryan noted that at times her front row players didn't go after spikes as aggressively as they should, fearing hitting the ball out of bounds.

"We're a good defensive team, but we need to get more from that front row," Bryan said afterward. "We've got to get to work."

The season's second half should prove telling, as the Charlevoix team finds itself deadlocked for the league's top honor. In previous seasons, league foes square off just once, but this year the season has been doubled to include two games against each league team. In their first rematch, Bryan said she could tell Elk Rapids was out to avenge an earlier loss.

"I told the girls it'll be hard to stay on top, and we'll have to work harder," she said. "The other teams are trying to beat us while we're trying to just maintain our position."

The Rayder JV squad also fell to Elk Rapids 17-15, 3-15, 10-15.

The Rayders next play Thursday, Feb. 12 at Boyne City and Monday, Feb. 16 at home against Traverse City St. Francis. A JV game begins both evenings at 6 p.m.

Skiers headed for regional competition this Thursday

By Jamie MacMillan

While unfamiliar sunny and spring like conditions greeted skiers, it was a familiar team that stole the show at last Thursday's Lake Michigan Conference Skiing Championships.

Dominant all season long at this level, the Harbor Springs Rams completed their clean sweep of league foes with easy wins in both the boys' and girls' meets.

The Rams' boys won, easily outdistancing Elk Rapids, which finished second.

The Lady Rams, with eight medal winners, cruised to a win, ahead of Boyne City.

The Rayder girls placed fourth with double medal winners Tiffany Fisher and Kelly Kusina.

Fisher placed third in both the slalom and giant slalom (GS), with Kusina right behind her in fourth in the GS and seventh in the slalom.

Also for Charlevoix, Kirsten Brendtro placed 12th in the slalom and 16th in the GS, while Sara Parrish was 26th in the slalom and 35th in the GS.

"Four girls raced and four girls finished so I was real pleased," Rayder coach Sue Miller said. "Sara Parrish skied very well, we're happy to have her back."

Traverse City St. Francis nudged Charlevoix out for the third spot.

The race for second place in the boys' meet was tighter, with three teams — Charlevoix, Boyne City and Elk Rapids within three points of each other after the GS.

The Rayders finished in third, earning three medals in the process. Todd Freidinger took fifth place in the slalom and a sixth in the GS.

Steve Pirie earned an eighth place medal in the GS.

Also for Charlevoix was Shaun MacMillan, 11th slalom, 18th GS; Joel Trubilowicz, 19th slalom, 21st GS; Eric Halverson, 13th slalom; Wally Wujcik, 27th GS; and George LaBlance, 30th GS.

Next up for the Rayders' ski team is the class B-C-D regional final Thursday, Feb. 12 at Boyne Mountain.

Cheerleaders earn awards at state competition

The Charlevoix High School cheerleaders attended the Hope College Cheerleading competition Saturday, Feb. 7 in Holland, Mich.

The varsity squad received a third place trophy, while the junior varsity squad placed fourth in their division.

"The girls did really well, considering they had no sleep the night before," said coach Liz Nortley. The evening before the event, the two squads traveled to Traverse City for a basketball game, then headed to Holland for the competition.

The event was attended by over 20 schools in Michigan. Charlevoix was the only school from northern Michigan to compete.

The competition was evaluated on a cheer of their own and a cheer that was learned during the clinic in the morning.

The squads are coached by Liz Nortley and Carol Ward.

SCRAPBOOK

Bosses bring auto history to Charlevoix

By Marilyn Boss

Our first Model T fever occurred three months after we were married, back in the summer of 1951. When we were in high school, in 1946-1950, Richard (Gene) Hardy bought an old 1926 coupe from John Macy, who for years fired the old coal furnace down at the Methodist Church. Dale recalls Mr. Macy driving past his house several times a day to tend the furnace and keep it going in the cold winters. He was intrigued at that time by the putt-putt car.

The old Model T was the rage around high school with the teenage crowd. After graduation Gene left Charlevoix, and his mother, with his permission, agreed to sell the car to us for $75. We enjoyed it for 25 years, (with the exception, on my part, of times he would try to make it through the deepest snow drifts he could find). In 1976, due to the fact that we wanted to buy an open car some day, we sold it. We also kept Dale's brother Dean's Model T for 12 years, who then took it back when he had a place to store it. It was a nice 1927 maroon colored 4-door.

We thought it would be great for our grandchildren and other kids around town to be able to see a little bit of early American transportation. We had been looking for about four years in the Old Cars Weekly magazine which Dale gets, hoping to find the "T" we wanted somewhere in the Midwest. Old Cars Weekly is published in Iola, Wisc. every Friday, and we receive it on Tuesday or Wednesday. Once or twice it came on a Monday. On Saturday, the day of the art fair last summer, it came at noon. The mailman usually gets here around 3 p.m., but we had never received an issue only 24 hours after publication.

Dale opened the magazine, and there was a picture of the little 1919 Model T, with a new top, new interior, and it said it runs and looks good. The price was $4,500. The range of price for a vehicle like this is between $9,000 and $16,000. He ran into the house and called the owner, Mr. Howard Hall of Sioux Center, Iowa, a college professor who had just retired. He wasn't in, so Dale put the message on his machine, saying, "Your car is sold." Later, Dale went downtown, and Mr. Hall called and I told him that we wanted the car, and I would try to find Dale and have him call back. Mr. Hall was leaving the house in one half-hour, so I went directly to town and found Dale talking with some friends, and so he came right home.

Dale Boss (center) and his son, Bo (right), found this Model T Ford in Sioux Center, Iowa, where they bought it from Howard Hall (left). The antique car will vie for downtown parking time this summer with the big, red Caddie that has become Dale and Marilyn's trademark summer vehicle. (Photo courtesy of Marilyn Boss)

Dale called him, and he informed him that he had 12 calls on his answering machine, and we were call number 2, but couldn't reach the first call. Dale told him he was from Charlevoix, expecting him not to know where we lived. He told us that he has been through Charlevoix several times, as his brother works as a conservation officer in Petoskey. Small world. After conversing, they found they had many things in common, and made a gentlemen's agreement on the phone. Dale said he and Bo would leave Charlevoix at 3 a.m. on Tuesday, and arrive at his home 14 hours later, at 5 p.m. Sioux Center is 850 miles from here. Bo's construction company had just bought a new trailer a week earlier, so he and Dale set out to get the car. Everything fell into place perfectly. When they saw it, they were thrilled. The car surpassed all expectations, and they brought it home.

Needless to say, it received a very happy reception, and hopefully will put a little nostalgia back in town in the years ahead.

Superintendent being considered for downstate job

By Jamie MacMillan

Charlevoix superintendent Dr. Roberta Jackson is one of two final candidates for the vacant superintendent position in the Richmond School District, a Richmond Board of Education member said Monday.

Richmond Board of Education vice-president Jacquelyn Stricker said Jackson, along with Denise Seiler, curriculum director of the Millington School District, made the final cut from an original list of 35 candidates.

"We have no real time line," Stricker said of their search. "We're looking for the best person for the district and we're willing to take our time to do it."

Richmond posted the opening during the summer of 1997 and had received 40 applicants by the fall. No one applicant at the time stood out, so the board decided to re-post the position.

Stricker said a committee from her district will conduct home visits later this month and then interview both candidates a second time. She was not sure if the board will make a final decision by next month.

Richmond, in northern Macomb County, is a rural school district in between Mt. Clemens and Port Huron. Its enrollment is close to 1,700 and is growing in "leaps and bounds," Stricker said. It is considered a small, class B school.

The district recently passed a bond proposal for school expansion. When construction is completed, Richmond will have a K-4 elementary school, 5-8 middle school, and a 9-12 high school.

While Charlevoix struggles with a near century-old middle school, Richmond's middle school is its newest building, not yet 20 years old.

Stricker said the board was interested in Jackson immediately after reading her resume.

"Her resume was excellent," Stricker said. "She brings in a lot of experience in terms of curriculum, financially, and with negotiations."

Jackson has a contract with the Charlevoix school district through June, 1999. Last February, Jackson asked the board to extend the contract through an option year, but later pulled the request off the table.

Stricker said she hopes a new superintendent could start as soon as a decision is made. She would not reveal what salary package was being offered, but said the last superintendent, she said, made between $85-90,000 a year.

It's official — Klinger is head varsity football coach

By Jamie MacMillan

Charlevoix football, softball, and tennis teams will be led by new coaches, as approved by the Charlevoix Board of Education during their meeting Monday evening.

While each coach is officially new, they will be familiar faces to athletes.

Todd Klinger had the "interim" removed from his title and was named varsity head football coach for the 1998 season.

Klinger, who had been an assistant coach with the program, took over head coaching duties in August after the abrupt resignation of head coach Roger Gowell for medical reasons.

Plagued by low numbers and the shoulder injury of his quarterback, the team struggled to an 0-6 start before rebounding to win two of its final three games, including a thrilling 20-14 upset of rival Boyne City.

For athletic director Keith Haske, the way the club rallied down the stretch proved Klinger's mettle.

"The team grew as the season went and got better with every game played," Haske said in an interview Monday morning. "There was a lot of frustration, the kids could have been turned off and the season fall apart. The fact that it didn't was real impressive."

Haske noted the "extras" Klinger did throughout the season to promote the program, such as scheduling dinners and guest speakers before each home game and his mini-football camp for fourth, fifth, and sixth graders.

"He's really driven to have a good program and motivated to get us back to the top," Haske said.

Board president Allen Telgenhof said that during his years on school boards in two different towns, he received countless letters from parents and fans asking that specific coaches be fired. With Klinger, though, he said it was the first time he had letters asking to keep a coach.

The board also approved the hiring of Ron Cox as varsity softball coach and Janet Freidinger as varsity tennis coach.

Cox, who replaces Rick Grunch, was the softball coach before Grunch took over. He led the Rayders to numerous successful seasons, including a district championship in 1991.

"I'm real high on him, he's positive and upbeat," Haske said. "He's been successful here before and is excited about coming back."

Freidinger has been an assistant coach and an unofficial helping hand for the tennis squads over the years. She replaces Bob Morgridge. Haske was impressed with her love of the game, saying she "will be a positive role model for kids who want to learn a great lifetime sport."

The board next meets at 5 p.m. Monday, Feb. 23 at the Charlevoix District Library on Clinton Street and will hold a public forum on district facility needs.

Arrest made in bomb threat incident

An Emmet County youth is scheduled to be arraigned this week in district court for calling in two separate bomb threats to area schools.

Daniel Alexander Smith, 17, from Oden, will appear in court 9:00 a.m. Wednesday, Feb. 11 on two counts of making false bomb threats. The crime, a felony, is punishable by up to four years in prison and/or a $2,000 fine.

Smith was arrested Jan. 27 and is free from custody on a $5,000 bond.

Police allege that the morning of Jan. 14 Smith phoned Charlevoix High School at 10:20 a.m. and then Petoskey High School at 10:25 a.m.

alerting both schools of a bomb in their building.

After extensive searches, bombs were not found in either building.

Police say Smith wanted to evacuate buildings and cancel classes with the threats to spend the day with his girlfriend, who is from Charlevoix. Smith allegedly mentioned his plans to call in a bomb threat to friends before and after the incident occurred, which led police to him.

He is being arraigned in Emmet County because police say that is where the phone calls were made. Police do not expect to arrest any other suspects.

Council favors outdoor cafe seating in Bridge Park

By Laurie Lounsbury

Petoskey's popular restaurant, Roast and Toast, may be branching into Charlevoix and Sweet Sam's Java Joint may be moving to a new location in Charlevoix if the two restaurants get city permission to have outdoor seating.

A proposal from Anchor's building owner Richard Georgi was presented to city council at their Monday meeting regarding the request.

In his proposal, Georgi said both restaurants are interested in a long term lease in the building that adjoins Bridge Park, but only if they can put tables for patrons in Bridge Park on the middle, terrace level of the park.

"What is envisioned is a collection of approximately 10 tables complete with canopied umbrellas and seating distributed on the surfaced areas of the terrace between the building and where the grass begins to the north," Georgi said in his proposal.

Since the city is facing problems with empty storefronts in the downtown area, most councilmen were agreeable to the idea, provided the two businesses agree to some conditions.

Councilman Gabe Campbell opposed the idea initially.

"I think the parks belong to the city of Charlevoix and we don't have the right to lease, sell or rent them," Campbell said.

But city attorney Jim Young said the city does indeed have the right to lease park property. Mayor Josh Barnes added that the DDA put outdoor cafe-style seating and tables in the master plan for Bridge Park.

"It's always been in the DDA proposal to have a street cafe-type feeling in Bridge Park, so I don't think this is an abuse of public rights," said Barnes.

Council agreed to entertain a proposal from Georgi for outdoor tables in the park if the restaurants agree that the tables will be non-exclusive and anyone — not just restaur-

Back on the beat

By Jamie MacMillan

A familiar face returned to the city police force last week as officer Jim Schlappi took his first shift after a seven month disability absence.

One of the toughest fears in life is confronting the reality that you won't be physically able to do your job. For Schlappi, that had been a very real fear as he rehabilitated his knee after tearing his anterior cruciate ligament (ACL) in an on-the-job accident.

On the night of June 30, 1997, 30 minutes into his shift, Schlappi found himself on foot chasing a minor in possession of alcohol in Bridge Park. Upon capturing the minor with a flying tackle, Schlappi felt his knee pop as he hit the ground. He finished his shift through the evening, but he was in a good deal of pain. It would be his last shift for an indefinite amount of time.

as doctors diagnosed the ACL tear, an injury known to knock athletes out of their sport for a full year or even a career. Schlappi admitted to feeling the latter was a strong possibility.

"I was scared. If I'm not physically able or can't run, I'm out of a job," the 31-year-old officer said. "From the time I was in high school I wanted to be on the police force and just three or four years into it the possibility of losing my career was scary."

After seven months of being on the injured list, Schlappi returned to the force, working the evening shift last Tuesday.

"It felt real good being back behind the wheel, even for a slow night. It was a typical winter night," he joked.

Schlappi said it was nice to be away from the daily grind for a little while, but the last few months of his rehab he described as boring as he itched to get back on the force.

"I like being out with the people," Schlappi said. "I don't like being indoors."

Spurring his comeback desire was the Sept. 5, 1997 armed robbery of First of America Bank. Schlappi was returning to Charlevoix after a trip to Petoskey. He planned to stop in on some colleagues taking target practice at the Rod and Gun Club when he heard of the robbery on his car scanner. Soon after, a man matching the robber's description cruised past Schlappi, who immediately turned his car around to follow the suspect. Schlappi continued to tail the man while notifying both city and county police of their whereabouts.

With Schlappi's efforts, capturing the suspect proved easy. City police chief Dennis Halverson said rant patrons — may sit at them, the restaurants will be responsible for cleaning and maintaining the outdoor seating area, and pathways through the seating areas will be created for pedestrians.

In other business, the council approved the 1998-99, $2,349,500 city budget with one last-minute amendment. The amendment will either make the Charlevoix Senior Center $7,000 poorer or much richer.

According to Barnes, the city pledged to make a $7,000 donation to the center, as they had in the past two years. Last week, however,

Barnes learned that Hayes Township and Charlevoix Township reneged on their pledges to the senior center. The Charlevoix County commissioners have also been remiss in making donations to the center, while supporting senior centers in East Jordan and Boyne City.

"We're being left high and dry with nobody else paying," Barnes said. "I'd like to say that we'll match anything raised by the townships (Charlevoix and Hayes) if the county matches our donation."

The council voted to withhold the $7,000 budgeted donation to the senior center until there is financial support from the townships and county.

"This seems like a real affront to a bunch of senior citizens, when those groups don't support them," Barnes said. "Maybe I care more about it since I just became a senior citizen myself."

Barnes recently became a septuagenarian.

the suspect would have easily drifted out of sight and away from the authorities had it not been for Schlappi.

Last month, the suspect, Megal Lamont Barnett, pleaded guilty to charges and was sentenced to consecutive terms in prison of two years for use of a weapon in a felony and 8-30 years for bank robbery.

"Who would have thought that the most exciting thing to happen to me during my four years on the force would happen while I'm out on disability," Schlappi said.

Foreign exchange students learn life in a small town

By Jamie MacMillan

The life of a high school student is a complex ride of conflicting emotions. The high pressure, standardized tests while prepping for college, the big Friday night games, and the queasiness of asking the girl in your science class to the prom all add up to some anxious moments.

Picture all that as the new kid in town. Those times become even more anxious and stressful as suddenly a place as familiar and friendly as high school is filled with unknown faces of strangers.

What if those strangers didn't speak your language? Being the new kid in town has stepped into a was natural to become involved in a foreign exchange program. Bourquin, 16, said coming to the states gives her a chance to "see something else and experience a new challenge."

Spending a year in America was not as daunting as it sounds for this trio. They're intelligent and have an excellent grasp of the English language. The language barrier wasn't difficult to overcome.

Their biggest adjustment, though, was adapting to the cultural differences. All three hail from their country's capitol and largest city — Bourquin from Geneva, Switzerland, Gapon from Kharkov, Ukraine, and Birsas from Kishinau, life and, at times, she feels trapped. She said it's been nice living in a slower-paced environment, but said she prefers the activity of the big city.

Bourquin agreed that the small town is a nice place to visit, but to live in one permanently would be difficult. She noted how stuck people are if they do not own a car in a small town, but in a larger city there are still many alternative modes of transportation.

All three were excited at seeing all the wildlife in the area. Neither had seen a deer or a wild turkey and few squirrels in their urban lives until arriving in northern Michigan. Bourquin said one of her daily rituals since arriving in Charlevoix has been taking walks down by the lake front.

Unlike his friends, Birsas has grown more attached to small town life.

"The town is quiet, and I like that," he said. "Everybody is smiling, friendly and no ugly faces. When a community is this small it seems the people get to know each other better."

All three said adjusting during their first week in town was impossible because of the strain of their travel. Each had at least four connecting flights to make en route to Michigan and Gapon's luggage was lost during the Amsterdam-New York City leg of her flight. She spent her first two weeks in America without any of her belongings.

The trio's main focus since arriving has been attending Charlevoix High School, so it was only natural that they noted some differences between secondary education in America and their countries.

Gapon said school in the Ukraine is harder, but that attendance is not mandatory like it is in

EDITH GILBERT

A great many novel plans have been proposed to stimulate tourism in Charlevoix this summer. We have this on good authority from an unnamed source close to city hall. The former post office will become a disco for topless dancers. It is not known who the new owners are going to be, or if this is going to be a year-round operation. However, it is believed that such an attraction will bring visitors from the entire area and boost this economy.

Also in the works is a plan to move the trees in Veteran's Park to the top of Mt. McCauba. According to the Grudge Report on the Internet, we hear this project will begin as soon as the ground thaws. It is hoped that these trees will in turn attract a rare kind of bird, which will make this a new nesting site and attract bird watchers from far and wide.

A special committee has been formed, we have learned from an official source familiar with the case, to advocate the changing of the bridge hours. Instead of being raised every half-hour, this unnamed source tells us that the committee is considering recommending that the bridge be raised every 15 minutes to accommodate heavier boat traffic. Also under consideration is a recording which will play the popular tune, "Anchors Aweigh" simultaneously with the raising and lowering of the bridge. We have not been able to confirm when this new schedule will begin.

Although the text has not yet been publicly released, we have learned from several media outlets that the noon whistle will blow not only at noon, but also at 2:30, 4:30, 7:00 and 9:00 p.m. to coincide with the summer movie theater schedule. It is believed that such a move will help remind everyone to see more films and eat more popcorn.

Under consideration, according to sources familiar with the matter, is the proposal that the City of Charlevoix and Hayes Township be merged this spring, and the matter will be put before the voters by E mail, which is cost effective. For those who are not on-line, they may call 911, and be transferred to a common carrier.

Finally, it has been announced that all maple syrup this spring will be colored kelly green in honor of St. Patrick. The origin of this new item has been told to us by an unnamed source. It is the contention that such a promotion will benefit Charlevoix during the quiet, so-called "shoulder" tourist season.

Public response to these novel proposals is not yet available. A poll is ongoing to assess the communities' reaction and will be released in a forthcoming publication.

Letters to the editor

Vacationer agrees with new pool policy

Dear Editor:

How about this headline: KIDS SAFE IN POOL WITH PARENTS

I am glad to see the "no swimming without your parents" rule. As parents we need to be responsible for our young children in water, regardless if it is at Lake Michigan or in a pool. And I, as a parent, do not want to be in an overcrowded pool (i.e. dumping ground) while trying to have fun with my kids. Also, the Charlevoix pool is not that big.

Last summer, while on our yearly visit to Charlevoix, we had the pleasure of swimming in the pool just after it had opened. It is a beautiful facility and you, as a town, should be proud of it and the work you did to achieve it. Our local high school pool has open swimming at night and I attend with my daughter about once a week. My biggest concern at our pool is the number of people in the pool and the fact that one, 28-year-old girl is in charge of everything there.

Sincerely,
Berri Langowski

Reminder to thank all rescue workers

Dear Editor:

I am writing this to remind our Charlevoix community to tell our special volunteers and service people who serve our community a big "thank you."

Last fall, I came upon a two-car accident and immediately began caring for a critically trapped person in the one car. I was unable to leave to check the other passengers in the second vehicle and all I could do was shout out commands to other people who stopped to help. As a hospital nurse, I found it to be very frustrating waiting for help, as I had no equipment I needed to help me — except my bare hands. I needed help badly! After what seemed like hours, I heard the all too familiar ambulance siren and fire truck "honks" — sweet relief! Sweet it was as these specialty trained personnel jumped into action and took over in the rescue. I assisted them and was able to see their skill in action. The firemen assisted with the "jaws-of-life" and keeping the scene safe due to copious car fluids about.

When the night was over, I realized how fortunate we are to have such dedicated service people who willingly get pulled away from the daughter's and son's soccer or basketball game, or called out from a warm bed in the middle of the cold night, or may be summoned from a favorite movie to volunteer their time to help someone in need. We don't see the hours they put into practicing to keep their skills sharp and updated to provide our community with quality service. Some of us know a few of these men and women by name as they are our relatives, co-workers, our friends and neighbors; others know these people as they needed their services, and there are others in our community who are just plain glad these dedicated volunteers are "out there" just in case we need them.

So, I write this to remind our Charlevoix community to arise! Tell your dedicated Charlevoix volunteers a big "thank you" for what they do for us, be they the firefighter, ambulance personnel, or water rescue team. And do it now, and not when we need their service.

Student wants cleaner half pipe

Dear Editor:

I think Shanahan Field should get the sand in front of the half pipe out of there. The sand gets in your bearings and you'll have to get new ones. I do not want to pay for new bearings each time because it costs $19 to $29 if you want to get really good ones. So please try to get the sand out of there. Perhaps you could use outdoor carpeting for safety.

Half pipe needs work

Dear Editor:

I think you should repair the half pipe more often. I think more people would go there. People get hurt so much because there's chipped wood. You can get shivers from all the wood and paint. There's graffiti everywhere. It would make it a better place. I think the people in Charlevoix would like it better, and so they wouldn't get hurt. The town would appreciate it.

Events in brief

High School hosts meeting for students and parents

In order to inform sophomores and juniors in high school and their parents of events that are meaningful for future success, the counselors at Charlevoix High School will be hosting an informational meeting in the high school study hall at 7 p.m. Tuesday, Feb. 24.

In the meeting, they will present an overview of the recently completed ACT PLAN assessment and how this relates to the ACT test that most juniors should be taking in April, June or October of this year.

They will also discuss making college choices, how to get financial aid, and vocational education.

The meeting will last about 90 minutes and there will be a question and answer period after the meeting. For more information, call Toni Felter or John Prescott at the high school, 547-3222.

Weight loss program offered at pool

Do you have special needs to attain weight loss?

Charlevoix Area Hospital Aquatic Physical Therapy will be offering a special aquatic weight loss exercise program for people who wish or need to lose 25 pounds or more, or who have difficulty with land exercises.

Classes will be from 9-10 a.m. Tuesdays and Thursdays for six weeks beginning March 3 at the Charlevoix Community Pool on U.S. 31. Cost is $65 per person.

Enrollment is limited. Those interested need to call to register at 547-8630 by Tuesday, Feb. 24.

Pool gets funds through tribal grant

The Charlevoix Community Swimming Pool fund received a $6,000 grant from the Grand Traverse Band of Ottawa and Chippewa Indians through Hayes Township, according to a joint announcement made this week by Tribal Chairman George E. Bennet, Hayes Township Supervisor Tim Boyko, and swimming pool grants coordinator, Michelle Biddick.

According to the grant, the funds are to be used for water safety instruction for elementary school children, hospital water therapy programs, lifeguard training; and water exercise programs. The funds may also be used to reduce the community pool's mortgage and to establish special activities such as swim clubs and employment training programs.

Michelle Biddick emphasized that the main purpose of the grant will be to "continue our mission of providing aquatic programs in fitness, therapy, recreation and water safety instruction to all age levels" and expanding programs, such as special arthritic and prenatal exercise, and youth programs."

Boyko acknowledged the grant saying, "The township thoroughly supports the community swimming pool and is grateful the tribe responded positively to our grant application."

Since 1994, The Grand Traverse Band has donated over $2.8 million to area communities for projects ranging from improvement of local roads to educational projects of public schools and colleges, from equipment purchases for local fire and rescue departments to construction projects for parks and recreational facilities, according to tribal documents.

Church continues with preaching festival

The fifth speaker in the Winter Festival of Preaching series at the Community Reformed Church in Charlevoix is Bud Klooster, local businessman and part-owner of Klooster Equipment in Atwood. Klooster is a life-long resident of Charlevoix and a life-long member of Community Reformed Church.

Klooster will speak at the 9 a.m. and 11:15 a.m. services Sunday, Feb. 22. He graduated from Charlevoix High School and earned a B.S. degree in business from Albion College. He and his wife, Vinnie, have two children.

Petoskey. It would be much more convenient if there was another recycling center closer.

Statistics show that thirty percent of the material in our land fill is recyclable paper. Twenty four percent is plastic. These items could be taken to the recycling center and made into something useful instead of filling the earth full of garbage.

Here are some of the things that can be made out of recycled paper: insulation, cereal boxes, wrapping paper, newspapers and cardboard boxes, etc.

From plastics they make soda bottles, carpeting, cameras, tables, clothes, and lots more!

From glass we get glass jars, tiles, and many other things!

Many people just throw away all sorts of things that can be recycled and that is why we need more recycling centers.

Humane society needs work

Dear Editor:

Our Humane Society needs to be improved! Someone took my cat to the Humane Society, and he got adopted the day before we got there! The reason is that they changed the day limit to five days from ten, so I lost my cat! They should change it back to ten days!

They should get bigger cages for the animals. The cages should have a piece of carpet or something for the animals to sleep on.

I also think the Humane Society should see if kids would like to walk, or play with the animals, so they stay in shape and stay healthy. I would gladly play with the animals! Write back about any information you can give me. Thank you for your time!

Sincerely,
Stephen Andreae

Animals crowded at humane society

Dear Editor:

I think we need a bigger and better Humane Society for Charlevoix County. I have visited the Humane Society and the animals were crowded. The animals need bigger cages because they need more room to move. Also when I was there the animals looked lonely and so they deserve some toys to play with.

Another problem I am complaining about is the care of the animals and their health. The people who work at the shelter should take better care of the animals when they are sick. They need to keep the animals healthier so that they can live longer. One way you could do this is to get volunteers to help take care of the animals.

Finally I am strongly concerned about the employees who smoke and work at the society, this is bad for the animals and may make them die easier and quicker. I know that smoking is hard to stop but maybe the people who work with the animals could smoke outside. You could solve these problems by making a bigger Humane Society and having more responsible people work there.

I strongly encourage you to consider my opinions. They could make our Charlevoix Humane Society a better place for the animals.

Respectfully yours,

Tracking the wolf population

Charter school students get wilderness experience

By Laurie Lounsbury
For students at Northwest Academy, the class called Environmental Science is considered an academic elective. However, some naturalists might say it's a life requirement.

Taught by Bill Schulman, the class is a hands-on, project-oriented class that takes kids to the heart of environmental science — to the woods, streams and beaches of northern Michigan.

"Middle school-aged kids are really interested in this," Schulman said.

Schulman knows that lecturing about science and the environment won't impact students the way taking them out in nature will.

Working without a textbook, Schulman sends his students to the Internet to research environmental topics. Then he combines reading and research with hands-on projects.

His class finished their last term by building dog sleds and going on an expedition to Mt. McSaubia.

"We didn't have any dogs, so the kids pulled their own sleds," Schulman said.

Inspired by the book, "Never Cry Wolf," by Farley Mowat, the students recreated a similar wilderness expedition of the man who studied wolves for the Canadian government. They learned about the wolf reintroduction program in Michigan and the importance of wolves in our state.

"Since the wolves have disappeared, it's really affected the food chain," Schulman said. "The deer have no natural predators — that's why the deer population has gone crazy."

The whole student body of Northwest Academy participates in other wilderness expeditions led by Schulman. They've hiked and camped in the Jordan Valley and the Pigeon River Valley, where students see first hand what is happening in their own environment.

In the Pigeon River Valley, students learned that even state-owned land can be devastated by special interest groups. Huge swaths had been cut through the pristine woods so loggers could bring out felled trees. Wood chip- pers littered the trails with mounds of wood chips, a result of the state's decision to sell logging rights to private individuals.

"The kids were going nuts when they saw that," Schulman said.

High school students at Northwest Academy will soon participate in an outpost education program at Wilderness State Park. Instructors will take the students to the state park for three days, where they will spend their mornings doing academic studies and their afternoons doing wilderness studies.

"It really helps to increase their environmental awareness," Schulman said of the outdoor programs.

Schulman has a degree in earth science and is also an Outward Bound instructor. He and his family own and operate Camp Seagull on

Scholarships available for medical, nursing students

A future nurse and physician from Charlevoix County may find some help with the cost of their education, thanks to two scholarships available through the Charlevoix County Community Foundation.

The Julius Gilbert Memorial Scholarship, named in honor of a community benefactor and former trustee of the Charlevoix Area Hospital, will award a $1,000 scholarship to a medical student, while the Charlevoix Area Hospital Nursing Scholarship will give a $500 scholarship to an area nursing student.

Deadlines for both scholarships are May 1, 1998, and decisions will be announced early in June. Those interested in applying may pick up the necessary forms at the Charlevoix Area Hospital. Nursing scholarship forms are also available through the counseling offices of area high schools, at the Women's Resource Center in Petoskey, the Beaver Island Rural Health Center, and at North Central and Northwestern Michigan colleges.

To be eligible for the Julius Gilbert Scholarship, candidates must be Charlevoix County residents, have successfully completed an undergraduate degree, and be accepted in an accredited medical school. Nursing scholarship candidates should live in the Charlevoix Area Hospital's service area and be accepted at an accredited school of professional nursing in the State of Michigan. If enrolled in a two year nursing program, the candidate will be eligible for a second-year $500 scholarship as well.

Candidates for both scholarships will be judged on their academic performance, student service record, leadership qualities, commitment to their chosen profession, and letters of recommendation. Financial need will also be a factor in selecting a nursing scholar.

For more information, call Robert Tambellini at 536-2440, or Diane Kidder, 547-4024.

Church youth group fills need in community

By Laurie Lounsbury

It's a Robinhood routine of sorts, taking from those who have and giving to those who don't.

But, unlike Robinhood, the First Congregational youth group isn't practicing any thievery in their endeavors to distribute good will — and good stuff.

The middle and high school students pick up all sorts of furniture and appliances from people who no longer want their belongings. On the same day they retrieve items, the students then deliver the goods to people who need them.

Youth director Cara Hochhalter got the supply-and-demand idea when she took her youth group to Cleveland, Ohio on a work project last year. In Cleveland, the group helped pick up discarded furniture and deliver it to needy families.

When the Rainbow Shoppe stopped taking donations of furniture, Hochhalter saw a need that she and her youth group could fill.

Hochhalter posted a sign-up sheet in the church, asking anyone to jot down any items of furniture, appliances, even rugs or carpeting that they no longer wanted.

With a list of people ready to donate items, Hochhalter then stuffed a list of the available items in each food pantry bag delivered at Christmas.

It was a match made in heaven — or Nottingham Forest.

Since starting the project, Hochhalter and her youth group have cheerfully divested the congregation of their unwanted items.

While the supply side is dwindling, the demand still exists.

Hochhalter said she'd like to let everyone in the community know of their work, so they can donate items. Particularly needed right now are beds, tables and chairs, and appliances.

For the youth group members, the project has been enlightening.

"It's amazing for these kids to see how many people are really in need," Hochhalter said.

The group does all their work on Wednesday afternoons, after school. Pick-ups and deliveries are pre-arranged for the same day, so the church doesn't have to store bulky items.

Anyone who would like to donate an item, or needs an item, may call the church at 547-9122 and ask for Cara Hochhalter.

4-H program exceeds fund raising goal of $5,000

The Charlevoix County 4-H program will benefit from the $11,286 raised during the 4-H Endowment charter year campaign. The Charlevoix County 4-H Council set the goal of raising $5,000 during the 1997 calendar year. The 4-H Endowment program began when an anonymous donor decided to give $5,000 to the fund if the Charlevoix County 4-H program would undertake the challenge to match that amount during the year.

"We are pleased that we have not only reached our goal, but exceeded it by $1,286," said Rosemary Karkosak, 4-H Endowment Fund committee chair. "It was great to see so many people step forward to make this happen."

The Charlevoix County Community Foundation has had a major impact on this program by helping in the development of the process from the very beginning. Pledges and contributions came in from a variety of people.

"We mainly saw these funds come from people who have been or are currently involved in our program," said Paul Haver, Charlevoix County 4-H Council president.

Income from the investment of the fund will support such future programs as: leadership education, college scholarships, educational trip awards, new and innovative programs, leader training, county workshops, leader/member recognition and our local 4-H sports groups.

For additional information on how to contribute to the 4-H Endowment Fund, contact MSU Extension-Charlevoix County at 582-6232. A donor packet is available upon request. Those interested in making a contribution can make their checks payable to the Charlevoix County Community Foundation, with a notation that it is for the Charlevoix County 4-H Endowment Fund. Checks and pledges should be sent to P.O. Box 718, East Jordan, MI 49727. Potential donors may also contact the Charlevoix County Community Foundation directly at 536-2440.

All donors are eligible for a State Community Foundation tax credit.

Getting a glimpse of career path choices

When you're six years old, it's easy to say, without hesitation, what you're going to be when you grow up.

"I'm gonna be a fireman!" "I'm gonna be an astronaut!" "I'm gonna be a pilot!"

But when you're a high school student, weighing your interests, your skills and your income requirements, choosing a career becomes more challenging.

To help students consider their possibilities, the Charlevoix High School hosted a career day Thursday.

People from all walks of life came in to discuss the trials and tribulations of their respective careers.

David Otis, a local artist and potter, told students that it is possible to make a living as an artist.

"People will sometimes ask me, are you making it? We're not rich, but, at one point, we paid for three children in college, so I guess we're making it," Otis said.

Otis dazzled students with his ability to throw pots in a matter of minutes.

He stressed, above all, the need to love what you're doing if you want to be a professional artist.

"We end up working until all hours of the night before a show, so you need to have a passion for your work," Otis said.

City firefighter Joe Schwartzfisher told students about the personal rewards of being a firefighter, along with the stresses and strains that go with the job.

"Sometimes it's just not pretty," Schwartzfisher said, recalling the night of the Venetian fireworks explosion.

Health occupations, a rapidly growing career field, were well-represented, with a surgeon, nurse, medical technologist and sports medicine specialist on hand to explain their jobs.

The media also caught students' attention, with TV's Molly Henneberg, meteorologist Matt Kirkwood and the Courier's Jamie MacMillan.

Classrooms were packed with students wanting to learn more about different careers, including students from Ellsworth and East Jordan high schools, who were invited to attend the career day.

Ground swell of disgruntlement over ground water runoff

Ordinance delayed for third time

By Jamie MacMillan

For the third time in the last 18 months, developers and county officials knocked heads over a proposed soil erosion and storm water runoff ordinance.

The ordinance, designed to control damaging storm water runoff that leads to soil erosion and sediments entering the watershed, has come under fire each time it's been presented to the county board for adoption.

"I'm adamantly opposed," said Russ Brown, chairman of the Charlevoix, Antrim, Kalkaska Board of Realtors.

For Brown and the others who jammed last Wednesday morning's meeting, their dissatisfaction stems from a perception of being left out of the planning process.

In August of 1997, the last time the ordinance appeared on the agenda, commissioners tabled any action due to charges made by developers and engineers that the ordinance was unworkable.

After heated discussion littered with name-calling and finger-pointing that took up the better part of three hours, the county board directed the committee who drafted the ordinance to meet with those in opposition in order to develop better legislation.

Six months later, though, the ordinance reappeared unaltered and the same cast of characters showed up questioning their lack of involvement.

"We're concerned about the process," Dan Barron, attorney for the board of realtors, said. "There has been no effort to contact these people."

Wendy Armstrong, Charlevoix County soil erosion officer, explained that no contact was made because she was directed not to by county commission chairman Phil Johnson a few weeks after the meeting last August.

Johnson explained that, after visiting some sites where soil erosion and runoff into Lake Charlevoix occurred due to unchecked development, he became convinced some kind of controls needed to be approved. He said the rest of the board agreed with him.

"But does that invalidate our involvement?" Boyne City resident Steve Voice asked.

Armstrong suggested the board pass the ordinance and set up a review committee which, after one year, would assess the ordinance's effectiveness and tweak the law wherever necessary.

"The time for ideas is before adoption," resident Art Ranger said. "Not everyone on hand spoke out against the ordinance."

Larry Levegood, who was a member of the committee that helped draft the ordinance, noted the number of people who have written in support of the ordinance. He told the board that, as a representative body, it can't ignore their feelings simply because they're not at the meeting.

"The burden should be on the developer to control runoff," said commissioner James Behling. "It can't be rolled back to the taxpayer."

The board appeared agreeable toward the ordinance, but faced with a room full of people against the law decided to postpone action until face-to-face meetings between the ordinance's committee and those opposing it can meet.

It was agreed they would meet this week and have any differences ironed out in time for a public hearing on the matter Wednesday, March 25, so the matter can be voted on during their regular meeting Wednesday, April 8.

"If nothing comes of it, we'll vote on it as is," Johnson said. "We want something done before summer construction."

The board next meets 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, Feb. 25.

SPORTS

Middle school team sweeps area tournament

Known as the "B" (best) squad, the boys' basketball team comprised of seventh and eighth graders won two games against Boyne City and Elk Rapids, making them the tournament champions.

The tournament was hosted by Boyne City in their new middle school gym last Wednesday night. Charlevoix beat Boyne City 49-24 in the first game of the tournament. High scorers in the game for Charlevoix were Dustin Mervyn with 12 points, Dennis Avery and Jerry Zeiler with eight points each. Charlevoix was 11 for 15 from the free throw line. High scorer for Boyne City was Donald Peters with 10 points.

In the final round of play, Charlevoix beat Elk Rapids 47-24. High Scorers for Charlevoix were Andrew Kunas with 10 points, Dennis Avery with nine, Dustin Mervyn and Nick Cole with eight points each.

Charlevoix was five for 11 from the free throw line. High scorer for Elk Rapids was Preston Meines with six points.

Charlevoix plays their last game of the season at home against Harbor Springs at 5 p.m. Wednesday, Feb. 18.

Two skiers head for state finals

While their teams ended out of the money in last week's B-C-D regional finals ski meet, Charlevoix sophomores Todd Freidinger and Tiffany Fisher earned berths in next week's state championships.

The top three teams from the 14-team field advanced to the title meet as did skiers with the top four times from teams who did not qualify.

Petoskey won the boys' meet, followed by Iron Mountain and Harbor Springs. Charlevoix was sixth place. Petoskey's Brad Neumann won the individual GS race while Iron Mountain's Ron Lawrence won the slalom.

Freidinger skied to a ninth place in the slalom, sneaking him into the state finals in the fourth and final position available.

Freidinger entered the slalom race with some nerves after a self-described "all over the place" GS performance that saw him end in 22nd place.

"I had mixed feelings at the top," he said of the start of his slalom runs. "I wanted to go fast, but I knew I had to stand to earn some points."

After his runs, he was hoping for a top-30 finish, but was surprised to find himself advancing to the state meet.

"It was not a goal because I didn't think it was realistic at the time," he said. "Now it's just time to go for it."

Fisher, meanwhile, had the state meet on her mind all season. Last year, as a freshman, she qualified in both events with a seventh place in the GS and 13th in slalom.

"This year, I knew I could do better and I just wanted to try to keep it up," Fisher said. "I thought I had a chance to win the GS."

After an "awesome" first run, Fisher took the GS lead, but was nudged in the end by Petoskey's Heidi Hofstetter for first place, with Fisher finishing second. In the slalom, Hofstetter again took top prize with Fisher right on her bindings in second place.

Petoskey won the girls' meet, followed by Harbor Springs and Ironwood. Charlevoix placed seventh.

After finishing in the bottom half of the state meet last year, Fisher said she's aiming for top-10 finishes in next week's championships.

Like the regionals, the state meet will be skied at Boyne Mountain's Super Bowl run, starting at 9:30 a.m. Monday, Feb. 23.

During last week's meet, conditions began fairly decently, but had turned mushy by the end. Both Fisher and Freidinger are worried

Rayders drop another game to Boyne City

By Jamie MacMillan

Boyne City played two halves of basketball while Charlevoix played only one, proving to be the difference in basketball action here last Friday night.

Clinging to a 35-30 halftime lead, the Ramblers scored the second half's first 19 points over a six minute span cruising to an easy 76-55 victory.

"They raised up their game, and we had no response," Rayder coach Keith Haske said afterwards. "In six minutes, the game was over."

After experimenting with two styles of zone defense during the first half, Boyne City began the second half with glue-like, man-to-man defense that the Rayders could not shake.

When Rayder guard Jim Kanine hit a short jumper for Charlevoix's first points of the second half, the score had ballooned to 54-32.

Haske burned three timeouts during the run in hopes of steering his team to a better course. Instead, he wondered afterward about his team's mettle.

"We're struggling right now to find a good positive mental attitude," Haske said. "When things go bad we're not responding in a positive manner. It's part of growing up, to react positively when it's not going well."

The first half was about as close as the second half was a blow-out.

Inspired by game film of the team's first match-up with Boyne, the Rayders came out with fire in their eyes.

As both teams struggled on offense, the Rayders set the tone with five first-half block shots, three from Justin Thorp and two from Matt Dennis.

Overall, Charlevoix contained the high octane Ramblers, even forcing the all-everything Jason Rozycki into two traveling violations and one carrying-the-ball turnover.

The red-headed Rambler, Rozycki, had the last laugh, sparking Boyne in the second half with long defensive rebounds. By the final buzzer, Rozycki had stuffed the stat sheet with 24 points, eight rebounds, four assists, and two steals.

"He's a real go-to guy," Haske said. "When his team needed points in the third quarter, he got them going. We're still looking for someone like that on our team."

For the Rayders, Kanine led the way with 11 points, followed by Tom Cunningham with nine. Dennis led the club with five rebounds while Kanine dished out five assists.

After a Tuesday night home contest with Elk Rapids, the Rayders play at Kalkaska Friday, Feb. 20. A JV game starts the action at 6 p.m.

Skiers go to state

not so much about possible poor conditions, but if there will be any conditions at all with the oddball weather patterns the last few days.

Ideally, they'd like to ski in "grippable ice," where the hill ices during the night only to melt ever so slightly during the first hours of daylight. At this point, they'll take whatever they can get.

Rounding out the Rayder results during regionals were, for the boys: Steve Pirie, 24th slalom, 26th GS; Shaun MacMillan, 28th slalom, 34th GS; Joel Trubilowicz, 41st slalom, 40th GS; Wally Wujcik, 51st GS; George LaBlance, 52nd GS; and Kyle Louiselle, 56th slalom.

For the girls, Kelly Kusina placed 16th GS, 19th slalom; Kirsten Brendtro, 33rd GS, 31st slalom; and Sara Parrish, 51st GS, 53rd slalom.

Bottom: Justin Thorp reaches over Boyne City's Matt Johncheck (22) for the opening tip-off. Thorp's defensive presence helped set an early tone for the Rayders, but, in the end, the Rayders could not outdo the powerful Ramblers.

Sno Challenge roars to new record in attendance

Great weather and a change in scheduling helped draw record numbers of people to this year's Sno Challenge.

"It was the largest crowd we've ever had out there, with 5,000 to 7,000 people," said Ike Boss, city recreation director.

By moving the kids' skiing and snowboarding races to Thursday night, more than twice the number of kids participated from previous years, with 108 skiers and snowboarders.

Results of the ski races are: Girls, 5 and under: Shelby Magide, first, Lauren Pettis, second and Joslyn Keie, third.

Boys, 5 and under: Mike King, first, Jonathan Saur, second and Conna Boss, third.

Boys, 6-8: Nathan Trippelhorn, first, Logan Priess, second and Brock Yenglin, third.

Girls, 6-8: Sarah Klooster, first, Kaylee Wells, second and Jessica Gauthier, third.

Boys, 9-10: Logan Niswander, first, Zak Scharenbroch, second and Andrew Mallory, third.

Girls 9-10: Jamie Pettis, first; Academy skier, Kayla Potter, first.

Boys, 11-12: Academy skiers, Chad Johnson, first, Ryan DeYoung, second and Nick Vogel, third.

Girls, 11-12: Tricia Wells, first; Jessica Pettis, second and Brittany Niswander, third.

Academy skier, Judeth King, first.

Boys, 13 and over: Jeff Buckner, first, Corey Wells, second and Robert Reiter, third.

In the snowboard division, results are: 10 and under: Nathaniel Sotuyo, first, Brandon Stevens, second and Jarod Kirby, third.

11-13-year-olds: Jake Parrish, first, Spencer Bryant, second and Sam Chulick, third.

14 and over: Chris Romig, first, Brian Thanasieu, second and Katie Romig, third.

In the snowboard scramble, 23 snowboarders competed in five different age divisions, going around gates and over jumps. First place was awarded in each division. The winners were: Jake Parrish, Marc Collier, Chris Romig, Phil Morris and Katie Romig.

A record number of trucks, jeeps and snowmobiles challenged themselves, other drivers and, of course, the hill during Sno Challenge action at Mt. McSaubia last Saturday afternoon.

Clockwise, from top left: Anybody know the record for the most people standing atop an RV? Whatever it is, this boisterous group, which cheered every racer up the hill, must come close.

Dale Boss and company kept spirits and bodies warm by fueling the bonfire at the base of the hill.

Snowboarding offered plenty of thrills and spills for spectators, but this boarder managed to stay vertical throughout his run.

With his sights undoubtedly set on the Olympic downhill event, this little skier licked his lips in anticipation of his run straight down the bunny hill.

SCRAPBOOK

Charlevoix seafarer lived a multi-faceted life

From the Archives
By Geoffrey D. Reynolds

With no end in sight for this odd-weathered winter, thoughts of sailing the waters of Lake Charlevoix and Lake Michigan are probably too distant for many of you. But for Captain Allie Moore, one of Charlevoix's more fondly remembered sailors, winter provided opportunities for cold weather hobbies such as crafting model boats, rope shoes and building dog sleds.

Born Sept. 3, 1883 to Ed and Annie (Hamilton) Moore in Charlevoix, Allie grew up around the water. Eventually he began his professional seafaring career at the age of 13 as a deck hand. For four summers he sailed the Great Lakes, while in winter he worked as a second cook in logging camps. At the age of 17 he traveled to St. Louis and there began working at a roller skating rink where he improved the growing up in Charlevoix. In 1903, at the age of 20, he turned professional and soon became the world champion in St. Louis. He would hold that title for nine years before losing it to long time friend and racing rival, Harley Davison, in Detroit.

During this championship reign, Allie toured Europe and Australia and entertained royal and common audiences alike at such venues as Bostock's Jungle, a famous European Circus in Berlin, Germany. While in Europe, he married the daughter of a trapeze artist, Freida Klicks, in Denmark. From there he allegedly sailed for the United States, by way of the Atlantic Ocean, in a 50-foot sailboat, which was later purchased by a local resort by the name of Robert Morrow. Freida eventually parted with Moore and later passed away in California.

In the winter of 1922, Moore lost the first of the vessels planned and crafted by his own hand. Known as the Friendship, the 38-foot sailboat was lost during a storm on Lake Huron's Saginaw Bay and eventually dashed to pieces on the Canadian shore. While he and his wife were saved by a south-bound steamer, Moore was left without a home or transportation. After reaching Detroit, Moore began planning and eventually building his second vessel, the 60-foot Golden Rule, in a barren boat shop at the foot of Grand River Avenue. It would eventually total $3,000, not including Moore's labor.

In 1924, after completing the boat, Allie and his wife sailed for Charlevoix. Once there the couple lived aboard the Golden Rule and, beginning in 1926, and continuing for two years, they conducted a sailing school for local and resort youngsters. In 1928, after lack of interest, the boat was rented for day trips by the Charlevoix Boys' Camp, a character camp for young men located on Oyster Bay. Eventually she was purchased by local builder and amateur filmmaker Earl Young and placed on the beach near Boulder Park for atmosphere.

Another hand-crafted vessel of Moore's was the well known Victory. She was eventually placed upon the bank of Pine River near Earl Young's stone creation, the Weathervane Restaurant. There, the Victory, which was originally constructed from a 16-foot row boat, sat until being moved to a local garage in the late 1980s. Currently in a local barn, she awaits attention by craftsmen familiar with her history, builder, and inevitable restoration costs.

Subsequent summer jobs for Moore included a sailing instructor position at the Charlevoix Boys' Camp, manager of the local roller skating rink, and captaining the yacht Sylvia G. from 1932 to 1941, and the Panamera until illness forced him to retire from the lakes in 1953. Other winter interests included building dog sleds and ship models. He often wintered at Harwood Lake in the Pigeon River country of northern Michigan.

Moore's eventful life ended on June 9, 1955 after a two-year illness. The years after the sale of the Golden Rule were spent in a house with his wife, Alma, on Carpenter Street. There, he was near the water and people he had entertained for most of his life.

While this account was written from available archival sources, much more information about Allie Moore and his life remain in the memories of his friends and fans.

If you would like to comment more on Moore, please write to the editor at the Charlevoix Courier or the Charlevoix Historical Society, P.O. Box 525, Charlevoix, MI 49720.

Schooling harder in homeland, say foreign students

the U.S. She said back home more of a college atmosphere exists when it comes to classroom attendance.

Birsa agreed that schooling is harder back home. He said there's more homework, more time devoted to theory work, and more expectations of students as far as class participation.

Charlevoix, they noted, had better equipment and that computer access was brand new to them.

The focus on sports and physical education was another notable difference.

"If I wanted to play a sport back home it would have to be through a club," Gapon said. "Here we can play for the school."

The spirit of high school athletics and the anticipation of a game during school is exciting, Birsa noted.

Bourquin said that school back home may be harder, but in the U.S., the student is given more possibilities to pursue.

All three have passed the midpoint in their American stay. They've adjusted well, made many new friends and are involved in school activities. Before they leave, they want to see some of the country's larger cities like Chicago, New York and Las Vegas. During winter, Bourquin joked, it would be nice to check out some of the warmer areas of the United States.

Big Band sound dazzled young and old

Local jazz ensemble wowed the crowd with music of '40s

By Joanne Beemon
Special to the Courier

The church was packed but hushed. Director Frank North stepped to the front, and with "a-one-and-a-two-and-a-one-two-three," over 200 lucky music lovers were transported to a time when women wore dresses, men opened doors for them and when Saturday night meant rolling up the living room rug and jitterbugging to Glen Miller's latest hit.

Performing at the First Congregational Church in Charlevoix, The Big Band, Charlevoix's jazz ensemble, began the Sundays at Four Concert Series with unbeatable class and style. Following the eight har bass rif introduction to "Jumpin' at the Woodside," the rich, full ensemble sound of The Big Band brought an audible sigh of delighted recognition, and, as the last note was played, a whoop of appreciation. Young and old were on their feet in a standing ovation.

The melodies of String of Pearls, Little Brown Jug and Moon-glow filled the church. Toes tapped, shoulders bounced, couples reached for each others' hands, locking eyes and remembering, while others, in sweet sad memory, two-stepped a lost lover one more time across the floor. Even the youngsters were caught up, and at intermission not one of them even attempted to make a break for the door.

It was the sounds of Tommy Dorsey and Count Basie and Buddy Rich floating through the room.

The group "Four Now" added tight harmony and lyrics to I've Got a Girl in Kalamazoo and Only a Paper Moon. Dick Tindall's alto sax solo in Harlem Nocturne was haunting. Jim Bogetto's trumpet was swingin' and Frank North was outstanding on I'm Getting Sentimental Over You. It was comfort food for the soul. It was wholesome and fun and the best of America. The frosting on the cake was a swing rendition of Just a Closer Walk With Thee. In that wonderful hour at the Congregational Church, The Big Band made cabin fever and the cold gray of February disappear. It was a delight. It was a gift, given by the musical members of The Big Band, which includes Dick Tindall, Jim Berlage, Russ Clubine, Tim Simond and Carl Mumm on alto saxophones, Evelyn Wujcik, Judy Pettijohn, Jim Bogetto and Mike Nunn on trumpets, Stuart Gunther, Al Soloman, Larry Flynn and Frank North on trombones, George Bliss on bass trombone, Karl Gilewicz on bass, Rick Beemon on guitar, and Bob Bellaires on drums.

The singing group Four Now is comprised of Denise Collins, Judy Wagley, Rob Wagley and Fred Szczepanski.

The Sunday concert was dedicated to Judy Willey, Dave Hutton and Steve Beachamp, three members who helped get The Big Band started and have since moved to other parts of the country.

Weird weather

El Nino leaves snow birds in the cold while Charlevoixans enjoy balmy temperatures

By Jamie MacMillan
and Laurie Lounsbury

Oh, that wily weather monger, El Nino. It's been wreaking havoc with traditional weather patterns all across the country.

In Charlevoix, we've been enjoying a mild winter with above normal temperatures and little or no precipitation. Those who are making large payments on new snowmobiles are cursing El Nino, while those who decided to hold off on a snowblower purchase for one more season are doing a thank-you dance in their driveways.

The ice on Lake Charlevoix is so thin it looks like the skin of an aristocratic blue-blood — and Lake Michigan never even froze.

Since weather dominates most of the local conversations, we decided to extend our chats with readers across the country. Our subscribers almost unanimously agree that rain and high winds have altered their winter getaway spots this year.

Former permanent Charlevoix residents Ed and Sally McNamara woke up on Christmas day in Lake Havasu City, Arizona, only to discover the thermometer was hovering at 32 degrees. Their daughter, Susan, called from Charlevoix to wish them a merry Christmas and to report that the icicles on the roof were melting. It was 35 degrees in Charlevoix.

"It's been cool here and it's still cool," Sally McNamara said.

Lake Havasu City has been getting higher than normal precipitation and cooler than normal temperatures, but it's also been getting something Charlevoix hasn't seen much of — the sun.

"The sun shines almost everyday," Sally said. "Ed's out playing golf, and he plays every day. So the weather hasn't really slowed us down much."

The plentiful rainfall has created a profusion of blooming desert flowers in the area, Sally reported. Some desert plants that are usually shy about showing off their colors are now spawning big, hold flowers.

"The desert is just beautiful," she said.

Another potential benefit to the heavy rains of El Nino may be an increase in the McNamara's property value, perched on the western edge of Arizona.

"We don't have oceanfront property yet, but I think it's coming as soon as California falls off," Sally said.

California coast, the problems of "El Nino" are well documented. The enigmatic weather pattern has pummeled the coast with rainstorm after rainstorm, creating disappearing coastlines and slippery mud slides.

Waste Management offers deal to county

By Jamie MacMillan

As the Cedar Ridge landfill expansion request rounds third base, Waste Management officials have sent to the plate a pinch hitter of sorts to bat its request safely home.

According to a letter sent by Jeff C. Poole, the company's community relations director, Waste Management is willing to offer Charlevoix County profit-sharing and new recycling services. They will also guarantee neighbors of the landfill recuperation of lost property value.

In return, the county and landfill neighbors must agree not to oppose any ongoing business at the Cedar Ridge facility as well as any new operations within the proposed expansion area.

Waste Management is willing to share 25 cents for every cubic yard of solid waste imported into Cedar Ridge from out-of-county sources.

Since a quarter isn't enough to make a call from a pay phone these days, it doesn't appear to be much of an offer. Taking into account the facility's 1996 figures, the proposal could land an extra $30,000 into the county's pockets.

In 1996, Cedar Ridge moved 285,805 cubic yards through its landfill — 119,752 (41.9%) of which came from outside the county. According to Waste Management's own breakdown, the facility hauls waste in from Emmet, Grand Traverse, Antrim, Kalkaska, Otsego, Cheboygan and Crawford counties.

The county's financial take would have been $29,938.07.

The trash that Cedar Ridge imports, however, from four of the above counties (Grand Traverse, Kalkaska, Otsego, and Cheboygan) are in violation of Charlevoix County's solid waste plan because Charlevoix doesn't have agreements with those counties to trade trash.

While it amounts to only 15 percent of Cedar Ridge's total imported volume, it does amount to over one-third of its out-of-county business covered in its proposed agreement to the county, equaling a possible monetary share of $10,646.25.

One of the many concerns of citizens opposing landfill expansion was a possible loss in property value should the facility expand, allowing for years more of operation. In an attempt to placate some of those concerns, Waste Management has offered, through the county, some property owners a reimbursement agreement.

Should property owners sell their investment for less than its projected value, Waste Management is willing to reimburse owners the difference, provided it does not exceed 10 percent of its estimated value. Property value will be determined by two appraisers hired by each party with the estimated value being the average.

While Cedar Ridge's proposed expansion is expected to increase the landfill's life span by 11 years, Waste Management's reimbursement offer is good for only five years. Any sale after Dec. 31, 2003 would not qualify for this offer.

The offer is only being extended to 12 properties which border the landfill. The offer not only prohibits those owners from taking any action or objection to landfill activities, but included in the language is granting Waste Management first right of refusal on any sale so they can seek another buyer, including themselves, who might pay more for the land.

The third piece of this pie includes setting up recycling services for the county. A sketch of the plan has the company setting up a drop-off station in the counties three major municipalities: Charlevoix, Boyne City and East Jordan. The station would be rotated from city to city on alternating Saturday mornings when Waste Management employees will be on hand to collect recyclables.

The fate of the expansion request lay with county planners who last week labeled the request "administratively complete," meaning the company provided the commission with all required information.

Planners were asked by the county board to review the request against the siting criteria in the county's solid waste plan. The siting criteria is a slew of zoning-like guidelines requiring landfills, for example, to be placed 200 feet beyond any adjacent properties or 1,000 feet from any bodies of water or airports.

Even if the expansion request meets the siting criteria, language throughout the solid waste plan, last updated in 1993, could lead planners to tag the request out as it heads to home plate.

Throughout the plan, all stipulations refer to a 40-acre landfill, the current size of Cedar Ridge. Anything beyond 40 acres, the plan states, must be granted approval by amending the plan through a special solid waste committee.

The plan is more specific on page 78, stating that any vertical or horizontal expansion of an existing landfill must be approved by a solid waste committee.

Last fall, the county board whittled over 50 applicants down to 14 to serve on the solid waste committee to revise the county plan. Top on its to-do list was the possible expansion or capping of the Cedar Ridge capacity.

Instead, the ball was lobbed into the planners' court, which may just end up tossing it back to the solid waste committee.

Planners have until Friday, April 14 to make a decision on the expansion request and next meet at 7 p.m. Thursday, March 5.

Township wants authority over landfill issue

While the Cedar Ridge expansion has been dealt with primarily on the county level, the landfill's home township is beginning to exert its influence.

Eveline Township has recently come out in opposition of the expansion, stating in a letter to county officials that it "flies in the face" of local zoning. It has asked that county planners deny the expansion request as it "violates the integrity" of the township.

"I'd like to think that we'd have a say in how our township is developed. At the least they should follow proper procedure."

— Dave Willson, Eveline Township supervisor ship's authority.

Top on their list is the fact that the township allows for landfills to be sited on agricultural districts. However, the proposed expansion would place the landfill on an FF, farmland/forest, district. Township officials also point out that the county's solid waste plan prohibits any landfill expansion in any zoning district except agricultural.

The township's position is that expansion at this point would violate the Solid Waste Management Act which mandates that all affected townships and citizens get a chance to participate in the updating and amending of the solid waste plan.

To that end, the township feels expansion of Cedar Ridge should be decided by a solid waste committee as that's the process laid out in the county's solid waste plan.

For township supervisor David Willson, the landfill's expansion dwarfs a larger issue — the ability of the township to govern.

"I'd like to think that we'd have a say in how our township is developed," he said. "At the least they should follow proper procedure."

Readers share weather stories with folks back home

Francisco, said the storms have not created havoc on her daily routine because she doesn't have to drive as much as some people.

"Living downtown I'm not as affected," she said. "Anybody who has to drive is affected. My boss is late to work a lot because the highways close with flooding."

Campbell characterized the weather as a "constant heavy drizzle." While the rain has created spectacular rainbows it has also been accompanied with heavy gusts of wind conjuring up some just as spectacular ocean waves.

"I have never seen the ocean look that mean before," she said of a recent visit to the shore where she witnessed waves over 25 feet.

She guessed the area has had only six days without rain since the new year, and people's mood is — in a word — "blah." Residents lock themselves in their homes, then break loose when the weather does. She noted that at the fabric store where she works, mobs of people came in on the last day it was sunny.

"All the rain has really helped us enjoy our sunny days a bit more," she said.

Southern California isn't escaping the wrath of rain either. Charlevoix's summer resorter John Wilson recently went on a golfing excursion in San Diego and reported that it rained 10 of 12 days he was there.

"The whole west coast has had heavy rain," he said.

Wilson lives in New Jersey, a few miles outside of New York City, and said the weather there has been unusually mild. The New Jersey winter has been a carbon copy of Charlevoix's winter, with warmer than normal temperatures and less snowfall.

"The amount of snowfall has been non-existent," he said noting that daytime temperatures have been between 50-55 degrees throughout January and February.

Charlevoix summer residents Bill and Susan Klingbeil spend the majority of the winter season in Long Boat Key, Fla., but spend a few weeks each year in the Everglades. This year, however, they postponed their pilgrimage to the Everglades 10 days, due to the weather.

"It's been exceptionally cold and windy," Sue reported, noting that temperatures have dipped into the 40s on many occasions.

Delaying their trip to the Everglades didn't help them bypass bad weather. The area has been hit with tornado warnings, the first the Klingbeils recalled in their 13 years in Florida. During the warning, Bill said three inches of rain fell.

"It's been the worst January in years," Bill said. "We've had an awful lot of rain and heavy winds."

Sue said the local bird population has been affected the most, as the rain has increased water levels, making their nesting more challenging.

"The one positive," Bill joked, "is the mosquitoes are down."

It seems even El Nino can't do much to adversely affect the typically gray, moist days in the Great Northwest. Summer resorter Dave Loving, of Tacoma, Washington, said it's drizzliness as usual in his neck of the woods.

"It's about 55 degrees and raining lightly, just like it usually is this time of year," Loving said. "It's southern California that's really getting creamed," he added. When he spoke with us, Loving was in Memphis, Tenn., visiting his daughter, Betsy.

"It's 55 degrees and raining here in Memphis, too," he said.

Like other residents of Maine,

Ben Lounsbury calls himself a Maniac. He and all his fellow Maniacs will have their work cut out for them this summer, cleaning up miles of tree limbs, branches and debris that came crashing down during their horrendous ice storm.

Lounsbury's family lost power in their Lewiston, Maine home for seven days during the ice storm that blanketed the state with four inches of ice. Huge trees caved under the weight of ice, splitting them in two or tearing huge, graceful limbs off the trunks.

"It will take a lot of work parties this summer to clean up all the hiking and cycling trails around us," Lounsbury said.

The ice did lay down a very cold foundation for their winter snow. Although their temperatures have been above normal, Lounsbury said they still have a foot of dense, compacted snow on the ground, unlike Charlevoix, which has no snow left anywhere.

Road commission poised for early construction work

Light snow leaves money for repairs

By Jamie MacMillan

While the mild, relatively snow free winter has kept skiers, sledders and snowmobilers off area hills and trails, it has also kept county plows off the roads, helping the Charlevoix County Road Commission save over $500,000 in costs.

"The winter has been exceptionally good to us," said road commission engineering manager Pat Harmon. "We have no complaints."

According to Harmon, during the winter of 1996-97, they spent $983,114.92 in snow removal costs like equipment, fuel, wages, sand and salt.

This year, however, with the winter in its home stretch, the commissioner has spent only $404,602.07.

The difference is obvious. The winter of 1997-98, which has provided just traces of snow in the last month, has paled in comparison to last winter, which had county plows working seemingly night and day.

Overtime wages, along with extra sand and salt, caused higher costs last year. Harmon noted that last winter he did not have a day off from Christmas Day to mid-March. This winter has been a different story.

"There have been fewer Saturday and Sundays with the plows out," he said. "The weekend weather has been mild, which helps us save money."

With the early thaw, Harmon noted that temporary weight restrictions on gravel and seasonal roads already are in place, a few weeks earlier than usual. Also, last spring when the snow melted it left many roads impassable. Thus far, Harmon said some roads are muddy and messy, but they have yet to find one that would be labeled impassable.

An early spring leads to an early start to the road construction season, and the road commission is eying one major task.

Harmon said they will be blacktopping six miles of the Boyne City-East Jordan Road from Pearsall Road to the city limits of East Jordan. The blacktopping, he said, will help elevate the road to class A status, meaning it no longer will be a seasonal road with spring-time weight restrictions.

Harmon said no start-up date has been set and early estimates price the project at $405,000.

Harmon also said the commission is looking into widening Marion Center Road, but no details have been worked out.

It's also construction season for local townships, cities and the state.

In Eveline Township, two projects started last summer remain unfinished. Mountain Road from M-66 to Whitfield Road is amid being asphalted while Ranney Road from Ferry to South Gaunt is being blacktopped. Both projects could not be completed by the end of last fall.

Township supervisor David Willson hinted at possible other projects. He mentioned strong interest in working on a one mile stretch of Peninsula Road between Ferry and Ridge Roads. The snag is the township holding their breath over Governor John Engler's plan to have the state takeover local primary roads. Peninsula Road would be one of those roads.

"We're hesitant to spend our own money if it's not going to be our road," he said.

The township's road millage, 1 mill for two years, has expired, Willson noted, and the township might ask for a renewal in August.

Willson also said Brooks Road going south by Nowland Lake also could see improvements this summer.

In Bay Township, supervisor Allie Chipmann said discussion has centered around asphaltting Old Horton Bay Road from Church Road down to the bay. It's a two-and-one-quarter stretch of road, and Chipmann said the township has between $60-70,000 from gas tax money and double that in general funds to spend on the project.

The City of Charlevoix anticipates, in street supervisor John Martin's words, "an aggressive construction period."

"We'll be fixing up roads in town that really need it bad," he said.

The city hopes to complete their Belvedere project, which halted last year with work still needed to be done along Ferry and Eaton Streets.

The city will then rebuild portions of May, Upright, Lincoln and Huribut streets with an estimated bill being $429,000. Martin also said they'll be building a new sidewalk on the west side of Garfield Street. Martin noted roads will be periodically closed as construction progresses.

OPINIONS

Students learn life lessons from two fine teachers

They might not realize it now, but the sixth grade students in Kathy Gowell's English class are learning an important lesson that will serve them well for the rest of their lives.

As one of their writing assignments, Gowell's students must compose a letter to the editor about a current issue or topic of their choice. It's been a class project of Gowell's for as long as I can remember.

Writing a letter to the editor of a local newspaper is a very powerful tool. It serves several purposes, not the least of which is allowing a person to vent their feelings about a current issue. It also draws public awareness to issues and can educate others about a topic that might have escaped their notice.

In the last seven years, not a week goes by that someone doesn't approach me to passionately discuss some current issue. They may be angry, or they may be delighted, or they may be frustrated, but one thing is certain — they all want to express their feelings.

"Why don't you write a letter to the editor?" I usually ask them.

Many times, these people tell me they're embarrassed to write a letter to the editor because they don't know how to spell well, or their grammar is poor.

How sad.

And what a hopeless, desperate feeling it must be not to be able to write your feelings down in a letter to the local editor.

Kathy Gowell's students are getting far more than a lesson in proper letter-writing form. They're getting a lesson in democracy, freedom of speech and the power of the pen.

They're learning that maybe you can't fight city hall, but you can write about city hall.

They're learning that, through their letters, they might get answers to questions they have about their community.

EDITORIAL

I applaud Kathy Gowell and her sixth grade class for their letter-writing campaign. Maybe she should teach an adult education class on the same subject. There are many people who could benefit from her knowledge.

On another school note, I'd like to commend Northwest Academy for blending science and technology studies with environmental and outdoor studies.

Although the great outdoors and computers don't seem like a likely pairing, the teachers and administrators of the school have demonstrated that the two subjects go together like chocolate and pretzels.

On one learning front, students are studying individually on computers, learning technology or gleaming useful information from the Internet.

All that individual, techno-time is balanced with group activities in the wilderness. They frequently go on hiking and camping trips, where they learn to work as a team, study nature, and see for themselves what is happening to their environment.

As a camp owner and Outward Bound instructor, Bill Schulman is the driving force behind the environmental trips. His students are seeing what natural gas drilling is doing to the Jordan Valley. They see what logging is doing to the Pigeon River Valley.

No amount of reading in a textbook can give a student an appreciation for the environment the way a walk through nature can.

The school has no shop class or gym class, yet the students at Northwest are making dog sleds and canoe paddles, then taking them out into nature to test the worthiness of their hand-made items. They get plenty of exercise on the three-to-five mile hikes. It's a terrific blending of curriculum.

Middle school students are at an age where they're awakening to the world around them. Intensely curious, these students need teachers who can teach them to ask questions for themselves.

Kathy Gowell and Bill Schulman are doing just that.

Letters to the editor

Humane society needs help from citizens

Dear Editor:

This is a response to the letter written by Amanda Boss that appeared in your paper Feb. 18, 1998.

Amanda, thank you for visiting the Charlevoix County Humane Society.

We agree with you, the Charlevoix County Humane Society does need a bigger and better facility. We have been working very hard for the last couple of years to make it happen. We have succeeded, with the help of the Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners. The new Charlevoix County Humane Society will be located on Beardsley and Brockway streets in Boyne City.

The Charlevoix County Humane Society is a non-profit organization and survives through donations from people like you.

The animals are lonely, Amanda. They are lost or abandoned. We are their only friends right now. We count on volunteers to help feed, walk and play with them. We make sure they have toys to play with according to their size. Right now, we have toys for smaller dogs or puppies. Toys are also donated, so we could use large or ones.

Amanda, we do have a problem with sick animals. Since these animals are lost or abandoned we do not always know if they have been vaccinated. Animals that run at large and are sick can spread or pick up contagious diseases very quickly. And, since, by law, the animals are not the property of the humane society until after the fifth day, only then can we evaluate them and take the appropriate measures, like taking them to a veterinarian.

We prefer that I, as the executive director and the shelter attendant, handle these animals in order to contain the disease.

We love and care for these animals as if they were our own.

There is no smoking in any county building; the humane society has also adopted this policy.

We appreciate your concerns and questions about the animals and the shelter. It shows you are becoming a responsible and caring citizen. We welcome you and your friends to come see us and volunteer. The animals need you.

Sincerely,

Martha Weisler
Executive Director
Charlevoix County Humane Society

Sixth grader correct about need for recycling

Dear Editor:

It was with a great deal of interest and pride that I read a letter to the editor from a young sixth grade student concerning providing a local place to take recyclables.

It seems to me if someone in the sixth grade can see a need for this type of service it should not be beyond the vision of someone that would be able to provide it.

A number of years ago I called Waste Management and asked if it would be possible to bring a recycling truck to some place like Captain's Corner on a once-a-month basis, thus providing recycling to those who do not have that option. At that time I was told that the idea would be passed on. Apparently it went no further.

Let's hope that there are others in our community that will support the idea that John DiMartino and I share.

Sincerely,

Olga Camilleri

Don't spoil Bridge Park with outside dining

Editor:

Where in the whole world could you find a more beautiful, God-given spot than our Charlevoix? Why spoil it with the outside dining project, in our lovely, new Bridge Park? I suggest it be lined with benches, along Bridge Street (as the East Park), so people could enjoy the natural beauty, without the noisy, crumbly (excuse the pun!) outside, commercial area of outside dining. Think about it!

Thank you!

Mary M. Geiken

Charlevoix photo book is a winner

Dear Editor:

Last week the members of a local book club were privileged to see the press proofs of the upcoming Charlevoix photo/text book by Ken Scott (photos) and Dianne Foster (text). BREATHTAKING!! AWE-SOME!! As we turned the pages, I had to struggle to keep tears from falling — I was so overwhelmed at the beauty of Charlevoix, Beaver Island, Horton Bay, the Coast Guard and surrounding areas — scenes I see every day and take for granted. One comment by one of the members, after viewing the book, was that it was "a spiritual healing." Because of what Charlevoix has gone through the last two years (Venetian, the Ramseys) her love for Charlevoix was faltering. That book restored her love for Charlevoix.

the-Beautiful.

Also, the supporting text by Dianne Foster that goes along with any of the photos, was superb! For you True Natives, I guarantee you will learn something — things that will make you proud of your Charlevoix.

This book will be available around June of this year. To get a copy of the first printing, it would be to your advantage to reserve a copy now at Bridge Street Book Shop. A treasure.

Sincerely,
Nancy Grunch

Rainbow Shoppe does sell used furniture

TO THE EDITOR:

Dear Laurie:

Your article about the Congregational Youth Group was very interesting, but in part, very wrong! Mrs. Hochhalter was not advised correctly about the Rainbow Shoppe not accepting furniture. We most certainly do accept furniture that is in good condition and saleable. We do not accept sofa-sleepers, beds, box springs, mattresses, carpeting, or appliances.

We depend on the revenue of the sale of furniture to reach out fi-

(corner of Park Avenue and State Street) at 7:15 p.m. Wednesday, March 4, following the regular Wednesday night dinner.

Couper graduated from the School for International Service at American University, Washington, DC specializing in International Relations. He is now completing his Masters of Divinity degree at Chicago Theological Seminary. During 1995 he served in the Kingdom of Lesotho (totally enclosed by South Africa). His primary responsibility involved advocacy efforts concerning rights of African people threatened by a major World Bank-supported water project.

Couper will present a video describing the situations he dealt with when sent by the UCC/Disciples to the Transformation Resource Centre in Maseru, capitol of Lesotho. His talk will also highlight the prophetic mission of Christians as exemplified by the minor prophets; and, how any local church can reach out to a world in great, pressing and far too often, unappreciated need.

All are warmly welcomed to the Congregational Church Wednesday night dinners, with the meal at 6 p.m. For more details on dinner reservations or the speaker please call the church at 547-9122.

nancially to more non-profit organizations. When we can donate over $60,000 to the needy organizations in and around the community, it didn't all come from selling clothing.

In the future, I sincerely hope Mrs. Hochhalter corrects this error and refers the Rainbow Shoppe to the people who wish to donate their furniture.

On a more positive side of the coin, the youth group deserves applause for their endeavors!!

Thank you,

Public should phone humane society if pet is missing

Dear Editor:

In response to the letter from Stephen Andreae, the Charlevoix County Humane Society is sorry that your cat was adopted before you could reclaim it. We are happy it has found a good home; but the animal control officer retains the animal in the animal shelter for five days, one extra day than is required by law. Then the animal is turned over to the Charlevoix County Humane Society. Even though we are housed together we are two separate entities.

People like you should call all shelters immediately after your animal is lost so we know the type, color, age, sex and who is missing their pet.

The Charlevoix County Humane Society is a non-profit organization, which means nearly all the money needed to run the society is raised through fund raising and community donations.

All the animals in the humane society have beds of some sort, whether it is carpeting for the cats or raised poly-resin platform beds for the dogs. We need to be able to sanitize these every day. We can always use more beds, toys, dishes etc.

We invite you to volunteer to walk, feed, or help with the animals at the Charlevoix County Humane Society. We always welcome help and currently have over 18 young volunteers. We can always use more.

Thank you for your concern.
Sincerely,
Martha Weisler
Executive Director
Charlevoix County Humane Society

Compromise suggested for Veterans' Park plans

Editor:

We have read with great interest the plans for revamping Veterans' Park. For many years the park has been shrouded with heavy tree cover and seemed unappealing when walking or driving past it.

The trees, though planted for a memorial, were let go for a period of years and now leave a bit of a challenge for their continued existence. As a living memorial, the trees no longer perform that service, since many of the immediate relatives of the honored soldiers are now deceased.

How about a compromise?

Remove the trees and update the stone memorial with the names of Charlevoix County veterans who perished during World War I. We would be very proud to make a contribution in the name of our great uncle, Pvt. William John Burns, Co.H., 16 Infantry, US Army, who died from poison gas during a battle on the western front in France, 1918.

Firefighters say thanks for help at Sno Challenge

Editor:

The City of Charlevoix Volunteer Firefighter's Association would like to thank the following for making the concession stand fund raiser at the Winter Sno Challenge, of 2/14/98, such a success. Dale Boss, Ike Boss, Bo Boss and Jim Boss, who offered the concessions to us as a fund raiser, BC Pizza of Charlevoix who provided pizzas and delivery throughout the day, Sue Meier, Patty Spenceley, Katie Pettis, Shelley Stevens, Sara Ward, and the children of Bill Brodin, Jeff Riley, Jim Pettis, Teri Wilson and Laurie Kleiber who were all non-association members who helped with the concession, and the Flight Deck who provided their food services.

The association does several fund raisers throughout the year and we appreciate all of the support the community gives to us.

Ice rink needs serious attention

Dear Editor:

I live near the skating rink and have noticed the bad condition it's in. There are bumps from the ice unfreezing and freezing again. The ice has soft spots and places where it's thin. You can fall very easily. The younger kids like my sister have fallen down and hurt themselves because of those spots. The kids, like me, who play pick up hockey games fall in divots and holes in the ice. The only way it's going to be fixed is if somebody waters it and lets it freeze hard over night. So much for a nice family outing when you end up in the emergency room!

Yours truly,
Matt Burt
Sixth Grade

Charlevoix Middle School
Editor's note: Dear, Matt: Fixing the ice rink may be a moot point at this stage of the game. Ask your teacher, Mrs. Gowell, what 'moot' means or look it up in the dictionary. Thanks for writing with your concerns.

School board member deserves pat on back

Dear Editor:

I am writing this letter in response to an article about the school board (1-28-98). I think that Mr. Barney Way deserves a pat on the back. His idea for a new high school on the M-66 property, in my opinion, would benefit everyone. Repairs on the three Charlevoix schools would cost as much and would be a benefit for much less time than a whole new school. There is no perfect place for a new school. Besides, at the rate Charlevoix is growing, downtown will be way past Castle Farms in 10 years. Thank you very much.

Sincerely,
Anna Trubilowicz

New civic center could be useful through all construction phases

Dear Editor:

I am a sixth grader at the Charlevoix Middle School. I am writing because I think we need a civic center. First we could buy some land, then lay cement. Then in summer we can rollerblade and rollerskate. In winter we can ice skate.

Next, maybe we could build a building. Us kids would appreciate it. We would use it for basketball and volleyball and things like that. Thank you so much.

Skater wants indoor hockey rink in Charlevoix

Dear Editor:

This year has been hard for a lot of hockey parents because they have to drive to Gaylord just for practice and games. They don't want to play in Charlevoix because they don't want to stand outside. It is hard on us. We have to find the puck when it is snowing. It is really cold outside when we play. Plus, there is no roof over the rink. I think they should build an indoor rink and it could be on the high school campus in Charlevoix.

Respectfully yours,
Allen Couture

Cuba Libre delivers adventure

More action from author Elmore Leonard

Book Shelf

By Kit Foster

By Kit Foster
Bridge Street Book Shop

In his latest novel, aptly titled Cuba Libre (Delacorte Press, $23.95), Elmore Leonard takes a step back in time to the eve of the Spanish-American War. This historical novel, set in Cuba just days after the sinking of the U.S. battleship Maine, finds cowboy Ben Tyler delivering a string of horses — a cover for the boatload of guns destined for Cuban insurgents.

Within 24 hours of landing in Cuba, Tyler embarks on a wild ride. He sells his horses, is forced to kill a Spanish Cavalry officer, makes a friend in Cuban Victor Fuentes, finds an enemy in Spanish Civil Guard officer Lionel Talavera, and ends up in dreaded Morro Castle Prison.

Tyler's escape, aided by the beautiful Amelia Brown, eventually comes, although his freedom becomes a race for time. The Americans are coming, but he is being pursued by the sinister Talavera and his Guardia Civil. At stake is not only his freedom, but life thereafter with Amelia and a large satchel of cash that everyone is chasing.

Cuba Libre is an explosive mix of high adventure, history and romance. It's a 343-page turner to its unpredictable end. This 73-year-old Michigan author of 34 novels, including such bestsellers as Riding the Rap, Rum Punch, Pronto and Get Shorty, has another winner on his hands. It twists, it turns, it's sly, slippery and witty. This one would make a great movie!

Mary Helen Riggle named volunteer of the year

By Laurie Lounsbury

Mary Helen Riggle was absolutely delighted when she was chosen by TV 9 & 10 as the volunteer of the month in December.

At that time, she was presented with a check for $1,000 — a sizable sum of money to boost the project she started in 1984 with Lucy Martin, the Charlevoix Community Food Pantry.

Just when the Christmas project was behind her, Riggle got another surprise.

She was selected as volunteer of the year by TV 9 & 10, chosen from the pool of 12 volunteers of the month.

The second honor sent her rocketing into a new stratosphere of joy.

"I'm just giddy with all this money," Riggle said.

The volunteer of the year honor earned Riggle a check for $10,000, that she may donate to the charity of her choice.

Naturally, the money will go to Riggle's pet project, the food pantry. The devoted group operates the food pantry all year long, providing a continuous supply of goods for needy people.

"I have lots of dreams for this," Riggle told the camera crew from TV 9 & 10. "Now we can provide more in the food baskets, like soap and paper products."

Riggle explained that federal grant money through FEMA (Federal Emergency Management Agency) will only pay for food.

"Now we can buy soaps, laundry detergent, toilet paper, Kleenex and paper towels with this," Riggle said.

Although the Charlevoix Middle School students raised more than $14,000 for the food pantry, Riggle said they still need money.

"There's been so many floods, fires and earthquakes that FEMA funds are depleted," Riggle said, noting that the grant money they receive from the federal agency gets smaller every year.

The food pantry is open every Monday and Thursday to families living in the Charlevoix School District.

The volunteer recognition program, called "Helping Hands," is also sponsored by A & T.

Big Rock Point workers boost blood drive

Big Rock Point nuclear power plant employees set a new record Wednesday while lying on their backs.

A total of 99 units of blood were donated at a blood drive conducted by the American Red Cross.

The total surpasses the previous record of 96 units, which were donated in December.

Blood drive coordinator and Big Rock Point senior engineer

George Petitjean attributes the performance to a site record of 13 first-time donors and the continued support of plant employees, retirees and contractors.

This is the third consecutive drive that resulted in a plant record.

A total of 305 pints of blood have been collected by the Red Cross since the plant began holding drives 12 years ago.

High school students sponsor blood drive

The Charlevoix High School Student Council is sponsoring a blood drive from 8:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. Tuesday, March 3.

The blood drive will be held in the Charlevoix High School study hall.

The community is encouraged to participate in the blood drive.

OF BLESSINGS

"Fat Tuesday is Paczki Day," announced the sign in the window of Karl's Bakery. Immediately I was reminded that the church season of Lent was coming and it was time to think about fasting and other ways to prepare to relive Jesus' death and resurrection. You may wonder what these doughnuts called "Paczki," sold on Tuesday, have to do with Jesus prepared for His ministry of bringing God's Kingdom to people through His presence, death and resurrection from the dead. In the "Good News according to Luke," within the Bible we read that, "Jesus was about 30 years old when he began his work" (Luke 3:23). Luke also says that before he began His ministry, He "... was led by the Spirit in the wilderness, where for 40 days he was tempted by the devil. He ate nothing at all during those days, and when they were over, He was famished" (Luke 4:1-2). This time of fasting (refraining from certain foods) was a time of testing for Jesus where He struggled with following the devil's lead or choosing to follow God's direction for Him all the way to a painful death on the cross for us. Jesus fasted and was tested concerning His commitment to doing God's work before beginning His work.

Throughout the ages the Church has also encouraged people to fast from certain foods for the 40 weeks before Easter. This is meant to be a time of testing for people about their commitment to Christ who was committed enough to die for their sakes. Could the people follow Jesus in not eating certain foods for 40 days and thereby make room in their lives to think (whenever hunger pains came or it was time to eat) about what God wants them to be doing with their lives?

The fast that most people observed meant eating anything but certain fat-producing items like eggs, butter, milk and sugar. People would get rid of these items on the Tuesday, February 24, before the fast so that they would not be too tempted by them. To keep from totally wasting these items, they would make things like Paczkis, which have all these ingredients in them and consume them on "Fat Tuesday." This, "Fat Tuesday is Paczki Day" as Karl's sign said.

Not many of us (in the church or out) fast anymore in preparation for Holy week and Easter. Instead, most of us fill our lives with Paczkis, Easter eggs, candy and everything the material world throws at us. With all that we are full of during this season — Jesus sets us a different example and asks us a question: Are you willing to give up some of that stuff to make room for the leading of My Spirit? Are you willing to make space to consider what I want you to do with your life? What are you willing to give up the Wednesday after Fat Tuesday in preparation for Easter?

There's one born every day

A lover of books is born with each new baby

By Laurie Lounsbury

The importance of reading to newborn babies received national attention on NBC's Today Show, when Katie Couric talked with an expert on the subject.

At about the same time the segment was being aired, folks in Charlevoix were already doing something to promote reading to infants.

The Charlevoix Elementary School teamed up with the Charlevoix Area Hospital and Northern Michigan hospitals to present newborn babies with a book and a T-shirt.

Elementary school principal Dick Swenor was the driving force behind the project.

"I read about it in a professional magazine and thought it sounded like a great idea," Swenor said.

Working with Sue Gengle, elementary school secretary, and Gayle Gennett, coordinator of the at-risk program at the elementary school, the three arranged to have a packet presented to every new baby born to parents in the Charlevoix School District.

The Gengle Insurance Agency donated tiny infant T-shirts that boast a cuddly Teddy bear wearing a night cap and the slogan, "Read to me."

"It's a little reminder for the parents to read to their baby," Swenor said of the T-shirt.

Gennett obtained $2,000 in donated books for the project.

Swenor said it was his research on the subject of reading that fanned his flames of enthusiasm.

"Research is saying the kids who come to school with experience in reading, and being read to at a young age, are ahead of the game," Swenor said.

"It's kind of like the basketball teams in town. They start them younger and younger every year. I think we had a kindergarten team this year," Swenor said.

Parents of newborn babies will receive in their packet a letter from Swenor and copies of two articles from professional magazines that stress the importance of reading to infants.

"It also includes information on how to read to your child at different ages," Swenor said, noting that newborns listen to the rhythm of the words and sentences.

The first baby to receive a book and T-shirt was Kacie McGillivray, daughter of Brian and Rebecca McGillivray, who was born on Valentine's Day.

The proud parents needed no convincing about the importance of reading. Rebecca is a teacher at St. Mary's School in Charlevoix, and Brian is a former news reporter for the Petoskey News-Review.

School board considers new facility options

By Jamie MacMillan

The tug-of-war between what's best for the school district versus what the community will support for the school district continued Monday night at a Charlevoix Board of Education facility project work session.

The issue is what type of school to build — a new 5-8 middle school or a new high school, while relocating grades 5-8 into the current high school.

Two board members, Barney Way and Scott Boss, support building a new high school while three members, Alan Telgenhof, Larry Levengood and Ike Boss support building a new middle school.

Ardeth Wieland admitted to remaining undecided about what kind of school to build, while the seventh member, Pete Spies, said his true feelings leaned toward building a new high school, but doubted his feelings were shared by the greater community.

"I don't think the community wants a new high school," he said. "If the community says 'no,' then I don't want to push a new high school. The community should dictate what we do."

Therein lies the rub. All seven board members seemed to agree that the best route educationally would be a new high school, but, to some, the weight of failed bond elections which asked for a new high school has them steering clear from that route.

Telgenhof said another defeat at the polls might cause the board to lose the stomach to go forward.

Levengood, noting that all the past survey information points toward community support only for a new middle school, said district residents, "expect us to listen to them, and it's time we do."

Both Levengood and Telgenhof suggested building a middle school now and, down the line, perhaps as far as a decade, work toward a new high school.

Way questioned if pulling a new trick out the bag to win an election instead of refining past proposals showed real leadership.

"A new middle school is a short term fix," he said. "In five years when we say, 'now we need a new high school,' the community will wonder why we didn't do it then."

Added Scott Boss, "A new high school is the best product. If every time, as a salesman, I changed products when I got turned down, I'd run out of products."

The trio for a new middle school was confident a bond issue for a new high school would fail, prompting Levengood to respond that "doing anything that would cause more damage and cause more credibility problems is not all that visionary."

Of course, what to build is only one facility issue plaguing the board. Where to build a new school was just as divisive.

Levengood and Ike Boss support chasing the eight-acre piece of property between Division Street and U.S. 31. The property is across the street from the Community Reformed Church, and is valued between $250,000-$275,000. Ike Boss noted the owner is willing to accept a refundable $5,000 purchase option to temporarily hold the land for the district.

"The availability is there, and I think we should do it," Levengood said.

The remainder of the board was concerned with the land's size. Before the board delved into serious discussion, it heard reports from its architectural consultant, Jim Sneathen, who said building any school on land under 10 acres would be a real challenge.

"We'd be putting ourselves into a trap if we put a building on a postage stamp-sized piece of property," Wieland said. "We'd have no room for change."

In a reversal from their candidate posturing, both Way and Scott Boss spoke in favor of revisiting the land on M-66 off of Shaw and Wickersham Roads.

Way said the land lends itself better to the district's needs than anything else, and pushed the board to extend its option on the land, which expires on June 30.

"It's smart money spent," he said.

The problem with most of the larger pieces of property, though, is that few have water or sewer utility hook-ups and many are wet and

Recreational vehicle rider plunges through ice

By Laurie Lounsbury

No one knows better than Brent Cadarette and his father, Dave, how thin and dangerous the ice is on Lake Charlevoix. Brent was driving a three-wheel, all-terrain vehicle (ATV) across Lake Charlevoix east of Hemingway Point last Tuesday when he suddenly found his machine plunging into a five-foot-wide crack in the ice.

When the three-wheeler plowed into the open water at 40 mph, Brent was thrown over the handlebars and landed on the other side of the gaping hole of open water, his upper body on the ice and his lower body in the water.

Although bruised and cut from the icy encounter, Brent was able to pull himself out and walk to shore. On his walk, he had to jump over two-foot wide cracks in the ice.

The next day, his father, Dave, helped Brent retrieve his three-wheeler.

"We had to take long ladders and span them across two, five-foot cracks to get his bike," Dave said. The men are certified divers, and were dressed appropriately for the retrieval. The large tires on the three-wheeler kept it afloat where it entered the ice.

Sheriff George Lasater said the accident was the second of its kind in two weeks. A four-wheel ATV went through the ice on Deer Lake two weeks before Brent's accident. Word of the two accidents has spread among ice fishermen and recreational vehicle drivers, according to Lasater.

"We're seeing a lot of common sense being used now," Lasater said. "The word is getting out. We're encouraging people not to get on the ice at all."

Dave Cadarette agreed with that advice, saying the ice is getting ready to break up altogether.

"The ice is getting honeycombed," Dave said. "Once it's honeycombed, the water fills the holes and it melts really quickly."

Both Dave and the sheriff said the ice is thinner than it's been in decades for this time of year. Dave said he recalled weather like this in 1967, when he was 13 years old.

"There was no snow on the ground on Jan. 2, which was my birthday," Dave said. "We went hunting for rabbits in the swamp areas. The white rabbits stood out against the brown ground."

There are a few ice shanties still left on the lake, leaving owners in a quandary about how to remove them safely.

"I wouldn't want to be pulling any shanties off there," Dave said.

In some places, the ice is three to four inches thick, which Lasater said is thick enough to support a person walking on the ice. Yet in other places, it's only one inch thick.

After the hearing the news of Brent Cadarette's plunge into Lake Charlevoix, ice shanty owners hurried to pull their shanties off the lake and onto the shore. These shanties are clustered at Washington Street Beach in Ironton, awaiting transportation to garages and barns, where they will be stored until next year. (Photo by Laurie Lounsbury)

According to Lee Somers, water safety specialist at the University of Michigan, ice must be at least five inches thick for general activities and much thicker to withstand the weight of snowmobiles, cars or trucks.

"If people must venture onto the ice, they should use the buddy system and walk a few yards apart," Somers said. "If you do fall through the ice, don't panic and never remove clothes, since they may provide some flotation as well as act as an insulator."

School board divided on best land, building options

swampy, providing less actual room to build upon. Such is the case with the M-66 property, the 22 acres across from Stroud Hall on Old Orchard Road, and the 50 acres of land within the triangle of U.S. 31, Martin Road and Waller Road. The board, though, remains interested in all three properties.

"If we can find dry land, I'm all for it," Ike Boss said of placing schools on a big piece of land away from the downtown district.

The one common ground that was forged was that all seven members would support fully whatever proposal is launched even if it didn't equate with their personal vision.

"Even if we don't go with what I think is best for the kids of Charlevoix," Scott Boss said, "it's not like we're trying to build them a doghouse."

The board next meets at 7 p.m. Monday, March 9 in the Middle School cafeteria.

Community foundation appoints new officers

The Charlevoix County Community Foundation has a new president for 1998. William Lorne, East Jordan resident and vice president for administrative affairs at the East Jordan Iron Works, has been chosen to lead the charitable organization during the year.

Lorne replaces outgoing president Mike Stowe, who will continue to serve as a trustee. Both have served as trustees of the community foundation since its inception.

Other officers are: William Sherman, vice president; Vel Kammermann, treasurer; and Jean Van Dam, corporate secretary. The foundation also welcomes two new trustees this year — Wally Klein and Larry Mattox. Klein, a native of St. Louis and a Detroit area resident, maintains a summer home in Charlevoix. She is active in a number of civic and charitable organizations, both downstate and in the Charlevoix area. Mattox, a Boyne City resident, is city executive of Huntington Bank, formerly FMB. He is involved in many of the area's economic development initiatives and civic projects.

Founded in 1992 by a group of local citizens, the community foundation receives charitable contributions and manages them in a collective, permanent endowment. Income from the endowment is used, in turn, to support a variety of worthy programs and projects that benefit Charlevoix County.

Since it began, the foundation has distributed more than $600,000 in grants and scholarships. For more information about the foundation, call 536-2440 or write them at P.O. Box 718, East Jordan, MI, 49727.

Fireworks victims get aid

Charlevoix County Community Foundation executive director Bob Tambellini (left) accepts a $650 donation from Ellsworth Lioness president Jeanette Muma (right) and Lioness Theola Elzinga toward the Charlevoix Venetian Fireworks Victims Fund. The money represents the entire proceeds from a raffle, craft table sales and a food booth at the Ellsworth Christmas Bazaar run by the service club, which includes 25 members from the Ellsworth-Atwood area. "We are interested in our neighboring communities," Elzinga said. "One of our members came up with the idea of helping the folks hurt from the fireworks explosion, and everybody thought it was a super idea." (Photo courtesy of Petoskey News-Review/Keith Matheny)

Family that flips together, stays together

By Jamie MacMillan

For Mike Patrick, the grind to earn a Hapkido black belt evolved into an obsession.

Not so much because he wanted to prove to everyone and himself that a "40-something" could attain such elite athletic status while not toiling on something labeled as an elderly Senior Tour.

His obsession bloomed from the company he kept while working toward a black belt.

"I had set two goals when I began," Patrick said. "I wanted to earn my black belt by age 45, and I wanted my two sons with me."

Last May, the mission was accomplished as Patrick and his sons Michael II, 22, and Keith, 14, each earned the martial arts' ultimate label in what looked to most as "A Family Affair" blended with "Kung-Fu."

In reality, the sport of martial arts tends to bring families together. Patrick noted that at the Charlevoix Martial Arts Academy, a karate club that Patrick started and works as an instructor, families enroll together frequently, beginning when a parent registers a child.

"They'll ask if they can stay and watch for awhile," Patrick said. "Within two days they sign themselves up. It can be one big happy family at times."

Of course, not all families are where conversations would stagnate after run of the mill questions such as "What happened in school today," ran their course. He recalls dinner talk ending abruptly when he was growing up, his father losing interest in hearing reviews of the new Alice Cooper album.

Practicing martial arts with each other, Patrick said, put the threesome on an even plane.

"I'm no longer Dad or the Boss — we're all equal. It's something we can talk about and understand like, 'weren't those roundhouse kicks tough.' It's bridged a gap and we found out that we're all not that bad."

Son Michael agreed that it brought the family closer. Not only did Hapkido give the three of them common ground, it created time for them to talk about their lives with each other.

"That would not have happened without Hapkido," he said. "I would not have had the opportunity to spend the time with Dad because I would have been off doing some-

Local man sets land speed record

Snowmobile clocked at over 113 mph on grass track

By Jamie MacMillan

Racing on a 500-foot grass track, Charlevoix resident Tim Novotny sped to a world speed record on his snowmobile.

In November, during the second annual Open Mod Top Gun Grass Invitational, Novotny topped out at a speed of 113.93 mph on his 1,000cc snowmobile. The race was held in Fenwick, ON. The previous world record, set during the event's debut year, was 111.1 mph.

"At the moment I didn't know I had set the record," Novotny said. "It was pretty neat."

The event was run under gray and somewhat drizzly skies. Snowmobile races are held in the fall so more people can attend and manufacturers can show off their wares before the winter season sets in. Consequently, many races are run on grass tracks which Novotny said provides a smoother and better racing surface while ice surfaces during the snow races can become bumpy.

Tim Novotny

"The conditions were cool and wet which got us going a little faster," he said. "It's still warmer than in the winter, so people don't mind watching."

Novotny, who races on and off throughout the year, was sponsored by Dunnigan Snowmobile and raced with a polar motor in an Anderson chassis. He said he prefers the grass race circuit because he can spend more time during the winter months snowmobiling leisurely with his family.

This meet did provide an interesting twist as, despite setting the world record, Novotny did not actually win first prize. The competition was set-up as a series of drag races with drivers advancing out of pool play into a single elimination tournament. Nine racers participated.

Novotny blazed into the record book during his semifinal win, but lost in the finals to Larry Tiede, who drove with a crankshaft motor in a '97 Wahl long track chassis.

"Snowmobiles get faster and faster with each year," Novotny said about the possible longevity of his record. "Each year this race has been run, a new record is set."

Martial arts is a family affair

thing else."

Patrick had always been fascinated with the martial arts. It began as a child living in the Philippines where his father was stationed in the armed services. He saw a karate exhibition and was impressed with their gracefulness and dance-like agility of their hands. He likened it to poetry in motion.

It wasn't until six years ago, though, he began practicing, entering the genre of Tae Kwon Do. After toiling with that discipline for three years, he moved into Hapkido.

He explained that Hapkido is a more varied genre of the martial arts, involving a gamut of moves, kicks and holds. Yet, Hapkido is not as rugged on the body. He was searching for a discipline that he said would be comfortable to do throughout a lifetime.

"Tae Kwon Do was too rigid, it's for the young," he joked. "Hapkido is certainly more age-friendly."

When he set about opening the Charlevoix academy a little more than three years ago, he nudged his son Keith to see if he was interested in some lessons. After watching karate movies with Dad, Keith jumped at the offer and Michael, who himself had dabbled in a variety of martial art genres, soon followed. The quest for black belt began soon after.

For son Michael, the most memorable moment was achieving Junior black belt level. Just below black belt, one must earn Junior black belt, then wait a year before trying the black belt test. Michael didn't earn his junior belt until a few weeks after his father and brother. It was his father, though, who presented the son with his new belt in a ceremony.

All three took their black belt test together.

When it was all completed, after five hours' worth of grueling exercises, bouts, an oral examination and a written report, they felt a combination of relief and excitement.

"There were a lot of hugs and we had a big 'whew' dinner afterward," Patrick said. "It was a great feeling and a dream come true."

Of course, the family sojourn into martial arts is not over. Both of the Michaels remain at the club as instructors while Keith is a regular in between basketball and performing arts practices. They noted that there's always more training to be done to keep in shape. Besides, they've begun monitoring a fourth Patrick who no doubt is headed towards black belt.

Patrick's grandson (Michael II and Keith's nephew), just three years old, has been spotted working on his kicks and chops.

IN MEMORIAM 071

In Loving Memory

Robin Merten
Jan. 30, 1994

Topper Carey
Feb. 24, 1994

It's hard to believe you both have been gone four years. It seems like just yesterday that each of us had plans that included you forever. Although that changed so quickly and we had to let you go, you are each such a special part of our lives. Where we have been, and what we have been through, provide a firm foundation for the life we have today. The love, courage and strength you shared inspired us to nurture the relationship we now enjoy. We believe it is important "to strike a delicate balance between a yesterday that should be remembered and a tomorrow that must be created." Thank you for the yesterday that is a joy to remember, and the tomorrow that we so gratefully created.

We will always love you.
Steve and Nina (Carey) Merten and Christopher.

At their Jan. 13 board of directors meeting, the East Jordan Area Chamber of Commerce welcomed Tim Carey of Glen's Market, Dick Hoffman of Smith & Hoffman Excavating, Janet Walter of J&J Bakery & Deli and Sandi Whiteford of Computer Center to the board.

Karen Walker, Karen Walker Photography, was elected president of the board. Phil Hofweber, vice-president, from East Jordan Iron Works, and treasurer for 1998 will be Sandi Whiteford. Rounding out the board is Mark Postma of Signs, Letter & Graphics and Lee Symonds from the Westbrook Motel.

Executive Director is Mary H. Faculak, who has been with the board for the past seven years as CEO and Carol Galmore, office manager and Jordan Valley Freedom Festival President. The board will be holding their annual retreat Sunday, Feb. 15 at the Weather-vane Terrace Hotel in Charlevoix.

East Jordan to get new chamber of commerce building

The East Jordan Area Chamber of Commerce recently received a $4,400 grant from the Charlevoix County Community Foundation to aid in the Chamber Relocation Project.

Rick Neumann, Architect, from Petoskey, has been contacted by the chamber to draw a plan for the proposed chamber building located at the corner of Main and Mill Streets. The Downtown Development Authority purchased the former Bernier property and building and has entered into plans with the chamber to renovate the building to serve as a chamber office and to also house the city's public restrooms. The DDA will be responsible for the exterior renovation and landscaping of the building and the chamber responsible for the interior renovation. Once the chamber receives the plans from Neumann, a community-wide feasibility study will be taken.

Quick cure for cabin fever

The Charlevoix Parent Teacher Organization hosted a cabin fever party at the elementary school last Friday evening. Plenty of games and activities gave parents and kids a chance to stretch their legs and get out of the house for a few hours. Clockwise, from top right: Chris Young gets the best seat in the house — bellying right up to the food table.

Three men, two dogs and a baby

By Laurie Lounsbury

The following is a recipe for adventure — use with caution.

Take one road-worthy vehicle, such as a Suburban.

Carefully load with one father and his precocious, 2-year-old daughter.

Without dwelling on the outcome too much, quickly add two other grown men; one in the front passenger seat and one in the back seat. Fold the grown man into back seat cautiously, making sure not to squish the 2-year-old.

For additional spice, add two dogs — One huge dog named Tiny and one tiny dog named Czar.

After buckling seat belts, simmer on low heat and nervous tension all the way from Charlevoix to Florida.

Stir the pot by running into major snowstorms in Kentucky and Tennessee.

Upon arriving in Florida, immediately remove grown men from Suburban to avoid overheating.

Charlevoix's Richard Hodgson, his daughter, Elizabeth, Bud

Left, Lou Hollow and Hollow's dogs successfully followed this recipe for adventure when they made the two-day trip to Florida by car on Feb. 5.

"It was a lot of fun, but we were happy to get to Florida," Hollow said.

The traveling saga — better known as Three Men and a Baby and Two Dogs — came about when Hodgson's plans to take his wife and daughter with him on a business trip to Florida started to unravel.

Hodgson's wife, Laurie Lesser Hodgson, had to cancel her plans to accompany him to Florida. That left Richard and daughter Elizabeth Florida-bound by themselves.

Hollow was also headed for Florida, but needed a way to transport his two dogs to his destination. Tiny is a 105 lb. Bouvier, and Czar is a shaggy little Schnauzer Hollow adopted from the humane society. Neither is a candidate for a first-class seat on a jumbo jet.

Hodgson recruited Hollow and his dogs for the trip about the time me, who are color-blind," Hollow joked.

Joyce Boss, an employee of Hollow's at Charlevoix State Bank, thoughtfully packed two goodie bags for the trip. One bag contained over-essential cookies and the other bag was loaded with car trip necessities for kids, such as Handi-wipes, coloring books, Magic markers and chewing gum. Some of Boss's goodies weren't so good for back

Irish Boat Shop takes another blow

By Laurie Lounsbury

Irish Boat Shop took one beating from the windy weather last Friday, when their docks were destroyed, then took another heating at the city council meeting Monday night.

Jack Hodge, assistant general manager for Irish Boat Shop, went before the city council seeking approval of a new development plan for Irish Boat Shop at their Carpenter Street storage location. The plan includes building a new storage unit on the property.

It isn't the first time Irish has asked for site plan approval.

In 1985, Irish was granted a development plan approval for another storage building. At the same time they were granted the approval, they were asked to create a screen between their property and the public.

"It was not a condition of the plan approval, it was only a request," said city attorney Jim Young.

Since then, Irish did plant shrubs to block the view of his property, but the bushes haven't grown much since then and are ineffective as a screen.

According to neighbors, the shrubs do nothing to screen the view of the property, which extends from Carpenter Street facing the ball fields and along Norwood Road. They also claim the property hasn't been mowed regularly.

"There's too much junk out there for them to mow around it," said Don Wells, a neighbor on Norwood Road. "I'd like to see them do what they're supposed to do, and I hope you put a stop to them until they clean the place up."

The property is zoned industrial and that zoning allows for outside storage of boats, cradles and materials related to the business.

Young made the point that storing lumber and business-related material is allowed under the zoning, but storing junk is not allowed.

"The city has the right to clarify issues and make reasonable conditions for landscaping before granting this request," Young said.

The approval for Irish's new development plan was tabled until continued on page 2

Ice and wind destroy Irish docks

In the time it takes to tie a mooring line, 43 dock slips at Irish Boat Shop marina were reduced to splinters and twisted steel.

A sheet of ice about 1,000 feet in length came roaring down Lake Charlevoix last Friday, propelled by a strong wind, and wiped out the marina north of Ferry Beach.

"It was the most vivid demonstration of the power of nature I've ever seen," said Cliff Biddick, manager of Irish Boat Shop in Charlevoix.

Biddick was leaving a meeting across the street from the marina when the surging ice crumpled the marina, so he witnessed the powerful event.

"What you see happened in 10 minutes," Biddick said. "You could hear the steel popping, the ice sheared it right in half."

Although destruction is never a desirable occurrence, the timing in this instance was fortunate, Biddick said.

"We were planning to rebuild the marina anyway, and had already submitted plans to the DNR," Biddick said, noting that the marina was 20 years old and needed refurbishing.

All that's left of Irish Boat Shop's marina north of Ferry Beach is this heaping pile of splintered wood. A sheet of ice, propelled by strong wind, crushed the dock slips in 10 minutes. (Photo by Kim Taylor)

"We have every intent to rebuild and have the marina serviceable by Memorial weekend," Biddick said.

Since the building of the marina will take precedence over other projects for Irish Boat Shop, the cleaning of the Carpenter Street site may have to wait. (See related story, page 1).

"When we made our commitment to the city planners to clean up Carpenter Street, it was before our docks were destroyed," Biddick said.

"We still have every intent to do that, but it may have to wait. Our financial resources right now are directed at rebuilding our docks," city planner Gerry Harsch can meet with Young and representatives from Irish Boat Shop to arrive at an agreement.

In other business, county commissioner Shirley Roloff gave a brief report to the council regarding county donations to area senior centers. She said that the county donates $5,000 to the senior centers in East Jordan and Boyne City, and the commissioners will pledge the same amount to the Charlevoix Senior Center for a part-time director.

Mayor Josh Barnes agreed to release $5,000 of the city's proposed donation to the senior center when the county makes their donation.

Student expelled from Charlevoix Middle School

By Jamie MacMillan

Last week, the Charlevoix Board of Education expelled a Charlevoix eighth grader who violated the state's weapon free school zone laws.

The incident dates back to a Jan. 22 seventh and eighth grade dance when Joseph Angermuller arrived at the function with a knife and a brass knuckle-like device.

State law requires that any student who brings to school or any other school function a dangerous weapon be automatically expelled. In regard to knives, "dangerous" is considered to be a blade of three inches or longer.

After a four hour hearing last Wednesday, Feb. 25, the board voted to expel the student in a 6-0 vote. Board member Dwight "Ike" Boss was absent from the meeting.

During the hearing, the school's administration called two witnesses; middle school principal Dennis VanGuilder and the parent chaperone who observed the student with the weapons.

Countering the administration was the student's attorney, John Fershee, who called three witnesses, the student and both his parents.

During testimony, it was established that Joseph made no direct threats with the weapons and that he said he forgot he had the weapons with him upon arriving at the dance.

Testimony gobbled up two hours of time while the board deliberated for another two hours before rendering its decision.

"It's a tough issue, and a tough state law," board president Allen Telgenhof said. "The truth is our hands were pretty much tied. We had no discretion once the violation occurred to do anything but expel."

The school district has its own policy which gives the board discretion to suspend rather than expel a student if the state law is not broken.

Telgenhof noted the decision was made more agonizing because the state law bans the student from enrolling in any other public school throughout the state.

The law does provide four exceptions to the automatic expulsion: the instrument was not possessed for use as a weapon, the student did not knowingly possess the weapon, the student did not know the instrument could be classified as a dangerous weapon and possession of the instrument occurred at the suggestion of a school official or police authority.

According to the law, the burden is on the accused to prove that one of the exceptions exists.

In this case, the board felt that one weapon may have been a coincidence, but the presence of two in conjunction with each other spelled intent, Telgenhof said.

Joseph, who has been suspended from school since the incident, will remain expelled through the conclusion of the 1998-99 first semester. At that point, he may ask to be reinstated with full eligibility, to return after another 30 days.

The district is expected to help Joseph with home schooling, and as part of the board's decision, it directed the school's administration to support Joseph.

Buses ready to take riders across county lines

By Jamie MacMillan

The latest hurdle in beginning the five-county transit system has been cleared and county officials predict the system will be on the go within two weeks.

County transit director Art Saworski originally eyed the first week of March as a potential start-up date, but the buses had not been delivered to the county.

Last Tuesday, the buses finally arrived, and Saworski noted they're working on a grant application for a possible fourth bus.

with the routes, the system will be open to the public.

The authority is planning a grand opening Monday, March 23, but Saworski said the buses should be shuttling passengers back and forth prior to that.

The regional system will cover Charlevoix, Kalkaska, Antrim, Benzie and Grand Traverse counties with its three new buses. Two of the buses will be headquartered in Boyne City, and the third will be in Benzie. Saworski noted they're working on a grant application for a possible fourth bus.

As the actual start-up date becomes more clear, so does the way the system will operate. From Boyne City, one bus will weave north, up the Boyne City-Charlevoix Road to U.S. 31, then to Traverse City. The second bus will head south down M-75 to Boyne Falls, hooking up with U.S. 131 en route to Traverse City.

Saworski said he expects three stops along the way on each route to Traverse City, but the authority still needs permission from businesses to set up stops. Throughout the route, he said, flag stops will be designated for people to wave down a ride. He did mention that stops are subject to change based on demand.

"If, at a flag stop, 10 people are always there for a ride while no one shows up at a regular stop, we'll switch," Saworski said. "We're new at this and have no idea who will be using it."

Buses will run from 6:30 a.m. to 6:30 p.m., he said. As for a fee schedule, a one-way trip to Traverse City will cost $3, with lower fees at $2 and $1.50 for those with shorter distances to travel, such as riding from Mancelona to Kalkaska or Charlevoix to Atwood.

Part of the new regional system is already in action. For the past few weeks, medical vans taking residents from the same five counties to medical appointments have been available. Unlike a regular bus route, the medical vans have no designated routes, and those needing a ride should call 1-800-2BUS-RIDE to make arrangements. Saworski noted the vans have not had a chance to make an impact, as only two rides have been scheduled.

Post office opening further delayed

By Jamie MacMillan

One day Charlevoix residents will wake and find the Mason Street post office closed in favor of its new facility on M-66 next to the K-Mart plaza.

When that day will be, though, remains a bit cloudy as more construction snags have indefinitely postponed its opening.

Postmaster Jay Wheatley said he and his crew can see the light at the end of the tunnel.

"I don't foresee any more snags," he said. "We should be in

Laser Vision Correction

Reduce Your Dependence On Glasses and Contacts

The medical term for "Laser Vision Correction" is Photo-Refractive Keratectomy (PRK). PRK is the most technologically advanced method for treating nearsightedness around the world today.

In less than 60 seconds, a computer driven "cold" laser beam from an excimer laser reshapes the microscopic layers of the cornea. The procedure is performed on an outpatient basis and requires only topical anesthesia.

If you would like to determine if PRK could help reduce your dependence on glasses or contact lenses, please be sure to ask Dr. Anderson or a member of our staff for additional information.

The excimer laser beam reshapes the cornea with extreme accuracy in less than a minute.

The reshaped cornea causes light to focus on the retina, thereby reducing nearsightedness.

OPINIONS

Expulsion should be a decision made locally

Because of one error in judgment, an eighth grade student will be sitting at home, expelled from school for a crucial year in an adolescent's life.

Joseph Angermuller brought a knife and brass knuckles to a middle school dance. According to one dance chaperone, he didn't threaten anyone with the weapons, or even take them out of his coat pockets — he simply forgot he had them in the play coat he chose to wear that night.

And according to his mom, Debbie Angermuller, he didn't have brass knuckles — he had the pull ring from his BB gun, which his father had recently repaired.

His poor choice of accoutrements got him booted out of school for one year.

The school board said they had no choice in the matter. State law requires the expulsion of any student who brings weapons to school.

This law is probably making things a whole lot better for innocent students and teachers in the big, metropolitan areas where lethal weapons are a constant threat in the corridors and classrooms.

I'm not so sure the state law served everyone well in this incident.

"We agree with the law, we just feel they've gone way overboard in this instance," Debbie Angermuller said.

The Angermullers are both working parents, now faced with the challenge of home-schooling their son.

"We'll do what we have to do, and his education is very important to us, but it's not going to be easy,"

EDITORIAL

Debbie said.

The earliest Joseph can get back into school is the middle of his freshman year of high school.

Will one year out of the school system make Joseph a better, more responsible person?

He may lose touch with his friends who are still in school. He may be ostracized. His social contacts between 8 a.m. and 3 p.m.

will now be restricted to kids who are cutting classes or bigger kids who dropped out of school.

I'll take a wild guess that he'll fall behind in his school work, so when he reenters the public school system he will struggle to keep up.

Don't get me wrong, I'm all in favor of strict punishments for kids who bring weapons to school.

I'm just not sure if the state law gives local districts enough wiggle room to make their own interpretations of the law.

In this case, I think Joseph would have been better off with a suspension, after school detentions and counseling.

Joseph's mom said the knife was as dull as an old butter knife, but Joseph thought it was cool. He found it when he helped his parents clean a rental unit they own, preparing for the next tenants.

Debbie also said Joseph didn't know it was in his coat pocket when he headed for the middle school dance, since he tossed on his play coat instead of his usual school coat.

It's a shame that our local school district didn't have the power to create their own punishment in this case. Maybe expulsion is the correct answer. It certainly sends a loud message to other kids.

But I'd feel more comfortable if our board of education made that judgment call, not the state.

Letters to the editor

Waste Management is skirting correct process

Editor:

We have had our fill of Cedar Ridge. Waste Management is now in the process of trying to site new landfill space at the Cedar Ridge Landfill.

This landfill concerns everyone in Charlevoix County because Cedar Ridge Landfill is located less than a mile from Lake Charlevoix. Two creeks and a drainage ditch are part of the surface water that enters Lake Charlevoix. The drainage ditch enters in the Iron-ton-Sequoia area, Sear Creek enters just south of Holy Island, and Monroe Creek enters at beautiful Elm Pointe Park in East Jordan. What if Lake Charlevoix should become contaminated?

The Charlevoix County Solid Waste Plan specifically states that horizontal or vertical expansion to the current 40-acre site shall not be allowed without a revision of the solid waste plan.

Waste Management is also trying to ignore local Eveline Township zoning, which established in 1969 that only 40 acres be zoned commercial for landfill use.

In addition, Waste Management is attempting to avoid the Solid Waste Planning Committee and go directly to the Michigan Department of Environmental Quality (MDEQ).

If the Waste Management proposal has to go through the process laid out in the Solid Waste Plan, the proposal would have to be approved by the Solid Waste Planning Committee, the Planning Commission, the Charlevoix Board of Commissioners, 67% of the townships and municipalities in Charlevoix County, and MDEQ. Waste Management wants to avoid this process, which would include our combined input.

In order to stop this from occurring, we need you not only to write letters and make phone calls, but to send a tax deductible contribution to Water and Air Team Charlevoix (WATCH), directing its use for the landfill issue. Jim Olson, a very successful environmental lawyer, has already completed many hours of work on this problem. A small group of people have met his legal expenses to date. They can no longer afford to do this alone. That is why we are asking for your support.

The Charlevoix Board of Commissioners and the prosecutor's office have been charged with the responsibility of policing the landfill. It has never been done. No one knows exactly what is in there or where it comes from.

We hope that you will lend your dollars, voices and expertise to this group to prevent this WASTE of Lake Charlevoix. If you would like to circulate or sign a petition, please contact Nancy Ferguson at 547-2285.

Sincerely,
Jerry Puhl, WATCH President
Nancy Ferguson

Rainbow Shoppe and church youth work toward same goal

Dear Editor:

To clarify and respond to your letter from Rita Orlowski:

Our church youth group which delivers furniture to families in need is a very small operation. We deliver on Wednesday afternoons and only during the school year. If we hear of a family who has been burned out, or a family whose single parent can hardly afford to buy food, and we know of a piece of furniture they could use, we will deliver it to them.

There was a misunderstanding in terms of what furniture the Rainbow Shoppe will take. I stand corrected that they do take furniture except for beds, sleeper couches and appliances.

The manager of the Rainbow Shoppe, Robin, and I have talked and feel that we absolutely can work together. Since both our goals are to help those less fortunate in our community, I commend the Rainbow Shoppe for the great contribution they make to our community.

Most sincerely,
Cara B. Hochhalter

Pool user happy with new pool policy

Dear Editor:

I would like to publicly thank the Charlevoix Community Pool and especially the Interim Director, Libby Hicks, for putting together such a fine swim school this year. I feel their excellence should not be overshadowed by the recent negative publicity regarding pool safety rules.

I have two children who have participated in other swim programs, as well as the Charlevoix Community Pool's. Never have they progressed so much, so fast, as in our own community program!

Libby Hicks, you and your fellow instructors, Mary Frame, Anne Hansen and Suzanne Budd bring with you a wealth of past experience.

Dinosaurs on display at book shop

By Laurie Lounsbury

Alex Weller is a frequent visitor to the Bridge Street Book Shop, where he combs the youth section for books about dinosaurs.

On one such visit, Alex struck up a conversation on his favorite topic with Diane Foster, store owner.

"He had a lot of knowledge on the subject of dinosaurs," Foster said.

As Foster talked with Alex, it occurred to her that it would be nice if he could share his expertise with others.

"I thought it would be fun for kids to see what other kids are doing or are interested in," Foster said.

The result is a dinosaur display table in the book shop, complete with dinosaur models made by Alex, interspersed with hooks on the subject.

"It took me about two hours to put it together, plus I worked on it for two days at home," Alex said of the display.

While Alex was creating the display, both children and adults stopped by to ask the fifth grade student questions about dinosaurs.

Snow day a huge success

Thanks to Boyne U.S.A. and Challenge Mountain pulling off a last minute shift to Boyne Mountain, 130 campers (kids with cancer) and family members declared our seventh annual family activity snow day a huge success.

Saturday's snow fun began at 10 a.m. after all special handicapped equipment, skis, snowmobiles and food, were moved by many, many volunteers from Challenge Mountain to the snow covered slopes of Boyne. Linda Ward, Camp Quality Snow Day Program Director, and her husband Gary, expressed deep appreciation to all the numerous volunteers and donors from around northern Michigan who helped make it a hit for these special kids. Boyne Valley Knights of Columbus, Northern Michigan Hospital, Boyne City Ski Team, Petoskey Snowmobile Club, Carters of Boyne City, Kiwanis Club of Little Traverse Bay, Mike Dhaseleer (DJ) and the many regular companion volunteers are just a few who made it happen. ## Sharing valuable art is a fine Charlevoix tradition

EDITH

By Edith Gilbert

EDITH GILBERT

Duke and Duchess of Windsor was only through my former Charlevoix summer friends, the late Joanne and Nate Cummings. He was CEO of Sarah Lee.

People are talking about another big auction at Sotheby's in New York. Many valued possessions belonging to the Duke and Duchess of Windsor are being sold to the highest bidder. A friend tells me that if you're in the mood, you can buy a bow tie worn by the His Royal Highness for $200. Let me explain why I say "His Royal Highness" advisedly.

My closest connection with the tor on Nate's desk.

It clearly stated, "His Royal Highness, the Duke of Windsor, called at 11:20 a.m." Not even the abbreviation, "H.R.H. the Duke of Windsor called," and certainly none of this cozy, what one might expect, informal "The Duke called." So much for protocol.

Still a local and more interesting Windsor connection occurred in the spring of 1971. I was quietly reading the morning paper when my phone rang. "This is Helen Miliken's office," a voice said.

Whoops, I thought. Why is the Governor's wife calling me?

"The Michigan Council for the Arts is looking for a small masterpiece to exhibit on the Art Train, which will be up north this summer. We understand that the Cummings own a Renoir titled "Four Apples." Would you be willing to call them and ask if they will be kind enough to lend us this painting for several months?"

"Of course," I replied. "I'll be glad to oblige." For years, the Cummings maintained a tradition of loaning an original painting or sculpture to the one-day Charlevoix Waterfront Art Fair; a Degas, Rouault, Picasso, Kandinsky, Manzu or Giacometti, to name a few. I was sure they would agree to exhibit this little gem in the popular traveling museum. For the last 25 years the train has toured the entire country by rail, and has frequently rotated between Charlevoix, Petoskey, Boyne City and Cheboygan. It often admits over 1,000 fans a day from surrounding rural areas.

When I reached Joanne on the phone and gave her the proposed dates, she demurred. "That painting is hanging in our dining room, and the Duke and Duchess of Windsor are coming here for dinner. We can't let it go until after their visit."

I relayed her message to Lansing and it was cheerfully agreed that the little Renoir gem, in its Louis XV frame, would be displayed on the Art Train after the Windsors' visit.

Speaking of little gems, it reminds me that this summer, August through September, we will be treated to the outstanding Manooogian exhibit of 18th and 19th century oil paintings, entitled "Little Gems." It will be on view at the Virginia McCune Community Arts Center home of the Crooked Tree Arts Council.

We're pleased to report that the sharing tradition of generous art patrons like the Cummings is continuing up to the present and hopefully long into the future.

"Seedling" club meets nights

The Charlevoix Area Garden Club, under the guidance of Nan Vandenberg, past president, and Marge McGoff, president, planned and sponsored an organizational meeting in order to establish a new "seedling" garden club. Their planning and contributions helped launch a new group of men and women interested in organizing an evening garden club in Charlevoix.

The 20 prospective new club members were given information on flower arranging by Marge McGoff; spring plantings by Marvin's Gardens; educational offerings by Pat Miller and Kathy Johnson; and additional information regarding the local, state and national organizations by Terri Hoyt, Director of District V. Federated Garden Clubs of Michigan.

The new evening club has announced their next meeting will be at 7 p.m. Thursday, March 12, at the Charlevoix Area Hospital meeting room on the lower level.

The new club would like to welcome anyone interested in joining. This next meeting will be a casual meeting to become acquainted, establish the monthly meeting date, location and time, discuss future plans, confirm officers and schedule programs of interest.

Missionary to speak at local church

Scott Couper, a graduate of the School for International Service at American University, Washington, DC will speak about his recent unique African missionary experiences at the First Congregational Church of Charlevoix at 7:15 p.m. Wednesday, March 4, following the church's midweek supper.

As a specialist in international relations, Couper served in the Kingdom of Lesotho (totally enclosed by South Africa). His primary responsibility involved advocacy efforts concerning rights of African people threatened by a major World Bank-supported water project. His David versus Goliath advocacy, while aiding native people also caused his own life to be threatened.

Couper's well-presented experiences and observations draw a telling line between the power and responsibilities of large multinational organizations and poorer third world citizens. He will also present a number of non-traditional viewpoints concerning missionary efforts in our changing world. These observations may cause listeners to reexamine and perhaps expand their concepts of a modern missionary's calling.

Couper, an intern minister at the Christian Church (Disciples of Christ) in Kalamazoo, is presently completing his Masters of Divinity degree at Chicago Theological Seminary.

All are warmly welcomed to the Congregational Church Wednesday night dinners with the meal at 6 p.m. For more details on dinner reservations or the speaker, please call the church at 547-9122.

St. Mary's youth to work with homeless

Ten young people and two adults from St. Mary's parish will be making an extraordinary trip this summer. On July 26, they will be traveling to Detroit for a week to work with the homeless, the hungry, the abandoned and the neglected. They are involved in a program called Young Neighbors in Action (YNIA). YNIA is an exciting learning experience for parish youth and adults. The program focuses on service and works of mercy and justice. This week-long experience involves teams working together for those in need and provides creative approaches to learning, cultural sharing, prayer and recreation.

The youth will be meeting other young people from the state when they arrive in Detroit. At the present time, the Detroit site has approximately 55 persons registered to work.

This promises to be a life-changing experience for all persons involved. It is impossible to come back after serving the needs of the poor for a week and not have a different perspective on life. With the support of the community and with prayers, this trip will certainly be one to always remember. If you should have any questions regarding this trip, please contact Patty Furtaw, Pastoral and Youth Minister for St. Mary's Parish at 547-6438.

BEACONS

Beacons of Blessing
By Rev. Bruce Hamilton

I am just a little way past the midpoint of a doctorate in educational leadership. One of my favorite mentors in this Eastern Michigan University program is a Canadian Jewish grandmother. This marvelous lady just consented to be the chair of my dissertation committee so we are getting into some serious conversations together about my future studies. Imagine my surprise, when for a change of pace, she sent me an e-mail with the story that comes next.

A woman approached the Rabbi to ask for help in dealing with her incorrigibly mischievous two sons. The Rabbi agreed and asked to see the younger one. The boy entered the Rabbi's study; the Rabbi gazed at him with a withering stare.

After a long pause the Rabbi finally said to the boy, "Young man, where is God?"

The boy was simply too petrified to speak and merely shrugged his shoulders. The Rabbi asked him again — similar response. Finally, after the third time, the poor little guy just bolted, ran all the way home, grabbed his brother, ran up to the bedroom and locked the door.

Breathless and terrified, he turned to his brother and said, "We're in big trouble! God is missing and they think we did it!!!"

I trust that made you smile like it did me. I hope it will also make you think as well. Guilt is a strange thing. Sometimes we ourselves are justifiably guilty about some things that happen to us in life. Sometimes it really isn't our fault yet when someone comes after us or something happens to us, we're the ones who blame ourselves.

If you are going to be a child of God, if you are going to love as Jesus loved, if you are going to care as Jesus cared, people are not always going to know how to deal with you. And the ways they settle their dealings might unnerve you. In the gospel of John, you will find Jesus saying, "If I had not come to them and spoken to them, they would not be guilty of sin." He goes on to share about doing things among them that no one else had done and sums it up by saying it was because He dared to be different, dared to declare that people could live in a holy and righteous fashion and backed those declarations up with actions. Since He not only talked the talk but walked the walk, people hated him for it. People hated that He proved they could be better than they were. And realizing that they could change, should change, but didn't change made them even angrier.

Though you might not have sought the role nor wanted it, you have to realize that one of the most difficult parts of being a Christian is that the way you live your life may just make people think about their own lives from time to time. And when others feel guilty, they look for ways to shift the blame. Jesus is saying, don't you feel guilty when your heart tells you that you are trying to do your best. Don't you let the pangs others may be wrestling with eat away at the foundations of your faith.

OF BLESSINGS

Fiddlers tune up for Jordan Valley Jamboree

Fiddlers all over the state are tuning up for the Jordan Valley Fiddler's Jamboree, from 1-5 p.m. Saturday, March 7 at the Jordan Valley Express in East Jordan.

The event will feature musicians from all over the state. In past years, over 1,500 people have attended the jamboree, with as many as 30 fiddlers playing three numbers each.

The fiddlers are backed up by musicians on the stage at the Jordan Valley Express.

"It's a really fun day," said Gary Stutzman, a coordinator of the event.

At 3 p.m., young fiddlers who are part of Christa Knight's violin program will take the stage.

A luncheon is provided by the East Jordan Senior Center, which is their major fund raising event of the year.

From 5-7 p.m., open mike time will allow anyone to take the stage. After open mike time, area square dance callers will call dances. The dancing will continue as long as there are dancers on the floor.

"It's quite a nice day of old time entertainment," Stutzman said.

The event is organized locally by Bill and Donna Stevens, Rod and Kim Stevens, Jack and Kate Stebe, Lloyd and Sara Cummings, Danny and Sherry Johnston and Gary and Janet Stutzman. For more information, call Bill and Donna Stevens at 547-9153.

Habitat for Humanity taking applications

Habitat for Humanity is now accepting applications for East Jordan residents who would like to explore the possibility of a Habitat Home.

Habitat's partner families are chosen on the basis of three criteria: — They must be living in sub-standard conditions and not be able to qualify for a conventional home mortgage loan.

— Families must demonstrate the ability to assume the responsibilities of home ownership outlined in the Habitat program.

— Families must understand and accept the concept of partnership that underlies the Habitat ministry.

For more information or to apply for a Habitat home, call the Northwest Michigan Habitat for Humanity office at 348-6926 or write them at 320 Howard St., Suite 2, Petoskey, MI 49770.

The group will be accepting applications until March 16.

Howard Carson retires as county building inspector

By Jamie MacMillan

When county building official Howard Carson gazes at the buildings around the county, he can't help but feel a little dwarfed.

Of course, that's not easy for the 6-foot, 4-inch Carson, who starred on the Boyne Falls Loggers' 1949 and 1951 district championship basketball teams.

What makes this former hoopster feel small is that the structures around him have grown larger since he began working for Charlevoix County as the building official in 1980. Carson, 65, is stepping into retirement this week after 18 years with the county.

"Summer homes used to be so small," he said. "Now they run anywhere between $500,000 to $2 million, all for just four or five weekends a year."

Homes in general have grown larger, he said, as they now average around 2,500 square feet. In 1980, that size was very seldom and homes were usually contained within 1,200 to 1,400 square feet.

Younger couples are more ambitious with their first housing projects, while retirees expand their homes with renovations and additions, neither of which Carson said were trends when he took his position.

Style has replaced substance, he said, with amenities such as pop-up TVs in the kitchen counter and imaginative hips and valleys in roof design.

Before his nearly two decade employment with the county, Carson worked as an independent contractor.

Born and raised in Charlevoix County, one of Carson's first jobs on the northern Michigan building scene was helping erect the Big Rock Power Plant. He said had his life not taken him to his current position he likely would be on the crew that currently is helping tear down the monument.

Settling in Boyne City, Carson married his wife, Martha, in 1962 and the couple parented two sons, Michael and Mark. Ironically, husband and wife share the same birthday (March 5), which Carson joked works well for social security purposes.

Carson's building career flip-flopped from working as a union contractor to staking out on his own. When the county opened its building inspection department and needed someone to oversee it, Carson's interest peaked.

"I wasn't getting any younger climbing up all those roofs, and it was getting hard collecting money for jobs I did," he recalled. "Since I

After 18 years, Howard Carson will step down from his post as county building official. Carson was the building inspection department's first official and has seen his department grow over the years from a one-man department issuing under 1,000 permits a year to adding four other inspectors who do almost 5,000 yearly permits. took this job, I've been paid without fail every two weeks."

More than just the buildings have grown during Carson's tenure as building official. His whole department has mushroomed. In the beginning it was only Carson, but the department has added full time electrical, mechanical and plumbing inspectors, office managers, and, most recently, an additional part-time electrical inspector. Most have been hired by Carson, including his successor, Kenneth Doty.

During the department's early days, Carson recalled issuing just under 1,000 permits a year. Now, that number is closer to 5,000 as the county is flooded with major growths in part-time population and condominium developments.

Carson said he dreads days when he's forced to tear something down that doesn't match code. He noted that rules and regulations have stiffened and updated nearly yearly, so he takes an even-handed approach. He draws the line where bending a rule would sacrifice safety.

Like most jobs, it is the people he has met over the years, especially those building their first homes, that made the job fun.

During retirement, he'll remain busy as a board member of the Top O' Michigan electric company. Leisurely, he'll spend his time golfing, fishing and hunting. For those seeking out Carson, though, the best bet may still be the basketball gym. Still a gym rat, Carson attends as many high school games as he can. Even during this interview, Carson was lining up his Friday evening schedule, which included home games at Boyne Falls and Boyne City and his retirement party.

James Pop completes a fine wrestling season

Pop and Ryan Novotny earn local honors

Charlevoix junior James Pop's run in the state wrestling tournament ended Saturday a couple of matches short of the state finals.

Pop went 0-2 in regional action at St. Louis High School. He was pinned by Ithaca's Brent Skinner in the first period and lost a 9-5 decision to John McGeathly of Whittemore-Prescott. Skinner went on to win the 171-pound division.

Pop earned a spot in regionals by going 3-2 during the district tournament the previous weekend. The top four wrestlers in each division advanced, and Pop placed fourth.

In regional play, the top three from the double elimination tournament advanced into the state finals.

"He was facing some really tough competition," coach Joe

Johnston said of the regional draw. "Janics has a lot of potential for next year."

Pop was the only wrestler on Johnston's team of five to advance beyond districts.

Monday night the club held their banquet and all five team members — Pop, Ryan Novotny, Robert Torres, Ben Macks and Jeron Borths — earned varsity letters.

Pop, who completed the year with a 22-13 mark and reeled in 120 team points throughout the season, was named Most Valuable Player. Novotny was named Most Improved Player.

Skiing to state honors

Charlevoix sophomores Tiffany Fisher and Todd Freidinger both qualified for last week's state skiing championships. Fisher earned all-state honors by medalling in both the giant slalom and slalom events. She was one of four girls who medaled in both the slalom and giant slalom events, schussing to a ninth place finish in the GS and was tenth in the slalom.

Charlevoix skiers shine in Tecnica Cup race

The Northern Michigan Ski Academy raced to a second place finish in the 1998 Tecnica Cup race Sunday, March 1. Five nonprofit ski academies from Michigan participated. Nearly 250 skiers from the ski academy, Grand Traverse Ski Club, Holiday Race Team, Manistee Ski Club and Leelanau Ski Club took part in the day-long event. The skiers from Grand Traverse Ski Club finished in first place.

New to the event this year were team medals for each age group and ski discipline. The ski academy boys' team, ages 12-13 and the girls' 14 and older team were each awarded first place medals.

Other results for Charlevoix area skiers are:

Rayders snap losing streak

Matt McClellan poured in 26 points Friday night easing the Charlevoix Rayders to a 83-68 non-league win over the St. Ignace Saints.

The win snapped the club's five-game losing streak while ending the Saints' 10-game winning streak.

Playing its most efficient game of the season, the Rayders outscored the Saints' in three of the game's quarters, continually building its lead from the get-go.

Senior Josh Holochek canned a three-pointer as the first quarter closed, giving the Rayders a 18-11 cushion. The lead widened to 45-32 at intermission after a 27-21 second quarter advantage during which six Rayders scored.

McClellan was solid throughout the game. He scored 13 points in each half, nine during the game's first quarter and eight in the fourth quarter as the Rayders iced the contest.

After McClellan, Jim Kanine scored 13 points and Sean Stockman chipped in 12. Defensively, Justin Thorp swatted six block shots.

Charlevoix's record stands at 5-13, 3-7 in the league going into the final week of the regular season. After Tuesday night's home game versus East Jordan, the team plays Friday, March 6 at Harbor Springs. A JV game, tips off the action at 6 p.m.

District play-offs to start next week

If, at the conclusion of Friday night's basketball contest at Harbor Springs, a "to be continued" sign flashes on the scoreboard, don't scratch your head.

The reason is simple. The two clubs that end the regular season against each other will change venues and begin the post season with a rematch.

Charlevoix and Harbor Springs knock heads in the district tournament's first round game 6 p.m. Monday, March 9 in East Jordan. The second game of the night pits the host Red Devils and the Mancelona Ironmen, and is expected to tip-off at 8 p.m.

The Charlevoix-Harbor Springs winner advances to play Elk Rapids at 8 p.m. Wednesday, March 11 and the East Jordan-Mancelona winner gets a date with Boyne City in the first semifinal game beginning at 6 p.m.

The district championship game will be 7 p.m. Friday, March 13.

Charlevoix coach Keith Haske noted that, with such a quick rematch, the loser of Friday night's regular season finale may enter the tournament game with an advantage.

"The loser will probably come out with more intensity to get some revenge on the team that just beat them."

Entering the final week of the regular season, Charlevoix's record stands at 5-

At times, the game got a little physical as Sean Stockman (21) gets hacked on his way up for a lay-up. (Photo by Jamie MacMillan)

Volleyball team aims for district title this week

The Charlevoix volleyball team's attempt at a fourth consecutive district crown begins Saturday, March 7 in Boyne City.

The Rayders open the tournament squaring off with East Jordan at 9 a.m. With a win, the club advances to play Inland Lakes, which currently holds the No. 10 ranking in the state class C poll. That game would begin at approximately 11 a.m.

The winner of that contest would match-up with the winner of the Boyne City-Harbor Springs game for the championship.

The title game is expected to begin at noon. All games are best two out of three sets.

The Rayders regular season finale is 6 p.m. Thursday, March 5 versus Harbor Springs. The game will be played at the Charlevoix High School, and with a win, the Rayders would tie Elk Rapids for the Lake Michigan Division Championship.

No one slept at the school pajama party

Last Friday night, the Charlevoix Elementary School Gymnasium was transformed into a gigantic bedroom as the first grade class and their parents had their annual pajama party. Activities included dancing, reading, making puppets, game-playing and a good old-fashioned hot dog feast.

Top: Timothy and Tanner Fisher are all smiles as they rhyme a little Dr. Seuss before dinner.

Center: Shelbi Burt and Jessica Fisher agreed that the best part of the night was the picnic feast of chips and hot dogs.

Right: Deb Haller (on right) and Jake Rankle cut and paste a puppet of Clifford the Big Red Dog.

Garden Club honors poster contest winners

As the theme for the National Council of State Garden Clubs poster contest, Smokey Bear's reign has come to an end.

Since 1990, elementary school students have been making posters of Smokey Bear for garden clubs across the country.

This year, Smokey was replaced by the theme, "Happiness is a Butterfly in my Garden."

Five Charlevoix Elementary School students took state honors in the poster contest, and three students will proceed to the central region contest.

Winning state honors were: Robbie Rundblad, first grade; Hunter Boss, second grade; Felicia Moses, third grade; Zandra Gardner, fourth grade and Ethan Winchester, fifth grade.

Because their posters took first place in the state contest in their respective age divisions, Ethan Winchester, Felicia Moses and Hunter Boss will also be entered in the central region competition.

Other local winners were: In first grade, Steven Coen, second place; Weston Bryan and Alicia Valler, tie for third place; in second grade, Elizabeth Hasseld and Molly Branicki, tie for second place; Emily Foster and Tyler Kenifek, tie for third place; in third grade, William Guinther and Janay Drost, tie for second place; Caitlin Taylor, third place; in fourth grade, Aaron Hagen and Helen Beemon, tie for second place; Shannon Dibble, third place; in fifth grade, Jacky Heckendorn, second place, Sabrina Siddigi and Michelle Fritch, tie for third place.

Klondike Derby is always a fun event for scouts

Charlevoix Boy Scout Troop 6 had a good time on Feb. 21, when they attended the annual Klondike Derby, sponsored by Boyne Falls Troop 53 and the Flywheelers Club. Troop 53 set up the derby with several stations, and the scouts had to use a map and compass to navigate through the course. Lunch and the site were provided by the Flywheelers Club.

The Klondike Derby consisted of several stations where the scouts were judged on various tasks they may be required to perform in scouting.

Two other big portions of the scoring were teamwork and scout spirit. Some of the stations included: fire building, shelter building and signaling.

There were also fun stations such as snowshoe racing, ballista, and the popular snowsnake. The ballista was an event where two scouts had to pull a set of ropes on a catapult and launch a softball for distance.

The snowsnake is an event where the scouts slide their handmade wooden snakes down a chute, similar to the Olympic luge run. Cody McCary, of Troop 6, won the snowsnake event with a slide of 328 feet.

In addition to having a good time, the scouts from Troop 6 also got to bring home the traveling trophy. This is the first time in recent history that a boy scout troop from Charlevoix has won this event. Most of the boys in the troop have been together since Cub Scouts.

Two years ago, they also won the Klondike Derby as a Webelos den. The trophy is currently being displayed at Glen's Market, the charter sponsor for Troop 6.

Charlevoix boy scouts of the Owl Patrol won a first place in the annual Klondike Derby in 1968. The winners are, (standing from left) Bob Donaldson, Pat Whitley, John Osterberg, Paul Osterberg and Del Wood. On the sled are Randy Gustafson and, hidden under the hat, Ken Wilks. Under the direction of scoutmaster Louis Edwards, 25 scouts went through the grueling two-mile test course with their homemade sleds.

Wheatley classified the latest slew of hiccups as "minor," such as correcting the slopes of the cement sidewalks, replacing scratched and marred ceiling tiles and fixing door jams.

"We can move in now if we wanted to," he said, "but if you accept things the way they are, you may never get them fixed."

The $2 million, 12,000 square foot new facility was supposed to be open in October of 1997.

Wheatley noted the extra work will be done at no cost to the post office.

but wasn't able to pull DeGrow to safety by himself. DeGrow told him to call 9-1-1. Shortly after the call was placed, Linda arrived and the two of them were able to hoist DeGrow out of the water.

DeGrow estimated he was in the water for about 15 minutes.

"It was not nice," DeGrow said. "I also had heavy boots on and a hammer in my pocket, just like an anchor."

Within minutes of calling 9-1-1, rescue workers were on the scene.

DeGrow was taken to the Charlevoix Area Hospital, where he was treated for hypothermia and released that night.

"My body temperature was good and low," DeGrow said the next day.

By Tuesday morning, DeGrow still didn't have circulation in his fingers and his entire body ached from the experience.

"I feel like I wrestled a grizzly bear," he said.

With DeGrow out of commission Monday night, volunteers helped to secure the Emerald Isle.

"Everybody was really helpful," DeGrow said. "It was really nice to see a bunch of people working together to help out."

Monday's weather steadily progressed from bad to worse. High winds knocked out power lines, leaving the intersection of M-66 and U.S. 31 without a traffic signal.

"It was so cold out, it was physically difficult for us to be out there directing traffic," said city police chief Dennis Halverson.

"We had good weather with dry roads, and I had to reorient myself to drive in snow and icy conditions. Today everyone is now used to it and being more cautious."

Wind wreaked havoc with traffic intersections even where no electrical power is required.

"I got a call that the intersection of Carpenter and May streets were icy, so I went to check on that and while I was standing there, I watched the stop sign fly away," Halverson said. County Sheriff George T. Lasater reported a hectic day on Monday in the height of the blizzard.

Monday, but that he has seen busier times, especially when the area gets hit with a combination of heavy wind and snow.

"We had heavy winds, but not a super heavy snowfall," he said of Monday's storm.

Still, his officers responded to 26 motorist assistance calls from drivers getting stuck and spinning across ice into ditches. County officers responded to 10 property destruction calls, mostly resulting from vehicular rollovers. Luckily, only three personal injury calls were logged, each one described by Lasater as "minor."

The worst area, according to Lasater, was the stretch along U.S. 31 to Norwood, specifically from the city limits to Bell's Bay Road. He noted the stretch has little wind protection, limiting visibility during storms. Between 2 p.m. and 6 p.m., that stretch was a serious area of concern, with a lot of activity to respond to.

The officers were busiest during the hours people were going to and from work. Also, Lasater noted that Monday's traffic was made heavier by local schools canceling afternoon classes.

"There was a lot of traffic shuttling back and forth," he said. People who lived in the country trying to get to work found themselves facing drifts nearly eight feet high on some rural roads.

By Tuesday, things had settled down. With all schools canceled, traffic was minimal and the weather had toned down its act. Lasater said that by Tuesday people had readjusted themselves to bad weather driving.

"I stood there and watched the stop sign fly away."

— City police chief Dennis Halverson, who kept busy Monday responding to weather-related incidents.

"We had good weather with dry roads, and I had to reorient myself to drive in snow and icy conditions," he said. "Today everyone is now used to it and being more cautious."

For the next few days, temperatures will remain in the arctic levels, ranging from the single digits to the low teens.

Wind chill factors will drive temperatures to sub-zero levels. The wintry weather is supposed to stay with us for at least a week.

Proud to be an American — at last

By Jamie MacMillan

Imagine not being able to vote. It's a provoking thought when you live in America, where the cornerstone of government and society is formed at the ballot box.

Still, it's a privilege often taken for granted, considering year after year of decreased voter turnout. One Charlevoix resident won't take her right to vote for granted — during the next election she'll get a chance to cast a vote for the first time in her life.

After a lifetime of being a Canadian citizen and over four decades of living in America, Norwood township resident Alice Muma became a United States citizen last month.

"It's just great," Muma said. "but I don't feel any different because I have been here for 43 years."

Born and raised in Newfoundland, Canada, Alice met her husband, Earl, while he was a serviceman for the U.S. Army, stationed in Newfoundland. The couple moved to Las Vegas before resettling in Newfoundland after Earl was transferred.

At the time, Alice was considering applying for citizenship, but she didn't meet the necessary requirements in terms of how long she had lived in the country.

They settled in Michigan in the late 1950s, and any focus on attaining citizenship faded while Alice raised three children. She did admit that becoming a citizen was always in the back of her mind.

It seemed to move to the forefront, though, come election time every year. Her natural interest in politics, combined with the 12 years Earl served on the Charlevoix City Council, worked to raise her awareness on issues of local and national importance. However, when it came time to act on those principles, Alice was left a little dissatisfied because she was not allowed to vote.

"I do wish I had done this quite some time ago so I could have voted," she said. "It's hard when you're active in the community yet can't vote come election time."

Other interesting aspects of being a registered voter, such as serving on jury duty and joining a voting league, are parts of life that she said she is now looking forward to.

She was sworn in as a citizen Feb. 27 in Marquette by Federal Judge Timothy Greeley. During the ceremony, the judge noted the upbeat circumstances surrounding swearing in a new group of citizens opposed to the dour mood that accompanies the trials his courtroom usually sees.

A local high school class participated in the ceremony for a civics class project, and the whole group sang America the Beautiful.

Along with Alice, 13 others were sworn in that day. Most were Canadian, like Alice, but there was a Chinese couple and one person from Iran, Alice said.

Earl was in attendance to support her, as was Alice's twin sister

Marion, who was sworn in as a U.S. citizen over 30 years ago.

The McKausland, Iowa resident noted it was different watching her sister get sworn in so long after she went through the process. Some differences were subtle. Marion received a tiny U.S. flag after her ceremony while Alice received a corsage. Marion also said her class was much larger than 14 people.

Marion had to take citizen classes and pass a written exam. Alice, however, since she had lived in the state for so many years, qualified as an exception and only had to pass a small oral exam before becoming an official citizen.

From a list of 100 questions, they asked Alice 10 questions, such as what's a change to the constitution called and who is Martin Luther King Jr.

"I was ready, but still when they threw out that first question my mind went blank," Alice joked.

Any sadness of giving up her Canadian citizenry is overcome by her pride in now being tied to not just two, but three different countries. While growing up in Newfoundland, the province was a British colony.

"Growing up it was 'God Save the Queen.' Then in 1949, when Newfoundland became a Canadian province, everyone was for the Maple Leaf and now I'm an American," she said.

"I've been through three different governments and that's something I'm really proud of."

Landfill expansion bogged down

By Jamie MacMillan

Concerns over wetlands and the actual boundaries of Nowland Lake have temporarily stalled the expansion of the Cedar Ridge landfill.

The Charlevoix County Planning Commission is reviewing the request to expand the 40-acre landfill by another 12 acres.

The commission has, by law, roughly until mid-April to make a decision. Last Thursday they delayed any discussion on the matter pending research on the immediate environment.

At issue is the proposed expansion.

Seniors help each other with companion program

What Suzy Walley does for senior citizens seems so simple, yet it has far reaching benefits for all concerned.

Walley, a senior companion for the Charlevoix County Senior Companion Program of Northwest Michigan, offers her friendship and company to senior citizens such as Eva Ostrum of Charlevoix.

"We sit and visit," Walley said. "She reminisces. Eva's told me a lot about her family and what it was like to grow up on the Loeb Farm."

Most of Ostrum's children live several hours away.

"Everyone could use a friend to visit," Ostrum said.

And that's exactly what Walley is and what she does, as a volunteer for the Senior Companion Program.

The Senior Companion Program is a national older adult volunteer program in which seniors help other seniors maintain independent living. Walley is typical of the volunteers involved in the program.

Prior to joining the program after reading an advertisement in the newspaper about Senior Companions, Walley was a social services volunteer helping to transport senior citizens. Living in Boyne City, Walley said she likes getting out to the surrounding towns of East Jordan and Charlevoix.

"I really like to get involved with the people," Walley said.

Walley volunteers her time with four ladies, spending about three hours with each person each week.

"I love it, you meet so many interesting people. They tell you about their lives," Walley said.

Together, Walley and the ladies like to go shopping or to lunch, or to just get out of the house. Often, their time together is spent looking through photo albums, talking about the old days, and especially about their children and grandchildren.

The program has been in existence in northwest Michigan since 1985 and is established in five counties: Grand Traverse, Leelanau, Benzie, Kalkaska and Antrim. Charlevoix County was added this year.

"The goal of the program is to provide opportunities for low income adults age 60 or older to stay active and healthy through meaningful service to others in their community," said Cathy Holdsworth, director of the program. The seniors who are referred to the program as needing a senior companion must fit one of four categories: be over 60; has to be frail and at risk of out-of-home placement; have dementia or Alzheimer's diagnosis or be developmentally disabled; or have a mental illness diagnosis. Seniors are referred to the program by hospitals, social workers and other professionals.

"The focus of the program is the volunteer and the benefit to the volunteer," Holdsworth said. "The icing on the cake is the benefit to the senior citizen. The clients receive a special friend. It makes them feel good to help someone else. It's the peer-to-peer relationship that makes the program work. But we need more volunteers."

The Catholic Human Services, Inc. is the sponsoring agency of this program. Seniors do not have to be Catholic to be involved. Donations are welcome, as there is no cost to clients for the program. The program is funded by the Office of Services to the Aging, the Michigan Department of Community Health and local referral agencies.

For more information on the Senior Companion Program call Cathy Holdsworth at (616) 929-7070.

Church continues spiritual adventure

Members of the Charlevoix Church of the Nazarene continue in the 50-day spiritual adventure titled "Untapped Miracles for Tapped-out Christians: Spectacular Energy Sources for the Body of Christ."

The adventure, a spiritual growth series, continues to run through Sunday, April 12. Each week Pastor Duane Nelson points the congregation to miracles which will renew anyone who seeks Christ. This is followed by a fellowship and refreshment time. At 11 a.m., our adult Bible study and Sunday school teacher help bring the application of the week's adventure.

The most unique feature is the church's Internet broadcast. Every day Pastor Nelson offers additional encouragement and insight via a three-to-four minute broadcast on the World Wide Web, found at <http://www.npnaz.org/char/>.

Pastor Duane Nelson encourages anyone who would like to join him in this adventure series to visit a weekly service at 9:30 a.m. Sundays. The church is located just north of Charlevoix on U.S. 31 by the new community pool. Those who are interested may also phone the church office at 547-5711.

BEACONS

Beacons of Blessing
By Joe Johnston, Associate Pastor
Charlevoix Assembly of God

What Good is A Dead Messiah?

Have you ever been disappointed? The Bible tells us that hope deferred makes the heart grow weak. If you're like me you've had many disappointments in life: that fishing trip that got rained out; that ski trip that got browned out; that raise that you expected that didn't come? The list goes on and on.

As I think about disappointments my mind quickly wanders to the story of some Hebrew men nearly 2,000 years ago. Think about it with me. There are 12 men, plus and minus one who, for three years solid, invested their lives into one other man — JESUS. So what's wrong with that, you may ask? Well, the problem is their investment died on a cross. This is like the thoroughbred mare that was trained to win the Kentucky Derby but died at the gate.

Not only did Jesus die but these 12 men also died for a dead man, or did they? But it was for a very good cause you might argue. This is true, but many people have died for a good cause. How about Martin Luther King, Jr. or those Germans who hid the Jews during the holocaust? They died for a good cause, too.

One of the misconceptions in the relationship between the disciples and Jesus is they thought Him to be someone that He wasn't. They had hoped He would be a national leader, which He wasn't. They hoped for Him to be a political figure, which He was not. They had hoped He would bring about a national liberation which He did not. Talk about a let-down? Their hopes were very high for Jesus to be the Messiah the way they were trained and taught He would be. They gave up their homes, their families, their jobs, their reputations to follow a traveling, mysterious, preacher. Then all of a sudden He died. They were clueless (Mark 10:32-38) as to what His true kingdom was about.

After Jesus death they must have gone back to their little villages as a laughing stock...totally defeated. However, 2 weeks later they all showed up in Jerusalem declaring Jesus to be Savior and Lord. WHAT! What good is a dead Messiah? What happened? What changed their mind? I'm glad you asked. Acts 1:3 and 1 Cor. 15:5 tell us that Jesus, after His death, appeared to the 12 and presented Himself alive. These men were willing to risk and ultimately give up their lives because of it.

The best news today is Jesus is still alive. He's preparing a place for those who are His children, those who are born of the Spirit. If you have any questions regarding this article please feel free to contact me.

High school will change student attendance policy

By Jamie MacMillan

As the school year heads into the home stretch, high school officials are working to revamp an attendance policy that allows a student to miss close to one-third of class time without losing any credit.

Current rules allow for a student to have 15 absences in each class before losing any credit for the class.

On the face of it, 15 is not a high number. But according to Keith Haske, the schools' assistant principal and attendance officer, block scheduling means the number 15 takes on greater importance.

In a block schedule, classes meet just three times a week. When the current attendance policy was implemented, the block schedule had not begun and classes met five days a week.

Three classes a week over the course of an 18-week semester equates to 54 classes. When allowed 15 absences, the policy basically allows students to miss 30 percent of class time and still pass the course.

"That's an amazing amount of time to miss," Haske said. "The policy should have been adapted when they went to a block schedule."

As a possible remedy, a plan is being hashed out that bases attendance standards on a nine week period rather than the 18-week semester and includes an escalating point scale.

Students would "earn" points based on their absences. For example, an unexcused absence would be four points, an excused absence would be two points and an unexcused tardy would be one point.

During every nine week period, a student could receive as many as nine points without any sanctions.

During the course of a semester, a student's ability to take excused absences would be cut in half, from 15 to eight before losing credit. Haske said the drastic decrease will give students more of a feel for the work world.

"You can only take so many days before losing your job or not getting paid for the time away," he said. "They need to understand that this is more of what the real world is."

Once a student gets 10 total points, he would lose 10 percent of his total grade. At 12 points, the loss increases to 20 percent and any sort of absence or tardy after that would result in failing the class.

The school would begin to send letters home once a student reaches six points.

Doing attendance standards over nine weeks rather than the 18-week semester serves two purposes, Haske said. It is easier to keep track of and it will let students realize that poor attendance will ruin their grades before the grade goes on their permanent record at the 18-week semester conclusion. Haske said students will have the opportunity to make up any lost points from their grade during the semester.

Another subtle change would see the time to document an excused absence reduced from 48 hours after the time missed to 24 hours.

Haske noted the school doesn't have a major attendance problem. Typically, absenteeism runs around 10 percent of the student body on a daily basis and a new policy would be directed toward the chronic offenders.

A new policy was slated to be presented to the board of education at their March meeting, but Haske said he would prefer more faculty input.

A new policy should be in place by the 1998-99 school year.

More candidates enter race for 106th House seat

By Jamie MacMillan

One impact of term limits on state senators and representatives is that it will create a poker table of candidates vying to fill the vacated seat.

Such is the case in the 106th district, where Rep. Bev Bodem (R-Alpena) is stepping away from her post due to term limit restrictions.

The district, which covers Alpena, Presque Isle, Cheboygan and Charlevoix counties, has already seen one Republican entrant, Joe Gammons of Alpena, and recently three Democrats have joined the field to replace Bodem.

Bob Fournier, Marie Twite and Andy Neuman, all Alpena Democrats, will first look to win their party's nomination before eyeing next November's general election.

Fournier is a familiar name for district residents, after he knocked heads with Bodem during the 1996 general election. Despite receiving only 38 percent of the vote in a loss, Fournier returns to the campaign trail because he believes he has something left to accomplish, namely the expansion of the economic growth of northern Michigan.

Road expansion is one way he said that can be done. Fournier would like to see an extension of M65 north to M32 for a downstate access to and from the Alpena and Presque Isle areas and, from there, a new road to Onaway and west to M75.

Closer to Charlevoix County, he favors further development of U.S. 131.

He also supports creating regional state offices for better local service and more equitable allocation of state jobs for northern Michigan residents. Educationally, he favors the push for a core curriculum and standards in public schools and feels that charter schools can continue to be useful as a co-op or school-to-work programs.

Born in Flint and raised in rural Otisville, Fournier and his wife, Priscilla, have been married for 35 years. Fournier is an Air Force veteran and graduated from Central Michigan University with a masters' degree in business administration. After retiring from the Air Force, Fournier began instructing business classes at Alpena Community College. He recently served as interim director for Habitat for Humanity and currently serves as president of his church's regional council and is a member of the Alpena City Environment Committee.

Marie Twite has over a decade of political experience serving Alpena Township. Twite said a seat in the State House of Representatives is the natural next step.

"As an active community leader I have always worked toward solutions to community problems," she said. "My experience in local government provides a good background for this position."

She served as a township trustee from 1984-88 and worked on both the planning commission and zoning board of appeals from 1987-92. She was elected township supervisor in 1992 and in 1996 was reelected to a second term.

Twite noted she worked hard to bring grant money in for township roads, recreation and the fire department and would expand those efforts for the whole district if elected. She also places high importance on local citizens having a say in the way their area is developed, specifically in terms of off-shore drilling, shoreline protection, landfills and solid waste.

Twite and her husband, Michael, have been married for 28 years and have two children, Mark, 25, and Stephanie, 24. She has a degree in small business from the Alpena Community College and graduated from the Michigan State University Political Leadership program.

Neuman has been unavailable for any comment.

The primary election for both parties is Tuesday, August 4.

Rayders volleyball reign comes to an end

By Jamie MacMillan

The Rayders quest for a fourth straight district volleyball title was cut off by a Bulldog buzz-saw Saturday afternoon in Boyne City.

After kicking off the day with an easy 15-8, 15-8 first round victory over East Jordan, the team eyed what many considered to be the match-up of the day against Inland Lakes in the tournament semi-finals.

While the Rayders were trying to continue their run of dominance for another year, the Bulldogs entered as the team hungry to prove that its No. 6 ranking in class "C" was deserved.

Led by two-time all-stater Caly Plummer, the Bulldogs were armed with a slew of big hitters and looked to overmatch the Rayders.

On paper, Charlevoix could not match Inland Lakes firepower, but Brenda Bryan's 1998 team could rival any other of her top defensive teams during her 16-year tenure as head coach. Bryan hoped the back row presence could control the ball, so her charges could keep the Bulldogs out of prime spiking position.

For a while the strategy worked. After falling behind 8-4, Charlevoix scored five of the game's next six points, tying the contest at 9-9.

Plummer began to flash her brilliance then, spiking two kills and serving an ace to give the Bulldogs a game-point at 13-14.

The Rayders fought that and another game-point against tying the contest at 15-15. Charlevoix then earned two game points, but could not convert either.

In one of the more exciting games all season, the Bulldogs finally prevailed to win, 19-17.

How nip and tuck was the first game? Amazingly it was tied seven times, including late game deadlocks.

Losing the first game in a best two out of three in such dramatic fashion seemed to deflate the Rayders, as the Bulldogs cruised 15-2 in game two to complete the victory.

"The emotions go up and down as the momentum goes back and forth," Bryan said. "You work so hard for that first game, it's hard to go out and get the next one."

Despite the loss, Bryan said the chance to knock heads with a team so highly ranked with a player the caliber of Plummer was memorable. "It was a battle," she said.

"The girls were coming off the floor saying how much fun they were having. It felt good and was nice to see them react like that."

Statistically, Lyndsey Blechel had 23 assists during the Rayders

two matches. Amanda Eaton had 21 kills, Jamie Gowell, 14 and Carrie Blanchard, four. Blanchard also added six aces.

The Rayders have completed another successful season even if it didn't end with a district title trophy. Including all matches, the Rayders ended with a 20-7-1 season. In non-tournament games, the record was 14-2, 10-2 in the Lake Michigan Division, good enough to share co-champion honors with Elk Rapids.

Bryan's club next year will again be strong, but will have to play without the following seniors: Blechel, Eaton, Blanchard, Laura Maltese and Sara Firman.

Young wrestlers start season

The Charlevoix middle and elementary school wrestling teams began their spring season last Saturday at the Cheboygan Invitational, earning seven first place and 10 second place finishes.

Winning the first place awards were Nick Gotshall, Nathan Golovich, Matt Loper, Brett Probert, Tyler Hoffman, Bo Moore and Jerry Zietler.

Winning second place medals were Corey Gotshall, Mike Greyerbiehl, Shannon Gillespie, Scott Sladek, Chris Bradley, Tony Miller, Josh Chamberlain, Chris Loper, Jason Ross and Tom Wilhelm.

The team also collected eight third place and seven fourth place finishes.

Their home meet Monday was postponed due to the bad weather.

The club's next event will be hosting the Charlevoix Invitational 10 a.m. Saturday, March 14. Fourteen teams will wrestle in the event.

Charlevoix sailors compete in Florida race

Five boats and crews from Charlevoix participated in the National Off-shore One Design Regatta in St. Petersburg, Fla. from Feb. 20-22.

Over 150 boats in 13 classes participated in the event. The J-22's were the largest fleet present, which included the Charlevoix sailors.

Hussy, owned by Mark Snyder and Brian VanDeYacht with crew Scotty Boyer, made the best showing for the Charlevoix fleet with a sixth place overall finish. The racing included all wind conditions, from no wind at all to a 35-knot

Junior Olympics eluded two Charlevoix skiers

But they get another chance next winter

By Laurie Lounsbury

They say good things come in small packages.

So do fast things. Roscoe Serrels and Lexi Wilson, both compact 13-year-olds, were fast enough to qualify for the Central United States Ski Association (CUSSA) championships, held last week in Marquette.

Although both skiers hurtled down Marquette Mountain with speed and guts, it wasn't enough to qualify them for the Junior Olympics, to be held next week in Steamboat Springs, Colo.

Roscoe's parents were already loading up the family van for the trip out west prior to his final slalom run. His standings up to that point had qualified him for the Junior Olympics. The top 55 of 76 hoys in the 13-14-year-old age group were picked to head for Colorado, and before his final slalom run, Roscoe was in 55th place. A straddled gate and hike back up the hill to round the gate in his last run knocked Roscoe out of the running.

"He was really close to making it, so it was a bummer," said his coach, Bob Vial.

"He handled the disappointment well," his father, Roscoe, said. "I think he handled it better than his parents."

Lexi turned in what was probably her best personal performance of the season in slalom, but her conservative speed in giant slalom kept her out of the running. She finished about 10 spots away from the cut for Colorado.

Roscoe Serrels would have made it to the Junior Olympics based on this slalom run, but had some trouble in his last run of the day.

gear-busting blow in the final race. On the second day of the three-day regatta, a lack of wind left competitors in the water for 11 hours.

Other boats from Charlevoix finished in the following order: H.S. Moisture Missile, skippered by Kevin Meier, 18th; Paleface Lite, skippered by Bob Grove, 20th; Swine Flew, skippered by Dave Strawbridge, 23rd; and Gecko, skippered by Tammy and Chris Kuhn, 25th.

SPORTS

In order to qualify for the CUSSA championships, both skiers had to earn a qualifying spot in the series of eight, Region III qualifying races. Region III encompasses all of lower Michigan and the eastern half of the Upper Peninsula and Indiana.

Four regions sent nearly 200 racers to Marquette for the championships. The regions cover the central United States, from North Dakota to Kentucky.

Because Lexi and Roscoe are 13 years old this year, they will both have another chance to try for the Junior Olympics next year, skiing in the same age group.

Charlevoix is a virtual reality

By Laurie Lounsbury

It's hard to believe that thousands of people are visiting Charlevoix every week at this time of year.

But they are — virtually. By jumping on the Internet instead of U.S. 131, folks from all over the country are visiting Charlevoix by dropping in on the chamber of commerce web site. (www.charlevoix.org)

Laurie Lesser Hodgson, who developed her own web site design business, worked with the chamber to create the site. It includes a wealth of information, both by using chamber guide information and linking up to other relevant web sites.

As an added feature, chamber members may have their own mini-web sites connected to the chamber web site for an extra charge.

"They don't need a computer, they don't even have to like computers, but they can be there, on the Internet," Hodgson said.

For those who don't yet know how to navigate the 'Net, the chamber of commerce web site is akin to the trunk of a family tree. Connected to the trunk are branches that "relate" to the chamber of commerce.

Keep Charlevoix Beautiful.

the Trout Tournament and the Charlevoix Convention and Visitor's Bureau are examples of relatives attached to the family tree.

Hodgson has also linked the chamber site to CNN's weather information, which gives an updated account of the weather in continued on page 2

Suburb may sprout in South Arm Township

By Jamie MacMillan

To grow or not to grow, that is the question.

The growth issue has stormed to the forefront in South Arm Township. A rezone request by a Charlevoix developer to turn 130 acres of farmland into a 62-home community has township officials dreaming of a larger tax base while neighbors nightmare over a perceived East Jordan suburb.

Developer Sam Haberman purchased land approximately two miles to the southwest of the city of East Jordan and is bordered by Rogers Road to the south, Bailey road to the north and Waterman road to the east.

Currently, the land is zoned agricultural, permitting one dwelling for every two acres. The rezone request would change the land to residential, permitting a dwelling for every acre.

Haberman has titled his development Jordan Meadows, promoting it by saying it would serve to alleviate one of East Jordan's more compelling problems — a lack of housing.

"It's in dire need," he told the Charlevoix County Planning Commission last week. "Everyone from the businesses to the chamber to the school board is in agreement that East Jordan is growing and needs an influx of moderate income housing."

Initial plans for the project show four different clusters of homes on the land in order to keep some of the woodlands and nature preserved, Haberman explained. He also noted that plans include nature trails and that he expects to sell only a handful of homes a year to keep growth at a steadier pace.

Superintendent is leaving district

By Jamie MacMillan

Monday night, the Richmond Board of Education offered Dr. Roberta Jackson the job of school superintendent in their district — a job that could prompt Jackson to leave Charlevoix by the end of next month.

Tuesday morning, Jackson confirmed that she would accept the new position, with plans to assume her new duties by the end of April or beginning of May.

"It's a good opportunity for me," she said. "It will be sad to leave Charlevoix."

Jackson did note that contract details still need to be hashed out, but she already is looking forward to new challenges at the district. Jackson's current contract with the

Roberta Jackson

Charlevoix district runs through June, 1999, but the school board will release her from the contract at an earlier date.

Jackson impressed the Richmond search committee with her ability to manage finances and align curriculum, two aspects that are top priorities for the Richmond school district.

As Charlevoix struggles with facility plans, Richmond recently passed a bond issue and are amid construction of new gyms and an auditorium while revamping its continued on back page

Charlevoix. In the summer, the site is linked to the marine forecast, and in the winter it's linked to the ski and snowboard report.

If you want to go out on a limb of the cyber family tree, you can start at the chamber site, then visit the Trout Tournament site, and from there, link up to Fish Web, a site that gives a detailed fishing report for northern Michigan.

"I love this reciprocal link thing," Hodgson said.

In the untamed frontier of cyberspace, there are no rules prohibiting someone from linking their web site to other web sites. Hodgson considers it a positive element of the Internet.

"I love it when I find somebody linked to my web site," Hodgson said.

The Charlevoix Public Library is poised and ready to go on-line with a tremendous web site of their own. It was librarian Mary Beth Wallick's idea to create a library web site as a way to preserve information that is currently stuffed in a folder. The folder contains many fragile documents, pictures and news articles relating to Earl Young.

The decision to preserve information about Earl Young, Charlevoix's unique builder of boulder homes, was the first step for the library. The work of Bob Miles, Charlevoix historian, and Rosa Nettleton, an early Charlevoix historian, will also be preserved on-line.

"This is such fascinating reading for anyone interested in Charlevoix," Hodgson said of library information.

The library web site can be accessed through the chamber of commerce site, either from the first page of the web site or under the heading "community listings," which includes the public library. Once a virtual visitor has arrived at the library site, they can skim through the information in a variety of ways, searching for key words or following a table of contents.

"I made it easy to navigate so you can search in several ways," Hodgson said.

Hodgson gave her own touch of continuity to the pages about Earl Young, putting her own artwork of Young's trademark boulders down the side of each page. For Miles, she used a wood-like border, mimicking the border in his book on Charlevoix.

Hodgson expects the library site to be on-line in the next couple of weeks.

For more information, contact Hodgson at LLH Graphics, 547-2835 or visit the Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce web site.

Oops!

Even experienced snow plow drivers had difficulty getting through the drifted snow last week. In some locations, drifts built up eight to 10 feet in height. Apparently this plow driver got caught up in a drift along the shoulder of Marion Center Road near Black Road. It proved to be too much for the plow, so it tipped over on its side. ### Corrections

Due to incorrect information given to the Courier, the time of the "Living with Grief" broadcast was incorrect. The broadcast will begin at 1 p.m. Wednesday, April 22, not 1:30 p.m. as previously stated. While there is no fee to observe the broadcast, there is a fee of $15 for those wanting a continuing education credit.

In my column last week I made a glaring error in failing to mention Bill Dreyer as another one of our unpaid staffers. Dreyer has, for many years, taken sports photos for us and helped us cover youth sporting events.

What people are saying

"There's nothing wrong with having fun things to get something accomplished. And he really accomplished promoting Charlevoix."

— Dennis Kusina, reminiscing about the late Al Breeze, who played piano at the Grey Gables and also organized many colorful events to promote Charlevoix, such as the Round Lake Raft Race, Mardi Gras parade and Halloween party.

"Get to the airport early — You never want to get stranded on the mainland."

— John Haggard, discussing travel plans to fly to Beaver Island for St. Patrick's Day.

Island fever: On St. Patrick's Day, it's an epidemic

Fish-stomping, limerick-writing, bed races and, er, a bit of Irish whiskey are all a part of the Beaver Island St. Patrick's Day celebration. Since the holiday didn't fall on a weekend this year, islanders and mainland visitors did their celebrating last weekend.

Clockwise, from top left: Winners of the Fish Stomp are still looking a little dazed and confused. The Fish Stomp requires players to put their head on a baseball bat propped upright on the floor, spin around the bat three times, then bend over, pick up a flopping minnow and carry it quickly to the other side of the room. It's a relay event in which all team players start seeing the room spin, regardless of what they've imbibed. The winners of the fish stomp this year were (from left) Laura Gillespie, Jay Mosoryak, Kim and John Taylor.

Folks in the best costume got to be King and Queen for a Day. This year, the honor went to Sumo wrestlers Julie Kull and Bonnie Kull. They doubled as bouncers at the Shamrock later in the evening.

The sun was well over the horizon, but a few people still stayed in bed for the bed races, which ran their course straight through downtown St. James. The event isn't just a romp around the bay — it requires all players to hop out and leapfrog over one another, push the bed a little further down the street, then stop to scramble through tires.

Opinions vary on desirability of housing development

Neighbors, though, have numerous concerns, ranging from the gobbling up of prime farm land to potential well droughts.

"This fits the true definition of sprawl, it's careless and awkward," township resident Kelly Mumich said. "This will be an eyesore for everyone to see."

Neighbors expressed concern about possible sewage run-off into three adjacent creeks with the extra septic tanks included in the housing project.

"My main concern is my well water," Jean Doherty said. "I already have a problem finding water during the dry times."

Township planners approved the rezoning, but county planners turned down the request, stating that it was a main goal of the commission to preserve farmland.

Ultimately, though, the decision rests with the South Arm Township Board. Township supervisor Robert Christensen said any decision on the matter will wait until the board's next meeting at 7 p.m. Wednesday, April 8.

"You're either pro-growth or not," Christensen said. "Do we want to increase our tax base, or keep the status-quo and work year-to-year with the budget."

Despite populations similar to Charlevoix, Eveline and Hayes townships, South Arm Township's tax base is only half of the above townships.

Interestingly, Haberman does not need to rezone the property to place 62 homes on it. With the tiny agriculture lots, he could already build 65 homes on the property without having to appear before any sort of zoning board.

Such a development is already happening in the township, with the current subdivision development near the Dutchman Bay road.

On this property, though, wetlands exist, which might limit the number of homes that could be built over two-acre parcels. It is believed that, with one-acre parcels, the wetlands and buildable property could be separated.

The tug-of-war between development and land preservation will likely continue beyond this decision, and while those neighbors in opposition agree that the township needs some direction toward affordable housing, they disagreed that it needs to be done on this property and in such a grand fashion.

"There are many blue herons, foxes and deer in that area," Mumich noted. "My kids enjoy watching them, but with this large of a development, they will not be there anymore."

EDITH GILBERT

While you're being driven through the security gates of the very private Ocean Reef Club in Key Largo, Fla., you're told that, "When you get up in the morning there's nothing to do, and in the evening you're half done!"

To my delight, I found this to be true. Three days ago I bought six post cards and I haven't written one yet. That's because there are so many diversions, but let's begin at the beginning.

First, the size of the 50-year-old Ocean Reef Club surprised me. If you were to combine all six, 100-year-old Northern Michigan resort associations, (Beldere Club, Chicago Club, Sequanota Club, Bay View, Harbor Point and Wequetonsing) you might approximate Ocean Reef Club with its own private airport, three golf courses, 44 tennis courts — most of them clay — 657 swimming pools, almost a thousand fishing boats, yachts, cruisers and runabouts that are floating in numerous aerated canals, which meander past 1,925 residential villas, chalets and private homes that cover 2,000 acres of Ocean Reef.

The club is surrounded by state and national parks on all sides, consisting of mangrove trees that grow out of coral rock. Night and day balmy breezes blow across the key from the Atlantic Ocean to the back bay waters of the Gulf of Mexico.

Demure street signs guide friendly drivers of more than 2,000 golf carts over 44 square miles of trails that run parallel to streets, that are dimly lit at night in order not to compete with the pleasure of star-gazing. This family resort permits youngsters over the age of 11 to drive carts with an adult, after passing a written test. There's no doubt that carts and bicycles are given the right-of-way here.

For those interested in history, Key Largo, the largest rocky island in the Florida Keys, was first explored by the Spanish in the 16th century. Massive mahogany trees and superb fishing attracted the earliest loggers and fishermen. From then on, nothing much happened until 1946, when the Ocean Reef Inn was built and turned into a private club — of sorts.

Signs posted in the bathrooms advised guests, "Don't take a shower 'til you smell; we haul our water and it costs like hell." Transporting water in those early days was done by truck from Key Largo and then tapped from an aqueduct and piped to the inn.

Today's club members, by contrast, are requested to abide by an entirely different dress code. As in any fine resort, sport coats are customary, for gentlemen in the evening and collared shirts in the more casual lounges and restaurants, on the golf courses and tennis courts. Tank tops, or frayed cutoffs, are not acceptable and hats should be removed, we are told, while indoors.

Indoors includes a post office, hotel, church, medical center, fitness center, conference center, art center, library, clubhouses and 12 restaurants and snack bars. In addition to all these amenities, there are clubs within the club — a rod and gun club, Coast Guard Auxiliary, a garden club, sailing club, yacht club, racquet club, health and tennis club and an Ocean Reef Flying Club.

Today, people say that the club has never looked more beautiful than after Hurricane Andrew, which devastated the reef in 1992, but you'd never believe it now. One of the fun things to do while cruising the area in a golf cart is to admire the 100 or more varieties of palm trees that are planted here, as well as the multitude of flowering shrubs and colorful, contoured beds of impatience blooming in well-maintained stretches of lawn.

Flitting through gently swaying palms is a great variety of birds, including the noisy green parrot. Fishermen have a hard time keeping the herons, egrets and pelicans from stealing their catch. Speaking of fishing, numerous charter boats primarily fish for the dolphin fish (not the mammal) and sailfish, as well as marlin, kingfish, tuna and mackerel. Also popular is casting for bone fish in shallow water in an open kiff.

After a week's stay visiting my kids, Vicky and Jay Gilbert, to say that I'm enjoying the lifestyle at the Ocean Reef Club is, of course, an understatement. Here there are no breakfast meetings, no traffic jams and everyone is H.B.T. (Horizontal By Ten). Decisions rest only on what to wear, where to eat, whether to go fishing in the morning or afternoon, with whom one should play golf or tennis, and shall we take the car, golf cart or ride the bicycle?

I can handle that!

Letters to the editor

Reader agrees with state expulsion law

Dear Editor:
I am writing in response to your March 4, 1998 editorial (by Laurie Lounsbury) "Expulsion should be a decision made locally."

Thank God there are laws on the books to protect our children from would-be criminals carrying illegal weapons into our schools. Regardless of whether or not Angermuller threatened anyone or knew he had these weapons with him or not, he broke the law. He has to suffer the consequences.

His parents should have been teaching him right from wrong from the get-go. Maybe if Angermuller would have learned as a small child about breaking the rules, he would have taken more responsibility on the evening of Jan. 22.

It's not a "tough issue" as board president Telgenhof said. It's a cut and dry issue — state law requires any student bringing a dangerous weapon to any school function be automatically expelled. There is no room for a judgment call on the part of the board.

Why should his parents (or anyone else) make excuses in this case. Should Angermuller be made to "feel good" with a reduced consequence while all the other children at that school dance were put in jeopardy. What example is that?

Let's get back to the basics for the sake of those who choose not to break the rules; you play with fire, you're going to get burned.

Sincerely,

the Youth Basketball Program for three years, and I very much enjoy it. But what I would really like to see is a traveling team in our area. I think that having such a program would benefit the sixth grade girls in different ways, such as experience because we would be able to play different girls, other than just our friends and classmates. The experience would improve our basketball skills which would better prepare us for upcoming programs. It would also give us a chance to meet and compete with other area girls, but most of all it would be fun!

New pool rule is unnecessary

Dear Editor:

I am a sixth grader at Charlevoix Middle School. I think the new pool rule is really unnecessary. I think you should have asked the community first.

I know some kids in my sixth grade class that can't swim as well as my nine-year-old sister. I also have some friends whose parents can't swim. So now they can't go swimming either.

Our pool has lifeguards. It is their job to watch the kids. I think if the kids get too rowdy the lifeguard can remove the child from the pool.

I personally think just because you're younger doesn't mean you're not as good of a swimmer or behaved as someone older. I think parents should be able to sit on the side and watch the kids from there.

Our pool is a community pool, so the community should have a choice on the new rule. I mean it is a community pool, isn't it?

Yours truly,
Shayna Drost

More people should donate to food pantry

Dear Editor:

I feel the community of Charlevoix should make more donations to the food pantry. Around 135 families depend on this program. I'm writing this not only to state my opinion, but also to let all of Charlevoix know. Taxes are helping very little so the food pantry is running mostly on donations.

As a sixth grader I'm proud of our school for donating enough money and food to run the food pantry for up to seven months. I would also like to thank the community to help us reach this goal. I'm sure you can tell this fund-raiser is a main source. Thank you for taking the time to notice my concern.

Respectfully yours,

Student says kids need a new middle school

Dear Editor:

I strongly suggest we need a new Charlevoix Middle school! The heaters are old and broken. It gets so cold that we have to wear coats. Also, when we go to lunch, we have to walk through a classroom (the gym). Another thing is that Mr. Hopkin's floor in his room is warped from a leak in the ceiling. Finally, the intercoms don't work very good. That is why I think we need a new Charlevoix Middle School.

Sincerely,
Bryce Daly

"Simons Says"

I have been connected with the automobile business most of my life. Many years with the Ford Division, Ford Motor Co. - Owned and managed a car and truck rental and leasing company in the Detroit Metro Area. This is my second hitch with Pat McKeown Ford. It's like coming back home.

I changed careers a few years ago to that of Mortgage Loan Officer. I learned a lot and did a good job, but that strong automobile sub-conscious came through.

The people I work with are first class. They are dedicated to giving the customer the attention they deserve, and it's fun working with a happy crew.

So to all my many friends and business associates, give me a call at 547-4401 for a new or used vehicle.

Sailfish Club day care center is under new direction

A fun learning experience awaits area youngsters at The New Sailfish Club.

The club offers a top quality play and educational environment for prekindergarten and day care children.

Located on beautiful Round Lake in downtown Charlevoix, the Sailfish Club provides the latest in children's books and toys, a stimulating environment, and dedicated instructors.

Club director and teacher Tricia Blissett-Petrosky is a Charlevoix native who has previously taught in the Atlanta and Detroit areas, and was most recently the prekindergarten teacher at St. Francis Xavier in Petoskey. Under her tutelage, the St. Francis prekindergarten program doubled in size.

"We will provide a safe, nurturing, learning environment that will encourage children to develop and grow at The Sailfish Club," said Blissett-Petrosky. "We will encourage and guide them as they are busy experimenting, investigating, communicating and creating."

The club will offer two pre-k class options: from 9-11:30 a.m. Tuesdays and Thursdays and from 9-11:30 a.m. Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays. Extended day care will also be available each day.

During the summer, both regular and drop-in day care will be available for working parents or for those times when parents would like to enjoy an activity without children.

The Sailfish Club is hosting an open house from 9-11 a.m. Wednesday, April 8. Area parents and their children are invited to stop by and tour the facility and meet the staff. A short activity for the children has also been planned during the open house.

The club was open for a short time last year for day care only.

Blissett-Petrosky said that in addition to becoming licensed by the state, extensive planning had been completed to provide quality day care and schooling year-round.

The club is located next to the Coast Guard at 201 Bridge Park Dr. in Charlevoix. Look for the colorful Sailfish Club sign perched above Bridge Park.

For more information or to register your child, call The Sailfish Club at 547-PLAY or 547-0183.

By Laurie Lounsbury

Later in life, Hinkle became a commander of a nuclear submarine in the U.S. Navy, exercising the leadership skills he first displayed in Lansing at Boys' State.

Bill Carey Jr. went to Boys' State and met a member of the American Legion who was also a school counselor at Harvard University. Through that fortuitous meeting, Carey was able to win a scholarship to Harvard University and graduate from the Ivy League school.

American Legion representative Louis McKenzie has plenty of stories like Carey's and Hinkle's, about kids who have benefited from the Boys' State and Girls' State experience.

Sponsored by the American Legion, Boys' State and Girls' State is a one-week program in Lansing that teaches students about American government. For one week in June, 750 Michigan students will gather at Michigan State University and form their own state government, complete with cities, Boys' State has been serving students interested in government and politics for 60 years — Girls' State follows close behind, with 57 years of participation.

Locally, McKenzie and his long-time friend and cousin Max Novak have been organizing the Charlevoix contingent of Boys' State for more than three decades.

"There's a lot of kids from Charlevoix who have gone to Boys' State and had a really good time and come out of it with a lot of good opportunities," McKenzie said.

McKenzie and Novak will load up the kids and drive them to Lansing for the program, then return to pick them up and drive them home.

For the girls, Nancy Wood is the American Legion Auxiliary representative who will organize their trip.

Novak and McKenzie were happy to see that six Charlevoix boys and four girls will be attending the event.

"Last year, we only had one kid going, and the year before, we had no one," Novak said. "It seems to go in cycles. The cost of the program is $215 per student, and is paid

Wrestling program goes to the mat for survival

By Jamie MacMillan

Flagging numbers combined with recent pushes to trim the fat from the schools' budget have placed a Charlevoix athletic tradition on the chopping block, with the guillotine dropping as soon as next month.

Wrestling, a varsity sport since 1971, might have tangled with its final foes when this season concluded in February.

According to high school athletic director Keith Haske, he and the board of education's extra-curricular committee will meet the first week after spring break and could have a recommendation for the whole board regarding the program's future as soon as its regular session at 7 p.m. Monday, April 13.

"No decision has been made to kill it yet," Haske said, noting that money for the sport is still included in the schools' budget. "The numbers are very poor, and that's the whole key to it."

This past season, the school spent $4,678 on the wrestling program. Much of that figure, $2,818, went toward coach's pay. In terms of the overall budget, the wrestling program is near the bottom of school spending on sports. Only two other programs of 18 school sports — cheerleading and golf — receive even less money, according to Haske.

Haske said the school could afford to keep the program, but the low numbers have put the sport on shaky ground.

This season, coach Joe Johnston's club never had more than five wrestlers during the season, allowing the team to barely fill one-third of the 14 weekly classes wrestled during meets.

Last year, the season began a bit more promising with 10 wrestlers. However, a series of inclinations and defections created a bizarre unofficial cancellation of the season. The latter portion of the schedule was wiped out and the team didn't even partake in the district tournament.

Before that, a decline in numbers had been steady. From 1992-1995, between 12-14 students came out for the team, while during the years 1988-1991 at least 15, at times as many as 20, wrestled for Charlevoix.

According to former coach Greg Bryan, who piloted the program from 1980 to 1994, the beginning of the end could be pinpointed to being forced to move its practices out of the high school study hall and out of school grounds. Ultimately, the team found refuge at Bi-Cepts Gym.

Bryan said wrestling is a misunderstood sport, but with practices in the study hall it was typical for classmates to venture in, watch practices and become hooked as school, though, the program became "invisible, out of sight, out of mind," Bryan said.

He also noted that, despite repeated efforts, he could only get the athletic department to schedule one home meet a year, which further dampened spirits.

Both Bryan and Phil Christ, who coached from 1995-1997, agreed that the sport never got the credit it deserved. Bryan noted that team photos of the two district championships the team won in the mid-1980s don't hang from the school walls like the other sports, nor is the trophy case filled with any mention of the many individuals who grappled their way into the state finals over the years.

Christ, though, said the problem with low numbers has as much to do with teens' new attitudes towards athletics. Since Charlevoix is a resort town with numerous beaches and close to ski hills, kids can fill or Whittemore-Prescott if you don't play sports, you work on the farm."

That attitude works against wrestling the most, he said, because it is an extremely grueling sport that demands its athletes to get beat on all the time.

"Really, it's up to the kids to save the sport," he said. "If they come out, then there is a team."

In present times, an increase in numbers looks encouraging. This month, the elementary/middle school team has over 50 students playing. Being able to keep those students in the sport once they reach high school remains to be seen.

"I'm not sure what's going to happen," Haske said. "My feeling is that wrestling is valuable. It's a long winter and it keeps kids interested in school. Absolutely, I'd like to see it."

Meanwhile, for the two freshmen and three juniors who are planning to hit the mat wearing the maroon and white next year, their hopes, while not exactly fading, aren't standing on solid ground either.

"It's a really challenging sport that builds character," said freshman Ryan Novotny, who wrestled this past season. "They need to give us a chance before they shut it down. The more people understand wrestling, the more they'll accept it."

Rayders succumb to Elk Rapids in district semifinals

By Jamie MacMillan

A tale of two very different games saw the Charlevoix Rayders fall in the semifinals of last week's district tournament.

Matched with Elk Rapids, Charlevoix had high hopes that it could topple a foe that beat the Rayders twice during the regular season.

Unfortunately, cold shooting iced Charlevoix's hopes of advancing to the finals. The Rayders made only six of 23 two-point shots during the first half. They did sink four 3-pointers which kept them close, but lost touch in the second half, shooting 1-13 from behind the arc during the second half.

"It was one of those nights where there was a lid on the basket," coach Keith Haske said. "We had a chance and were hanging around, but we never got it going."

With the Rayders shackled by poor shooting, Elk Rapids steadily built on its lead. Ahead 16-15 after the first quarter, the Elks crept ahead 36-27 by intermission and 58-47 after three quarters.

With the Rayders unable to answer, the Elks poured it on during the closing moments of the fourth quarter to seal a 77-59 win.

Matt McClellan paced Charlevoix with 16 points. Matt Dennis added 13.

The Elk Rapids game came on the heels of the Rayders 83-63 opening round win against Harbor Springs. Haske said that the second half, which began with Charlevoix behind by five points, 41-36, was the best the team looked all year.

A 23-5 spurt during the third quarter highlighted by an 11-point outburst by McClellan gave the Rayders a cushy margin which was easily maintained through the final buzzer.

During the decisive run, McClellan sank two 3-pointers and converted a more conventional three-point play after being fouled on the fast break. Justin Thorp tipped in two misses for baskets which helped deflate the Rams' morale.

Charlevoix ended its season 8-14, but Haske said key steps were taken by a young team adjusting to a new coach that will benefit the team when next season begins.

"It was a learning experience for all of us. I learned about the kids and the kids learned how we want to play," he said. "I'm not so sure we didn't play as well as we should have, but a year of maturation will help."

Boys' City trounced Elk Rapids 87-52 in the championship game for their third straight district title.

SCRAPBOOK

Charlevoix Beach Hotel offered "Modern Conveniences and Old-Fashioned Hospitality"

From The Archives
By Geoffrey D. Reynolds

"All Modern Conveniences and Old Fashioned Hospitality," was the first line of a beautiful brochure advertising the Charlevoix Beach Hotel. The Charlevoix Beach Hotel was the last of Charlevoix's grand hotels to be built and the last to go the way of the wrecking ball.

While the idea for a Lake Michigan-view hotel had been circulated for years in Charlevoix, it wasn't until early in 1898 that construction on the three-storied, one hundred room Beach Hotel began on the west end of Dixon Avenue. Seeking to take advantage of the area's lack of resort accommodations, Mrs. John (Martha) Baker sought to offer her guests the "hominess" they desired, but still take advantage of the wondrous Lake Michigan view tourists still come to enjoy. In addition to the view, guests were able to enjoy tennis courts, cool breezes, dancing classes and Charlevoix's first hotel elevator. At night, summer resorters flocked to the hotel's 350 person dining room for fresh lake trout, fresh lobster and desserts from the in-house bakery. After dinner, guests retired to the lower level for entertainment at the bar, casino or gaming rooms before retiring to cozy rooms freshened by a cool lake breeze.

The enchantment of the hotel continued until the late 1930s, after which it went into receivership under the ownership of Mrs. Baker's daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Von Dolcke. Due mostly to the economic climate of the times and a fire, the hotel was closed until 1940. That year William "Bill" Flynn, former manager of the Inn Hotel (razed that year) took over as manager of the hotel. Under his direction it was redecorated and refurbished in an attempt to make a comeback, but times had changed. Cars filled with "tourists" now rode on paved highways and stayed in motels.

After World War II, the hotel was purchased by Mr. and Mrs. Eugene L. Kramer. The 14 cottages that once offered private resorting had all been sold and only the hotel remained of the once flourishing resort. Unfortunately, they too faced falling hotel revenues.

In the late 1950s, the grand lady's new owners, Mr. and Mrs. Scott Wilson, tried their luck with the hotel, both in summer and winter, but also failed to attract enough guests to operate the hotel profitably. Later it was purchased by a syndicate later to be known as Charlevoix Properties, Inc. The new owners had planned for future construction of a newer hotel and restaurant on the site, but the construction of the LaCroft condominiums eventually replaced the old white hotel in the early 1970s.

After nearly 70 years of shaping Charlevoix's beach skyline, the Beach Hotel was razed in September of 1967. Ironically, during construction of the condominium, work was suspended temporarily as archaeologists found ancient Native American artifacts dating to around 1500 B.C. While these early visitors came to fish, the spot was probably appreciated as much as those who came after them.

Elementary school spring musical celebrates 25 years

By Laurie Lounsbury

It started 25 years ago, with an enthusiastic, 25-year-old music teacher. The year was 1973, and the theme for Marina LaBlance's first spring musical was "Sing a Song."

"I just thought it would be nice to have a little performance for the parents," said Marina LaBlance, music director at the elementary school.

The "little performance" has grown to be one of the best — and biggest — community traditions in Charlevoix.

The Charlevoix Elementary School Spring Musical this year celebrates 25 years of spring musicals.

Through the years, 12,500 students have performed in the spring musical, 300 songs have been sung and 137 dances have been danced. Children who sang and danced in the early musicals are now grown adults, watching their own children perform in the show.

"They've learned a lot about different cultures, history and geography through the musicals," LaBlance said.

The students have also learned about different types of music and different styles of dancing.

Over the years, kids have waltzed, tangoed, jitterbugged and Texas two-stepped their way around the gym floor.

From folk songs to rock and roll, patriotic songs to Big Band tunes, every type of music imaginable has been performed.

In 1991, the year of Desert

Storm, the theme of the musical was Celebrate America. President Bush was invited to the show, and although he couldn't attend, the White House called to give their best wishes to Marina and her students.

The popularity of the show even caused a rift in town one year, when LaBlance accidentally scheduled the show for March 17.

"I got in trouble with the bars and restaurants when it was on St. Patrick's Day," LaBlance said. "It affected their business that night."

To avoid such a conflict, the show this year will be at 7 p.m. Thursday, March 19 in the high school gym. It will be a tribute to 25 years of spring musicals.

"We're pulling strong points from all the past years and putting them together," LaBlance said.

Spring musicals through the years

Clockwise, from top left: Marina LaBlance has maintained her high level of enthusiasm throughout the years, as she's showing here in the 1980s.

This confident boy looks a cross between Frank Sinatra and John Travolta as he belts out a toe-tapping tune in a white tuxedo.

This year, second graders will dance cheek to cheek in a tango number, as demonstrated here by Autumn Atkins and Michael Lenhart.

The theme in 1992 was "How the West was Sung," with western music, dances and lasso-spinning.

Jackson headed for district downstate

classrooms.

"They just passed a $1.4 million bond for new technology, and that would be my first challenge," Jackson said.

Located in north Macomb County about 20 miles outside of the metro Detroit area, Richmond schools has an enrollment of about 1,800 students.

The district conducted an initial search for a new superintendent last summer, but was not impressed with any of the 40 candidates who applied.

After re-posting the position,

Jackson entered the picture and remained a candidate when the district whittled its list down to two applicants. A search committee from Richmond visited Charlevoix Feb. 27, and Jackson had a final interview in Richmond last week.

Jackson points to curriculum alignment, staff development and the current upgrading of technology as positive marks left on the Charlevoix schools during her tenure, which started in October of 1991.

"There are so many wonderful things happening in the district," she said.

"The only negative is the whole struggle over facilities."

Charlevoix Board of Education president Allen Telgenhof said any search for a new superintendent will be delayed until Jackson's deal with Richmond has been finalized.

"The impression I got was that she will take the job," he said. "I'm happy for her. She's been selective with what districts to apply to and Richmond must meet her criteria."

Telgenhof noted the board's first directive will be to find an interim superintendent while a more extensive search for a permanent replacement is conducted.

He suggested that it might be best to go outside the district to find an interim superintendent. It's plausible that the board might hire the interim superintendent currently leading the Richmond School District, Telgenhof said. He expects the board to call a special meeting to make plans for locating an interim before Jackson leaves.

"It's a difficult situation for someone to come into," he said of an interim. "It would be nice to find someone who's been in it before."

Jackson said she will miss Charlevoix.

"I want to give a public thanks to everyone who has been involved with the schools and also to my supporters," she said.

Feindt named 'Outstanding Older Worker'

By Laurie Lounsbury

With 60 years of experience as a civil engineer in land surveying, Mary Feindt has earned her share of awards and honors.

But she was particularly delighted to be honored in Washington, D.C. as one of America's Outstanding Older Workers.

"It was exciting to be there, and it was interesting to meet the other people who were honored," Feindt said.

A total of 44 older workers in America were honored by Green Thumb Inc., the country's oldest and largest provider of mature worker training and employment.

"I will try to promote Green Thumb," Feindt said. "I believe it's important for older people to work. So often older people are put out of the working world."

Feindt spent four days in Washington, D.C. as part of the honor, meeting with dignitaries and congressmen. The event was capped with a dinner banquet and awards ceremony in the White House Visitor's Center.

At the banquet, programs were given to each attendee, listing the honorees. A few quotes were included in the booklet, including one from Feindt:

"When I was a child, I was taught two lessons. One was to have no fear. The other was that I could accomplish whatever I was striving for if I worked hard enough."

Feindt said the lessons were taught to her by her father, who supported her efforts to become the first woman surveyor in the state of Michigan, and possibly in the United States.

"I think that pleased me as much as anything, seeing that quote in the program," Feindt said. "Those lessons dad taught me always carried me through."

Although Feindt no longer goes into the field to do surveying, she remains very active in the industry. She is one of nine commissioners representing the United States in the Federation of International Surveyors. In that role, she travels around the world to annual conferences. This year, she'll be giving a speech to the group in England.

At 82, Feindt still has no plans to retire.

"I like working with my family and I enjoy the profession," Feindt said. "I like what I'm doing."

Feindt's son, Larry, operates the Detroit office of their business, Advanced Geomatics, formerly Charlevoix Abstract and Engineering Co. When Feindt sold the title insurance portion of the business, she decided to give it a fresh, new name.

Chamber gives thumbs-up to fireworks display

By Laurie Lounsbury

A grand fireworks display is in the making for this summer's Venetian Festival — All that's needed is more money, and permission from the city.

After reviewing all the information gathered at the Venetian Festival Forum, the Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce has decided to put on a fireworks display again this year, even though an explosion during the fireworks display last year killed one person and seriously injured many others.

"The people at the forum were overwhelmingly in favor of shooting fireworks, and overwhelmingly in favor of following the safety codes for fireworks," said John Taylor, Venetian Festival chairman.

The chamber is accepting bids from fireworks display companies, along with bids from laser light show companies. Taylor said the group might incorporate both a fireworks display and a laser show into the summer festival.

"Laser shows are almost as expensive as fireworks, so it will cost twice as much," he said. "Whatever we do, it will be safe and spectacular. It will live up to everyone's expectations for the Venetian Finale."

The cost of a fireworks display and a laser light show throws a new hurdle in the chamber's path.

Comments at the Venetian Forum made it abundantly clear that the downtown location of the carnival is undesirable to most people.

"We're looking into other locations for the carnival, but it's a tough issue," Taylor said. "The carnival is the biggest revenue generator for the festival, bringing in 50 percent of the funds."

While the location of a carnival is still up for grabs, so is the location of a fireworks display. Experts in the fireworks industry have already visited Charlevoix and

Nabbed

An arrest was made just days after two bars and restaurants were robbed in the early hours of Thursday, March 19. The Flight Deck Bar and Alexander's Restaurant were both broken into between 3 and 5:30 a.m.

Ronald William Ross, 32, of Topinabee, was arrested for safe-breaking at the Flight Deck and was transported from Indian River to Charlevoix, where he is lodged in the county jail.

The cleaning person at the Flight Deck found the safe had been broken into, along with several cash registers and vending machines. An undisclosed amount of money and checks were stolen.

"It was a substantial amount," said sheriff George Lasater.

By Friday morning, Lasater said he'd received a good lead on the burglaries.

Two housekeepers at the Lodge Motel reportedly found hank bags and related items in the trash in a motel room. It was their tip that ultimately led to Ross's arrest.

At Alexander's, a burglar entered the building by climbing through a kitchen vent. Co-owner

Jim Woodward reported that the safe had been taken apart with a crow bar.

"All a safe does is slow them down — it makes them work harder for the money," Woodward said.

The safe at Alexander's was relatively new, since the restaurant had been robbed in November of 1996.

Although Ross has only been charged with the burglary at the Flight Deck, city police chief Dennis Halverson said additional charges will probably be forthcoming.

"We have reason to believe he's responsible for both burglaries," Halverson said.

Additional charges are expected in both Charlevoix and Cheboygan County. In Cheboygan County, a Charlevoix County deputy and Cheboygan County deputy executed a search warrant at the suspect's apartment, where evidence of additional crimes in Cheboygan County were discovered.

After an arraignment in the 90th District Court of Charlevoix County, Judge May set bond at $100,000 for Ross.

is for measuring," Feindt said. In her career spanning 60 years, Feindt has always worked in Charlevoix, where she got her start.

"When I graduated from college, nobody wanted to hire me because I was a woman," she said. "My college professor talked the Sloans into hiring me."

Feindt went to work for Robert Sloan, who then owned Charlevoix Abstract and Engineering, in 1938. In 1944, she bought the business from him.

Since then, her son has followed her into the business, and now her granddaughter, Amy Zeitler, is headed on the same path. Zeitler is in her junior year of college at Ferris State University, where she is studying to be a surveyor.

Not only is Zeitler following in her grandmother's footsteps, she's earning scholarships in her grandmother's name.

At the Washington, D.C. awards ceremony, it was announced that Zeitler was awarded a scholarship from the American Congress on Surveying and Mapping, named after Mary Feindt. She also received the Mary C. Feindt scholarship from Ferris State University, which Feindt founded for young women studying surveying.

"I started it (the scholarship fund) because I'm interested in young women going into the field," Feindt said.

"I was the only woman surveyor in Michigan for 35 years. Now there are about 10 women in Michigan doing surveying."

Feindt has seen a lot of changes occur in the surveying business. Before she started, survey work was done with linked chains 100 feet in length.

Chuckling as she told the story, Feindt said that a Charlevoix surveyor used to put an extra link in his chain to give people a favorable measurement of their property.

When Feindt started measuring, she used a steel tape. Surveyors were required to pull the tape hard enough to put 15 pounds of pressure on it.

"By the end of the day, you don't pull so hard," Feindt said.

As a result of early surveys, boundary lines today often are irregular, particularly property lines along lake frontage, where riparian rights are involved.

"The whole system is confusing—that's what makes it interesting," Feindt said.

Feindt shows no signs of slowing down her work pace in the near future.

"I think keeping active keeps you more alert and younger," Feindt said.

License suspended

Options for lunch in Charlevoix just got slimmer. The Villager Pub is now closed for seven days. Terry Left's liquor license was suspended by the Michigan Liquor Control Commission for seven days, from March 23-29.

As required by law, this sign was posted on the door of the restaurant, stating that the license was suspended for the following reasons: selling liquor to an intoxicated person, allowing an intoxicated person to consume and loiter, allowing fights on the premises and allowing persons to annoy customers.

Earlier this year, Left pleaded no contest to a charge of assault and battery. He could not be reached for comment.

Corrections

In last week's paper we incorrectly spelled the name of a newborn's brother and incorrectly said the baby was born elsewhere. The baby was born in Charlevoix. The birth announcement should have said the following: Skylar Elizabeth Herriman, weighing 8 pounds, 15 ounces, was born to made recommendations about safe locations.

Mike and Lisa Herriman of Charlevoix on Feb. 28. Skylar has a brother, Coby, 3, and a sister, Jacy, 19 months. Grandparents are Elaine and the late John Smith of Charlevoix and Nate and Judy Herriman of Charlevoix. Great-grandmother is Elizabeth Peters of Charlevoix.

"We will seek fireworks permits from the city based on the recommendations of the pros," Taylor said.

The city council will decide if a fireworks display will be part of the 68th annual Venetian Festival. The chamber of commerce has to get permits from the city. Taylor said the group will probably seek permits from the city within the next 60 days, after all bids have been submitted and reviewed.

It was a sterling silver spring musical

When the Superbowl draws a stupendous, 51 percent rating, it means over half the people in America are watching. This year's 25th annual spring musical, performed by elementary school students, drew an equally stupendous turn-out, attended by more than half the people in town. The show included some of the best numbers from past years, along with new performances this year.

Clockwise, from top left: Alex Kur was a tough act to follow with his rendition of Our Gang's Alfalfa, singing "I'm in the Mood for Love" in a crackling voice to Stephanie Cornet, who played Darla.

Sometimes there just aren't enough boys to go around, so these two girls made the best of it during a waltz number, dancing together.

Second grade students danced cheek-to-cheek, girls replete with roses in their mouths, to a tango number.

In the finale, music director Marina LaBlance got swept up in the moment — and swept up a toddler from the audience to dance with her.

OPINIONS

Bars shouldn't be responsible for actions of patrons

A jury last week decided that Nanny's Place was responsible for an accident that happened on their premises seven years ago. The accident involved Tim McNamara, a transient worker, who was staying in their motel above the restaurant. He got into a fight with Andy Louiselle and threw him off the balcony of the motel.

Andy was permanently, seriously injured. In a criminal trial, it was determined that McNamara was guilty of assault with intent to do great bodily harm.

But in a civil trial, a jury decided it was Nanny's fault for serving drinks to McNamara. The jury awarded the Louiselles nearly $3 million.

As a former bartender and bar owner, I have a problem with this. The state of Michigan says that any person over the age of 21 is old enough to consume liquor.

They've determined that, at that magic age, you should be responsible enough to know how to handle your alcohol consumption.

But jurors in a civil court can say it's the bar owner's fault if someone behaves irresponsibly, no matter how old they are.

What's it going to be? It doesn't seem right to have in both ways.

If the burden of responsibility is going to be with bartenders and bar owners, then let's be even with the drinking age. I know 18-year-olds who are extremely mature and responsible. I'd have no problem serving them a beer.

Conversely, I know 40-year-old people who should never be served a drink. They have a predisposition for fighting and violence, and one drink may be enough to send them into a barroom brawl.

So who's to blame? Who's responsible?

If Tim McNamara had been drinking at his home with Andy Louiselle and had thrown him off his own balcony, would there have been any civil suit at all?

The jury's decision wasn't about fault or responsibility.

EDITORIAL

It was about money.

Louiselle chose to go up to that balcony at Nanny's and get into a fight with someone who had been drinking.

That was his choice.

Tim McNamara is responsible for drinking, and he's responsible for throwing Louiselle off the balcony.

But the Louiselles didn't sue just McNamara. He doesn't have enough money.

They sued Nanny's as well.

Letters to the editor

Veterans' Park has long history

Dear Editor:

I am interested in the improvement and updating of the Memorial Park. This is the most historical site in our beautiful city. At the turn of the century, O'Leary's stable was located here, renting and selling draft horses. The main floor was a roller rink. That was where Allice Moore raced Harley Davidson and won. He was proclaimed world champion. But Harley claimed it was not a legitimate rink and challenged him to a race at the arena in Chicago. Allice beat him again at that arena and was proclaimed world champion again.

A mineral fountain existed for some years on the corner of Bridge and Antrim. It was a public-type building and the water flowed from an artesian well, under Ralph Wash-burn's machine shop, and drained back into the lake. It was potent mineral water and chauffeurs from the Chicago Club and the Belvedere Club filled their jugs and bottles. Regularly, the tourists would travel out of their way to obtain the mineral water. It became an eyesore, except for the patio in the front, so the city tore it down. The resorters were furious and said they would secure it from the city, but changed their minds.

The American Legion attempted a fund drive to build a legion hall, but this failed. So it remained vacant until sometime later. Twenty trees were planted for the veterans who lost their lives in World War II. At that time they were never officially dedicated. Dates fail me, but research of the Courier or Sentinel will confirm that the dedication was in the late 30s or early 40s. I was appointed by the city fathers, and was chairman of this dedication. We selected a rock with a flat face, located where the Lexalite factory now stands. Assuming it was on the state highway, I called the highway commissioner in Lansing and got permission to obtain the rock. I called Harold Boyers to pick it up and place it at the corner of Belvedere and Bridge streets. To my dismay, I received a call from Mrs. Allen that I had stolen the rock. From her property, I apologized and told her I thought it was state highway property. She informed me that it was her property. I told her that I would replace the rock, but she did not want the rock replaced, only for me to know that I stole the rock. She hung up, and I proceeded with the stolen rock. I called Ted Malpas of East Jordan to do the placement of the rock. The next task was to obtain a speaker — only one name came to mind, Oscar North-

Take John Doe, a regular drinker. After three drinks, John appears to be completely sober. The fourth drink sends him right over the cliff into alcohol oblivion.

If John would just keep his dervere parked on the same bar stool all evening, it would be easy enough to know when to stop serving him. But old Johnny likes to have one drink at one bar, then move on to another location. Bartenders never know if they're serving John his first drink, or his because they're a successful bar and restaurant, presumably with insurance and assets.

So Louiselle didn't act responsibly. McNamara didn't act responsibly and the jury didn't act responsibly when they chose to make Nanny's the wealthy scapegoat in this sorry story.

They sued Nanny's as well.

faithful fourth drink.

In a small town like Charlevoix, bartenders become quite adept at memorizing the drinking patterns of their regular customers.

But when it's a stranger in town, how are they supposed to know which drink is one too many?

It's legal to serve liquor. It's legal to serve a person who's already had more than one drink.

But it's illegal to serve a person who's visibly intoxicated.

That's a tough judgment call for a bartender.

The law should say that it's illegal for a person who's visibly intoxicated to attempt to order another drink.

Put the shoe on the other foot. On the foot of the drunk who's about to step into trouble.

Charlevoix needs new middle school

Dear Editor:

I think Charlevoix needs a new middle school because of these reasons: the heaters are old and noisy, the school is falling apart day by day, the classrooms are too small, some parts of the roof are rotted, the school was built in 1927. There is a lot of other problems but I don't want to name them all. Hopefully you get my point that we need a new middle school.

Kids want jobs in town

Dear Editor:

I think there should be more jobs for kids. One day I decided I wanted a job. I went and looked through the whole town of Charlevoix and couldn't find one. Not enough businesses hire kids for an after school job. The only job for kids is a paper route. For an example, the tape store could hire kids to put the tapes on the shelf. That's why I think there should be more jobs for kids.

Charlevoix needs new middle school

Dear Editor:

I think Charlevoix needs a new middle school because of these reasons: the heaters are old and noisy, the school is falling apart day by day, the classrooms are too small, some parts of the roof are rotted, the school was built in 1927. There is a lot of other problems but I don't want to name them all. Hopefully you get my point that we need a new middle school.

Sincerely,
Nick Triplehorn

School needs to be new or repaired

Dear Editor:

I believe that the Charlevoix Middle School is too old. We need a new school, or at least some repairs.

One cold December day our class went to the cafeteria for 1st hour because the heater in our room stopped working. We had to get our jackets because we were shivering. In some classrooms, the ceilings leak. The pavement on the play-

Events in brief

For more information or to register, call Northwest Academy at 547-9000. The school is located at 115 W. Hurlbut, Charlevoix.

Free playgroups are available for preschool children

Free playgroups for parents and their children, newborns to 4-year-olds and any preschool-age siblings are available every week from 9:30 a.m. to 11 a.m. in area communities. No preregistration is needed for the program, which is sponsored by the Women's Resource Center.

On Wednesdays, the playgroup meets in East Jordan at the ground is dug up where we play everyday. I think we should get carpeted hallways. In the winter the hallways get slippery. Finally, the school was built in 1927, and I think we here at Charlevoix Middle School deserve a little better.

Kids need jobs to learn responsibility

Dear Editor:

I am a sixth grade Charlevoix Middle School student. I really think kids should have more jobs available for them. Kids want ways to make money so they will have more to spend on things they've been wanting. If we could get jobs in small stores like gift shops, we would be happy. It's true some kids couldn't handle a job, but the kids that can would learn about responsibility to help them when they get out of school. Allowance, money from family, and babysitting once in a while can't give you enough money to put in a savings account and to put in your pocket. So, if we could get jobs it would help us save money and learn responsibility for

Skateboard half-pipe needs work

Dear Editor:

I'm complaining about the Shanahan Field half pipes. The wood is splintering and cracking. When you fall on the pipes (which happens to everybody) you either get slivers or break a limb. Another problem with the half pipes is graffiti. My suggestion is to put a rubber or plastic layering on them, then there will be no slivers and better grips.

BEACONS

By Rev. Bruce Hamilton

Thanks to the wonders of computer technology, I'm sending greetings from Market Square Arena (MSA) in Indianapolis, Ind. For those of you who might be basketball fans, this is the home of the NBA's Indiana Pacers. It seats about 15,000 and is surprisingly intimate for a glorified gymnasium. What brings me here though is not Coach Larry Bird or Reggie Miller, who are the Pacers' stars. What brings me here is a clergy conference sponsored by Promise Keepers (PK).

For several years now, a number of men in my church have been involved in Promise Keepers. The blessings God has brought to their lives through this group have been evident in many ways. They have been changed and it has touched my heart. They've been wanting me to go and experience PK first hand and that's why I drove down.

We started off by hearing Coach Bill McCartney, PK's founder. One of many things he said that struck me included, "It's great when players believe in the coach, but it's greater still when the coach believes in the players." There's a lot of truth in that. It makes a difference when people believe in their pastor and it means even more when people know that their pastor believes in them.

David Castro, from Miami, came to the podium next. He was an evangelist in the old-fashioned, fire up your soul sense of the word. My favorite quote of his was, "When was the last time you did something for the first time?" Being a son or daughter of God should find you exercising a little faith. You ought to anticipate and look forward to doing more than a few things for the very first time. That's really how we grow. We don't stay in the routine. We don't get too used to our comfort zones. We realize that God has called us to keep going and glowing with His love. That means not being afraid of change.

Not that all of the speakers weren't good, but I did have a favorite of the day. Chuck Swindoll is a nationally known minister and author. I have a Swindoll section of books in my own library so I was excited to hear him in person. He happened to choose one of my all time favorite Bible verses as the basis of his sharing. Proverbs 4:23 says, "Keep thy heart with all diligence for out of it are the issues of life." His challenge began with these words, "It takes great heart to be a spiritual leader and you can't fake it for very long." He reminded us that the heart was the center of the inner life, the whole of the inner being.

I could go on and tell you the fun of singing an almost "rock and roll" version of "A Mighty Fortress Is Our God." Watching 7,500 ministers learn to do a holy bounce (talk about spiritual exercise!) was a sight you had to see to believe. Even navigating the big city traffic was fun. But that's not why I'm passing this brief travelogue on. Every pastor needs time to charge their spiritual batteries now and then. When was the last time you gave yours a chance to renew their inspiration? If they haven't had a time of personal renewal lately, encourage them to set one up. In the mean time, thanks to my church family for encouraging me to go! It was well worth the trip.

Local pharmacist will lead state group

Central Drug Store owner is 114th president

John Ochs

Charlevoix pharmacist John F. Ochs was installed as the 114th president of the Michigan Pharmacists Association (MPA) during the Association's Annual Convention & Exposition Feb. 20-21 in Dearborn, Mich.

Ochs is the co-owner of Central Drug Store and Charlevoix Commons Apothecary, both in Charlevoix. He is a 1969 graduate of Ferris State University College of Pharmacy and worked in research and development with the Upjohn Company for 12 years prior to becoming a pharmacy owner.

Ochs will serve as president for all of 1998 and then assume the role of chairman of the association in 1999.

"John will provide the leadership skills necessary to address the challenges confronting pharmacy," said MPA CEO Larry Waggenknecht.

Ochs has been a member of MPA for 34 years and has served on the MPA Executive Board since July 1992. He is a member of the Northern Michigan Pharmacists Association and has served as its president and vice-president. Ochs also served as chairman of Northern Michigan Pharmacy Education and Suppliers Seminar and area chairman for Ducks Unlimited. In the past, he served as treasurer and vice president of the Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce and on the Regional Advisory Board for Good Neighbor Pharmacy.

Insurance man honored

Timothy Bruce, of GHA/Old Kent Insurance Group, was recently awarded the National Quality Award, given for outstanding service to his clients, for the sixth time, and the National Sales Achievement Award for outstanding sales for the seventh consecutive year.

Bruce also received the Presidents Council Award by the Leading Producers Round Table, which is the highest award given for health insurance sales. Few agents qualify for all three of these awards and by doing so, Bruce ranks in the top percentage of all life and health agents in the nation. His office is located in Charlevoix.

STATE OF MICHIGAN

STATE TREASURER PETITION

IN THE CIRCUIT COURT FOR THE COUNTY OF CHARLEVOIX

In the matter of the Partition of the State Treasurer, Michigan, for and in behalf of said State, for the sale of certain lands for unpaid property taxes.

To the Circuit Court for the County of Charlevoix, Douglas B. Roberts, State Treasurer of Michigan, shows unto the court:

1. That he is the State Treasurer of Michigan and files this petition under the provisions of P.A. 206 of 1983, as amended, and P.A. 360 of 1985, as amended.

2. That the attached Schedule A is the tax record required by the act and contains a description of all lands in the above county upon which taxes were assessed for the years mentioned therein and have remained unpaid for more than one year after they were returned delinquent or for land identified as certified accidental residential property under section 55a, 90 days after the lands were returned as delinquent.

3. That the amounts opposite each description of land are (a) the total amount of delinquent taxes which may lawfully be sold at the next annual tax sale; (b) interest calculated as provided by law to the first day of May; (c) a county property tax administration fee of four percent, with a minimum of $1.00, and $10.00 for expenses, all in accordance with the act mentioned above.

4. That all of the taxes, interest and charges are valid and have remained delinquent for sufficient time to require the sale of the lands against which they were assessed at the next annual tax sale, and constitute a valid lien upon each of the parcels of land, and that a judgment be entered in favor of the State against the land for the payment of the amounts specified, and if not paid, that the lands be sold.

Therefore your plaintiff requests:

a. That within the time provided by law this court determine that the taxes, interest, and charges on lands described in Schedule A, are valid and constitute a valid lien upon each of the parcels of land.

b. That within the time provided by law this court make a final judgment in favor of the State of Michigan against each parcel of land for the payment of the taxes, interest, and charges, in Schedule A, and that the amounts in the column headed "Aggregate" shall constitute the amounts adduced against the lands, unless amended by this court.

c. That if the amounts in the schedule are not paid, the lands, or the portion that is necessary to satisfy the amount adduced against the lands, shall be offered separately at the tax sale as the law provides.

d. That your plaintiff may have such other and further relief that this court finds just and equitable.

Radiation in algae triggers alarm at Big Rock Point

By Laurie Lounsbury

Excessive levels of radiation in the discharge canal at Big Rock Point Nuclear Power Plant set off an emergency alarm at 2 a.m. Sunday, March 15. Monitors in the canal detected levels of radiation two times higher than the maximum permissible concentration set by the Nuclear Regulatory Commission (NRC).

Water from the plant's cooling system is discharged into the canal, where it then travels into Lake Michigan.

The initial report from the NRC said that plant workers determined the source of radiation was from sediment in Lake Michigan, where previous discharges had left radiation deposits. It was believed that the sediment, was stirred up in recent windy weather. The radioactive sediment was then presumably sucked into the inlet pipes and into the plant's cooling water system.

The discharge contained cobalt 60 and manganese 54, both by-products of creating nuclear power. Neither of the radioactive isotopes occur naturally in the environment.

Plant spokesperson Tim Petrosky later said the plant's health physics workers determined that the alarm was set off by algae in the discharge canal that contained the radioactive matter.

"We believe the radioactive isotopes built up on algae over time, and was sent back up into the discharge canal by the violent weather we had recently," Petrosky said.

Although there has been plenty of violent weather in northern Michigan since the plant first began operations 35 years ago, Petrosky said it's only since the plant shut down operations in September that the outflow of discharge water has been reduced to the point that water and waves could wash back up into the canal.

"Because we're not operating, our output of water is dramatically reduced," Petrosky said.

Petrosky said water flows through the monitors in the discharge canal as it leaves the plant. Workers found both water and algae in the monitors, which were tested for radiation.

The levels of radiation were at .00025 milirem, a measure of radiation dose. The plant is allowed by their license to release 3 milirem of radiation every year through their discharge canal.

"We typically release only .03 milirem per year," Petrosky said.

While .00025 milirem is not enough radiation to be harmful to humans, the effect on fish and aquatic life hasn't been determined.

Big Rock Point catches and tests fish from Lake Michigan every two years for radiation. Petrosky said they haven't found radiation levels in the northern Michigan fish to be any higher than radiation levels in fish found near Ludington, which has no nuclear power plants nearby.

Petrosky said a team has been formed to further study the incident. The team includes health physics workers at Big Rock Point and environmental service workers from Consumer's Energy offices in Jackson, Mich.

Nanny's Place to pay $3 million

Jury finds them guilty of serving too much to a customer

Andrew Thomas Louiselle Daniel Louiselle and the Michigan Department of Community Health were awarded nearly $3 million in a civil suit against Nanny's Place.

The civil case dates back to an incident in 1991, when Timothy McNamara assaulted Louiselle on the balcony of Nanny's. McNamara was staying in the motel above the restaurant.

McNamara threw Louiselle off the balcony on Aug. 13, 1991, sending him into the parking lot where Louiselle hit a parked car and then fell onto the pavement.

Louiselle sustained permanent, serious injuries from the assault.

The Michigan Department of Community Health has been giving treatment to Louiselle, which is why they entered the lawsuit as a plaintiff.

In the criminal trial in 1992, McNamara was found guilty of assault with intent to do great bodily harm less than murder. He served time in prison, and is now out on parole.

The judgment is against both Nanny's and McNamara, holding them jointly and severally responsible, which means that if one party cannot pay, the other party will be held completely responsible for the full amount.

Testimony in the civil suit brought by plaintiffs said that McNamara was served alcohol at Nanny's when he was already visibly intoxicated.

In the criminal trial, however, McNamara was judged to be sober enough to comprehend his actions.

Mike and Sue Barnard, owners of Nanny's Place, had no comment at this time.

Young hockey player headed for "Canadian Cup"

Charlevoix's Jordan Nystrom has been selected to participate as goaltender for the United Scholastic Achievers, Inc., 1998 Team in the prestigious Canadian Cup Tournament in Montreal, Quebec, April 3-5.

Player selection for the 18-member Pee Wee (12 and under) team was announced March 7 by the president of United Scholastic Achievers, Inc. (USA), Jordan, who recently turned 13, received a letter of invitation in November, 1997, as one of 20 players in the first round offer. The youths selected for the team are all from Michigan, with the exception of two boys from Massachusetts.

United Scholastic Achievers publishes Blades and Trades, a quarterly publication dedicated to "Bringing out the best in tomorrow's leaders through on-ice sports."

The Canadian Cup Tournament is sponsored by Canadian Hockey Enterprises, the largest hockey company in the world. Practice in Montreal for the team will begin on April 1. While in Montreal competing for the "Canadian Cup," team members will have the opportunity to speak with former hockey stars and to tour Montreal and explore its educational and cultural benefits.

United Scholastic Achievers attempts to support players in the academic arena and the ice arena for total player development. In the process of selecting the best players and students to compete against some of the finest teams in the world, grade point averages are submitted with the

Sheriff: Display house numbers

Sheriff George T. Lasater would like to once again ask the citizens of Charlevoix county to display their house numbers according to the Charlevoix County Uniform Numbering Ordinance, Article 4.

As outlined in the county ordinance, a displayed house number should have the numbers no less than three inches in height, visible from the roadway, and all house numbers should be in Arabic numerals (i.e. block or script).

The Kiwanis Club has a 911 House Numbering Project. An order form is available at the Charlevoix Sheriff's Office. On it you need to provide your address information and mail it to the Kiwanis Club of Petoskey with $21. House numbers are created and installed by your local Kiwanis Club for identification for all emergency services including fire, police and ambulance.

Community pool hires new director

"There is a changing of the guard at the Charlevoix Community Pool," said Steven Hansen, president of the Charlevoix Friends of the Pool. Libby Hicks, the pool's interim director since November, 1997, left the position March 20. She will be preparing for her summer waterfront committee work at her native home in Bayview, Petoskey.

"Patrons of the pool, our board members, lifeguards and water safety instructors all appreciated her dedicated approach to aquatics," Hansen said. "Libby is very professional, a lifeguard's lifeguard — she has benefited the pool a great deal."

Taking over for Hicks on March 19 is the new director, Alan Gooch. Gooch, 45, was formerly the director of aquatic programs at the Midland Community Center in Midland, Mich.

"Al has devised and implemented numerous aquatics programs there over the past 20 years," Hansen said. "He is certified to train lifeguards and water safety instructors and hopes to continue to increase our area's supply of these vital, skilled workers. Al is particularly interested in expanding the pool's beneficial effects to all aspects of our community."

Gooch will move this spring to Charlevoix with his wife, Elizabeth, and their two preschool children.

"Al and his wife are avid sailors," Hansen said. "They look forward to cruising in our waters where they only visited before. Al seems to like the pool, the people, and Charlevoix, all about equally! Naturally, we agree — it's a terrific combination."

The pool is located at 11905 U.S. 31 North, just north of Charlevoix.

For more information, call Hansen at 547-0436 or 547-0982, fax 547-7472.

Post office to stay downtown

School snaps up new P.O. building on M-66

By Laurie Lounsbury

After a sizable pay-off from Mayor Josh Ingew, post office officials decided to keep the post office in its present downtown location.

"It was well worth the money, to keep the post office downtown," Ingew said. "I don't think of it as graft. I think of it as a charitable donation to benefit our fine city."

The government was anxious to sell the new post office building as quickly as possible, to recoup the money invested in construction.

When the Charlevoix school board learned of the post office's swift decision, they immediately submitted a bid of $42.68 for the building. The post office readily accepted the offer.

"It was a little less than we'd hoped for, but we think we can make up the difference in sales of our new, Charlevoix historical stamps," said Dee Layed, postmaster.

The new, collectible stamps depict several memorable scenes of Charlevoix's colorful history. The first stamp in the series shows former mayor Sam Supernaw muscling the Weatherlane juke box over the railing and into the Pine River Channel.

The second stamp shows Shirley Gibson and the late Dick Edwards dressed as Bonnie and Clyde, robbing the Central Drug Store. It was a routine the two acted out every year during the Venetian Parade until Edwards' demise.

The third stamp portrays Cybil giving her dog a spontaneous, crash course in swimming by tossing him off the bridge.

The fourth and final stamp in the series is a depiction of Al Breeze dressed as Wonder Woman, leading the Mardi Gras parade through downtown Charlevoix.

"We think these stamps will be very popular with the locals and resorters," Layed said. "They show Charlevoix scenes that you just can't get on any postcard."

School board president Allen Telemoff said the district plans to use the post office building for a new middle school. The building is on M-66, where the former board wanted to build, but is much closer to town.

"It's the ideal location," Telemoff said. "For gym class, the kids can just walk to Kmart and get plenty of exercise trying to find their way around the newly arranged aisles."

Telemoff had no concerns about the interior of the post office building, which was specifically designed for postal use.

"Since kids carry computer floppy disks instead of books these days, we think the little bit of post-

Scandal rocks Junior Olympics

By Laurie Lounsbury

Scandal rocked the Junior Olympics in Steamboat Springs, Colo. last week when a senior citizen from Charlevoix was caught competing in an age group far below her true designated category.

Edith Gilbert competed in the Downhill and Super G event in the 15 to 19-year-old age group, finishing 12 in the Downhill and ninth in the Super G.

The crafty senior might have gotten away with it if she hadn't skied into the lodge bar immediately after her final event.

Bartender Roy Balooka at the Slopeside Shmooze and Booze became suspicious, when Gilbert ordered a gin gimlet — chilled, straight up, and stirred, not shaken.

"A 19-year-old wouldn't have the maturity to order a gimlet stirred, not shaken," Balooka said. "They prefer their gimlets blended with ice and served in a snow cone cup."

Balooka tipped off race officials, who quickly confronted Gilbert.

"It was a harmless publicity stunt," Gilbert said. "I was running out of col-office boxes will make ideal lockers," Telemoff said.

"We don't anticipate having to reconfigure very much of the interior. We're going back to that open classroom, work at your own pace, concept. And the big collection bins on wheels will be great for collecting trunks."

umn ideas, and I thought I could write about my experience. A lot of people can relate to this, you know — pretending to be younger than they really are."

The Junior Olympic committee acknowledged the difficulty they have verifying racers' age and gender.

"When they're wearing those ski suits and protective helmets, it's really hard to tell if it's a boy or girl — youngster or an older person. You just can't tell racing gear," said DiYoung, race chairman.

Officials carted Gilbert off to Sun City, Arizona, where she was ordered to do community service work as penance for her violation. "Play with someone your own age," DiYoung told her.

Gilbert was reportedly organizing a roller blade derby for her community service work. She'll be skating with the Blue (hair) Angels against the Arizona Raisins in the derby next week.

If you like to fish or if you eat fish, you might want to catch this FREE booklet. It contains information about the health benefits of eating fish, healthy ways to clean and cook fish, which fish are good to eat, and which should be avoided. It also details which types of fish in which bodies of water are good to eat. Special attention is given to pregnant women, nursing mothers, women who expect to have children, and children under 15 years old because infants and young children are particularly sensitive to the chemicals that build up in fish.

Band camp funding gets shot down by school board

Looming budget deficit throws wet blanket on summer program

By Jamie MacMillan

Spurred by news that the district could be shackled with a 1998-99 budget that is nearly $230,000 in the red, the board of education backed off spending money for high school band members to attend a summer band camp.

Proposed is a week-long camp on the campus of Grand Valley State University from Sunday, Aug. 2 to Saturday, Aug. 8.

The total cost for the camp is $15,500, but the band boosters have raised $5,000 to help to defray costs and students will pay $100 each to participate.

Almost 90 students are in the high school band, but in the proposal to the board, only 75 students were factored in, paying a total of $7,500 to attend the camp.

All told, the camp is expected to cost the district only $3,300.

"Where's the money coming from for this?" board member Ike Boss questioned.

High school principal Gary Grundman said it might come from the high school's budget, but no one was exactly sure where in the budget the money would come from.

Boss suggested bumping the cost for each student to $150 and having band director Raphael Ritzenhouse waive the $800 to be paid to him for his part of the instruction.

"Would you rather have him sitting at home and the kids getting nothing out of this?" Allen Telgenhof said, noting that no other teacher waives his or her instruction pay under these situations.

Grundman noted that the camp, which would be a first-time experience for student band members, would be a benefit because during that week students will practice and perfect the steps and marches used during the marching band shows throughout the year.

In an era where students have many different interests and activities pulling their strings, the camp would free up time in the fall to pursue other interests.

The board appeared unwilling to act on the idea, perhaps in a knee-jerk response to a report given by district business manager Judy Boss regarding its 1998-99 budget.

Initial reports for next year show the district's outstanding revenues by $160,000. Judy Boss said that when a final report comes in, the figure could be worse.

In this report, Boss used 1,310 students to factor in revenue. The state provides a foundation allowance of $6,849 per student.

Boss noted the district expects to lose nine students, meaning $61,000 of budgeted revenue would not come into the district's pocket, resulting in a budget that is closer to $227,000 in the red.

Boss also said the budget doesn't include a part-time middle school instructor and a custodian and, if the board doesn't address those personnel cuts, spending would increase even further.

Despite reservations toward the band camp, the board did approve the annual middle school field trip to Chicago and the Future Problem Solvers trip downstate for the state competition.

Hillcrest Apartment complex gets approval to expand

By Jamie MacMillan

The city's zoning board of appeals recently approved a modified side yard setback for the owners of the Hillcrest Apartment complex. The decision will allow an expansion which would more than double the current facility in both size and tenants.

Owners Aaron and Robin Moffat asked the board for two zoning variances in order to add 6,705 square feet to the existing 4,665 square foot building. Such an expansion would increase the number of apartments from 11 to 21, as well as require an additional 20 parking spots. City regulations require two parking spots for every apartment.

Located at 305 West Hurlbut, Hillcrest's expansion would be to the east, toward the corner of Grant and Hurlbut. City zoning ordinances require a 40 foot setback from Grant Street, and the Moffats were asking for a 10-foot variance to build within 30 feet of Grant.

Also requested was a variance to increase the allotted lot coverage available to the owners. Zoning allows for 15 percent lot coverage, and the expansion plans covers 16 percent of the lot, necessitating a 1 percent lot coverage variance.

The Moffats told the board that in order to continue to make payments on their investment purchased in 1993, an expansion was necessary.

The north side slopes, giving the Moffats a smaller area on which to build. The expansion still could be done within buildable parameters and without any variances, but an extra front entrance from Hurlbut Street would be needed and all new parking would be along the front of the building, said Jodi Alger, a local designer representing the Moffats.

The board of appeals was concerned about the size of the project and wondered about the possibility of scaling it down a bit.

Board chairman Greg Withrow said the board would consider the request if plans were revised to eliminate the need for a lot coverage variance and if only an eight-foot side yard setback was required.

The Moffats said they were unwilling to diminish the size of the actual apartments, as tenants have asked about including dens to set up homes computers. Alger said they could move the proposed building two feet closer to the existing one and scale down both the garage and expected overhang to meet an eight-foot setback.

Neighbors in attendance were both in favor and opposed to the project, but in each case wanted to see a good project built and parking remain in the rear.

"He is going to build the units in one place or another," alternate board member Norm Carlson said. "If the board grants the variance, the parking is going to be placed in the back. If not, the parking is going to be placed in the front. What is in the best interest of the neighborhood?"

With that, a motion was made to grant an eight-foot side yard setback, which was approved without dissent by the four voting members of the board.

The board next meets at 7 p.m. Wednesday, April 15.

Spring sailing

The new Beaver Island ferry boat, the Emerald Isle, left Charlevoix at noon Monday on her first trip to the island. The spring ferry run is at least two weeks ahead of schedule, due to mild weather conditions we've been enjoying recently. Island residents look forward to the start-up of the ferry each spring, as she carries much needed groceries, building supplies and vehicles. Residents and school students welcomed the Emerald Isle when she arrived in St. James Harbor at about 2 p.m. Monday. (Photo by Laurie Lounsbury)

When Clinton's women talk, the stock market listens

EDITH

EDITH GILBERT

They say the stock market goes up and down depending on the length of women's skirts. When skirts are short, the market is up, and when skirts are long, the market is down.

Well, I have noticed another, even more reliable stock market trend recently, that the Wall Street Journal has completely overlooked. Just follow the hanky-panky, Clinton news reports in tabloids and TV and note that when accusations fly, the market is up and when reports are silent, the market is down.

Remember when the brouhaha over attractive Jennifer Flowers first hit the headlines a number of years ago, the stock market incredibly began its spectacular rise.

In 1991, when flashy Paula Jones came forth with her dramatic accusations against the President, (while surrounded by a group of grim, right wing financial supporters), the market again shot up. Way up.

More recently, when CNN showed pretty, young Monica Lewinsky hugging the President every hour, the market, to every one's surprise, reached even greater heights every hour.

On the other hand, we noticed this month, when a glum Majority Leader, Senator Trent Lott announced on TV that perhaps Special Prosecutor Kenneth Starr had gone too far afield from the original Whitewater investigation, the market tumbled. The next day, when the embarrassed Lott reversed himself, the market dropped once more! Poor guy!

That explains why mass confusion, like bewildered passengers on the Titanic, now reigns in Congress. (The only bill passed this year was renaming the Washington National Airport to the Reagan National Airport).

To everyone's surprise the market hit a new all time high again when so called, "ladylike" Kathleen Willey appeared on television's 60 Minutes, tearfully complaining of sexual harassment in the oval office. And finally, when her friendly letters to the President were later published in the New York Times, the Dow Jones Industrials went through the roof.

What does this all mean? Consider this. If Clinton should resign (which he won't do) or be impeached, (which he won't be), then straight arrow, Vice President Gore would take office. Ahh ha! Now here's the Republican wake-up call! Someone at GOP headquarters overlooked the fact that every action has a reaction. Thus the powers that be suddenly realize they don't want to run against a sitting President — and not Gore.

One would think that right wing spin doctors would come to recognize that they have painted themselves into an irreversible, tight corner. The personal accusations against the President did not work and are not working. Why? Because, quoting the Wall Street Journal, "Clinton's high ratings are tied to his performance. He has tamed the budget, slain unemployment and lifted the stock market." In addition, the frugal female population is more interested in health and education issues than long, drawn-out political wrangling. They deplore expensive investigations that benefit no one, except pricey Washington lawyers.

On top of all that, many women admire Hillary and like to think of Bill as a devoted father.

So, as we approach spring in Charlevoix, our political feelings may be swayed, but as serious investors in the stock market, let the talk shows handle the troopers, the news tabloids "cherchez la femme," and let the rest of us watch the averages continue to soar indefinitely.

We live on the Greatest Lakes

Editor:

The continuing discussion concerning the possibility of a sixth great lake (Champlain) leads me to inquire of the people of Charlevoix, "How many of you know that you live on the shore of the largest body of fresh water in the world?"

Lake Michigan and Lake Huron have the same water level! This is evidenced and verified by the fact that the water level of Lake Michigan is measured at Harbor Beach over on Lake Huron.

Obviously, then, the Straits at Mackinac does not separate two lakes; rather, it connects two bodies of water with the same water level. It is merely a narrowing at one point of an immense body of fresh water.

We live, then, on the shore of the largest body of fresh water in the world, Lake Michigan; which is followed in size by Lake Superior, Lake Erie, and Lake Ontario.

Junior Achievement thrives with help of volunteers

Dear Editor:

I wish to publicly thank the nearly 40 individuals and businesses who have provided financial support for this year's Junior Achievement Program in Charlevoix. Most of these are repeat people who invest in Junior Achievement because they believe it gives our youngsters a "jump start" on their readiness to enter the work force.

What makes the program unique and so successful is the involvement of volunteers from the community who partner with the host teachers in guiding the students through hands-on activities designed to increase their awareness of the importance of their education in pursuing their dreams.

Mike Belfy of the Weather-vane, Don Hice of Big Rock, Cheryl Hoffman of LaVanway Corp. and Dave Ward of the Charlevoix Federal Credit Union helped the fifth grade students examine some of the basics of running a business. As they developed business plans, they learned about the skills and resources needed to start a business, sound hiring practices, different production methods, pricing and advertising strategies.

Dave Atkins of Citizen Bank, Paula Barron of Preferred Title, Bill Blackburn of Junior Achievement, Lindy Ebers of First of America, and Allen Telgenhof of Pointer, Joseph Corcoran and Telgenhof helped the seventh grade students assess their personal skills and interests, practice job hunting skills and relate their education to various career options. These students also developed family budgets and learned about proper handling of credit and investments.

Thanks to all who have made Junior Achievement a success in Charlevoix. Others interested in lending their support or in getting involved as classroom volunteers for Junior Achievement may contact me at 348-9766.

Cardiac Arrest event is big success

Editor:

On behalf of the American Heart Association, I would like to thank the citizens of Charlevoix for helping to make this year's Cardiac Arrest event such a success. The event raised approximately $3,500 to help in the fight against the nation's number one killer — Cardiovascular Disease and Stroke.

Cardiac Arrest benefits the American Heart Association's programs of research and education. Since research funding began in 1949, the American Heart Association has invested more than $1 billion dollars in valuable biomedical research, including grants to Michigan State University, University of Michigan, Wayne State University and Hope College. The American Heart Association also reaches nearly one out of every three people in Michigan with face-to-face, life-saving public education and community service programs.

I would like to thank the following people and businesses who have helped to make this successful event possible:

Thank you to the Cardiac Arrest Parole Board for all your hard work and dedication for this event. The following people were on the Parole board:

Chief Doug Carver, Charlevoix Fire Department
Tina Foltz, Cardiac Rehab
Carney Russell, Biceps
Monica Speigl, Cardiac Rehab
Tamara Stevens, Community Relations

We would also like to thank all the Cardiac Arrest jailbirds for being such good sports as wanted

Events in brief

Middle school hosts orientation night

The sixth grade staff at the Charlevoix Middle School invites fifth grade students and their parents to Sixth Grade Orientation and a cook-out April 13 and 14. They will meet in the middle school cafeteria for hot dogs and burgers, grilled by principal Dennis Van-Guilder and staff on an outdoor grill, then move into the gymnasium for a short program.

During the program, students will be introduced to sixth grade staff members, explain the class and curriculum offerings for sixth graders, cover school policies, procedures and expectations, and end with a question and answer time for parents and students. They will also receive a packet of pertinent information about the sixth grade at Charlevoix Middle School.

Due to enrollment numbers, the school has planned two evenings for orientation, and are requesting that people attend based on last names. From 6-7:15 p.m. Monday April 13, students whose last names start with "A" through "L" should attend. From 6-7:15 p.m. Tuesday, April 14, students whose last name starts with "M" through "Z" should attend.

If students can't make it on their scheduled evening, please attend on the other evening.

Anyone planning to attend should call the school at 547-3206 after April 6.

Maybe mayor could help create better township

Dear Sir or Madam:

I am a sixth grader in the Charlevoix Middle School. I am writing to you to give the mayor some ideas to make our township a better place to live in. We need to add some fun places for kids. One idea is having an arcade. Another idea should be a roller rink.

Kicking the habit — out of businesses

Have you noticed the changes around Charlevoix? Many businesses and public buildings are changing their policies and increasing the places that our community members can go and enjoy a smoke-free environment. The Charlevoix-Emmet-Antrim Tobacco Reduction Coalition, whose mission is to reduce the use of tobacco products and the exposure to environmental tobacco smoke, applauds the policy changes.

Beginning Jan. 1, the Charlevoix County Board of Commissioner's Resolution went into effect. The resolution made the County Building Complex completely smoke-free inside the building.

When McDonald's of Charlevoix smoke-free policy became effective Feb. 1, they joined ranks with all the other fast food restaurants in Charlevoix. Leading the way with smoke-free policies were Pizza Hut, Burger King, Subway, Taco Bell, Karl's Pastry Shop & Cafe and K-Mart.

Charlevoix is extremely fortunate to have full service restaurants that allow us to dine in smoke-free environments. The Acorn and Charley's are the leaders there.

And beginning April 1, 1998, The Charlevoix Public School Board Policy goes into effect. The change prohibits the use of tobacco products on all school property.

Members of the coalition are extremely pleased at the policy changes and hope others will follow the lead. There are many other businesses in Charlevoix that are smoke-free also. Please pick up a free copy of the "Smoke-free Business Guide" at the chamber of commerce or the public library. The guide includes businesses that are voluntarily smoke-free.

The Charlevoix-Emmet-Antrim Tobacco Reduction Coalition is sponsored by Northwest Michigan Community Health Agency. Any business interested in being included in the business guide may contact Mary Ann Cox at 547-6523.

Also anyone interested in making a policy change to become smoke-free may contact the health department for assistance.

Beaver Island joins risk prevention project

Approximately 25 community members are involved in the Communities That Care project on Beaver Island. The project is a long-term, risk-focused, prevention program that hopes to reduce adolescent problem behaviors by strengthening community, school, family and individual protective factors. Communities That Care (CTC) projects are currently being implemented in Beaver Island, Charlevoix and East Jordan. They are funded in part by Charlevoix County Substance Abuse Prevention Funds from the state of Michigan and through a federal grant from the Office of Juvenile Justice (OJJ).

The programs in Charlevoix County are overseen by the board of county commissioners, who have identified the following risks as county-wide targets: community laws and norms favorable toward drug use; and, friends who engage in problem behavior. The CTC training hopes to educate local community members about risk-focused prevention and empower them to design long-term strategies to build safer and healthier communities for the decades to come.

The group realizes they are involved in a long-term project which will, at times, not appeal to all members of the community, but which is essential if the community is to provide the next generation of islanders with healthy life choices. The Beaver Island Communities That Care group has, by far, the greatest level of community participation of the three communities with which coordinator Scott Kelly is working. The Beaver Island group is meeting monthly and gathering data which describes our community profile in relation to the above-named risk factors, among others. The community profile also documents the protective factors influencing our students — for example, opportunities for involvement in healthy activities and positive family attachments.

Coordinator Scott Kelly of Bay Area Substance Education Services in Charlevoix has been chairing the monthly meetings on Beaver Island.

There are currently 100 communities in the nation in which CTC is being implemented.

OF BLESSINGS

Recent statistics tell us that 96 percent of Americans believe there is a God. That leaves 4 percent claiming there is none. They are following in the steps of their forefather Mussolini, the Italian dictator. He said to God with his fist raised into the air, "If you really are real, you will strike me dead right now." When God did not comply with his command, he reasoned there must not be a god. However, later God did answer his prayer by tragic death.

Many well-meaning Christians have said, "There is no way we can prove God exists. We must believe by faith." This statement is very wrong. Scripture tells us so.

Romans 1:18-20: "For the wrath of God is revealed against all ungodliness and unrighteousness of men, who suppress the truth in unrighteousness, because that which is known about God is evident within them... For since the creation of the world, His invisible attributes, His eternal power and divine nature, have been clearly seen, being understood through what has been made, so that they are without excuse."

The fact that God exists can be known outside the realm of faith because it has been revealed to man in God's creation.

I have a theory of where the Coca-Cola can came from. Over a billion years ago, there was a huge explosion or big bang. Out of the explosion a rock formed. Within a million years or two this sweet, brown bubbly substance appeared on the rock. Over the next 5-10 billion years a metal called aluminum began to form around the liquid and finally appeared as a can with a top and a tab. During the next 15 millenniums, red, green, brown and white paint fell from the sky and formulated the words, Always Coca Cola classic, delicious, unique, refreshing, 12 fluid oz.

And finally the can was tossed around on the rock by the wind, which chiseled out words on top of the can which said Michigan Refund — 10 cents.

I do not wish to insult your intelligence, but many believe this is what happens given the right amount of time and chance. But we know if the Coca-Cola can is designed, it had to have a designer. If it was made, there had to be a maker. Those who do not believe this have had brain lypo-suction.

From this illustration we simply have to look at what has been made to know there is a maker. The trees, fruit, sun, moon, stars and our bodies tell us we were designed with purpose in mind.

With all of our vast wealth of knowledge we can never, ever, create something from nothing, not even a grain of sand. Creation is far above us. Let's look at a cow. A brown cow eats green grass which produces white milk, when mixed up makes yellow butter and a child eats it and grows red hair. How could this be? The cow turns grass into milk.

How about the chicken, which is possibly the most stupid of all birds. Chickens eat cabbage, corn, fat, crackers, potatoes and tiny little rocks. No matter what they eat, the next day they leave the same perfect package; the egg. Why? Because they were designed to do so. There was a purpose in mind. Is modern man more intelligent than the chicken? Perhaps! The chicken is stupid but we cannot do what she does, because we were not created to lay eggs.

Just look around you. Study it. This creation that we live in was perfectly designed by a perfect Creator. The reason an atheist cannot see God is the same reason a thief cannot find a policeman.

Psalms 14:1 says, "The fool has said in his heart there is no God." This is your day, April 1. Don't be a fool. Turn to God.

Gas drilling denied in Jordan Valley

The Michigan Public Service Commission denied the application of Walter Zarembo to construct and operate the Jordan Valley Pipeline in Antrim County. The commission denied the request because it found that the proposed pipeline will not provide an economic means of delivering natural gas to the market and will not serve the public convenience and necessity.

Zarembo, an Elmira businessman, has been trying to get permission to drill for natural gas in the Jordan Valley since May of 1997.

In reaching its conclusion, the commission took under consideration the recommendations of the administrative law judge's Dec. 15, 1997 decision in which the judge concluded that developing the limited productive capacity of the well would not confer a significant benefit on the public at large and that the proposed pipeline lacked economic justification.

"Zarembo's proposal lacked economic justification in large part due to the potential cost of environmental harm," said John Richter, President of the Friends of the Jordan. "By this decision, it has now been proven that drilling for Antrim gas in the Jordan Valley constitutes waste. And, as we've said from the start, his proposal was in direct conflict to the Jordan Valley Management Plan, which explicitly prohibits oil and gas development in the Jordan Valley Management Area."

The Friends of the Jordan is a grass roots environmental group that has been fighting Zarembo's attempts to drill in the Jordan River Valley.

"From the beginning, this has been a citizen-led effort to preserve one of our greatest natural treasures in the state of Michigan," said John Hummer, director of the Friends of the Jordan. "This issue has awakened state officials that there are certain places that should be preserved forever. The Jordan Valley has been, and always should be, one of them."

While it appears to be a closed case, Zarembo is not giving up. He's already filed a leave to appeal a court decision denying him a drilling permit.

High school football playoffs will undergo changes

By Jamie MacMillan

State athletic officials are not questioning if they should expand the high school football playoffs, but, rather, how to expand them.

When the high school athletic governing board meets during the first weekend of May in Thompsonville, it will hash out an expansion of the playoffs based on three different proposals, ranging from doubling the number of tournament bids to extending the tournament to every team, regardless of its record.

Currently, football teams are divided into eight classes based on enrollment. Class A is the largest, with class AA second and so on through class DD.

Charlevoix is a class C school. Each class is divided into four regions. The top four teams (16 teams in all) in each region qualify for the state playoffs.

Between all eight classes, 128 schools qualify for the playoffs, but a plan devised by a panel of head coaches would increase that number to 512, four times as many that advance now.

Known as Proposition 16, the plan would divide teams into 10 divisions, begin the season a week earlier, and wipe out the ninth game on the schedule in favor of a first round playoff game.

For the 107 schools that won't qualify for the playoffs with this system, it will be allowed to pick-up a ninth regular season game with another non-qualifying school to round out the schedule.

"I don't think that would be such a big draw, the travel expenses would override any draw from the gate," Boyne City football coach Pat Klooster said of makeshift final game for non-qualifying teams. "It would be like kissing your sister."

Most of those squads would be either winless or 1-7 with the distinct possibility of long travel distances between schools.

Questioning the excitement of those contests led Fred Smith, athletic director of Crockston High School, to turn in his own plan which would extend the playoffs to every school that fields a team.

In response to those ideas, the state high school athletic association has produced its own expansion plan, a version that is "not as radical," according to media relations director Joe Johnston.

Under the associations' plan, the number of qualifying teams wouldn't even double. Instead of taking the top four from each region, the top eight would advance. Since the number of schools in class D and DD are small, no expansion is planned within those parameters. With this plan, 224 schools would make it to the playoffs.

For Johnston, this more subtle expansion would maintain both the integrity of the school schedule as well as the competitiveness of first round playoff games.

For example, during the 1997 playoffs, 17 of the 64 first round games invoked the mercy rule, running the clock time once a team leads by at least 35 points. Any expansion would increase that number, but to open the door for 512 teams, Johnston said, that number would skyrocket.

"How educational is it to say we got in the playoffs, but got waxed," Johnston asked.

Under athletic association's system, the season would still begin a week earlier, but would maintain the ninth regular season game, and only increase the number of post season games needed to win the title to five from four.

Johnston also noted that most schools save the ninth game of the regular season for non-conference rivals, like Petoskey vs. Charlevoix. This plan would help continue such match-ups.

Area football coaches said that expanding the playoffs would be a nice way to let more kids experience the thrill of post season. However, a mass exodus of teams into the playoffs might not be the right way to go.

"If it went to 512 teams, it will take away the sense of accomplishment of getting in and diminish the importance of the regular season," Charlevoix football coach Todd Klinger said. "What scares you is how many mismatches will we be creating with 9-0 teams playing 2-7 way to go."

Junior golf adds intern to program

Mark Buchanan

The Charlevoix Junior Golf program plans are being finalized for the coming summer. This summer will be the fourth year for the nonprofit program that provides instruction and golfing opportunities for area youngsters ages 8-17. Last year, 217 young golfers registered for the program, and, as a result of the difficulty in managing that large number, some program changes are being planned.

Director Dean Davenport has announced that arrangements have been made to add a professional member to the teaching staff who will serve as an assistant director.

"Ferris State University has long been recognized as the leading institution in developing PGA and golf course management professionals," Davenport said. "We proposed that they use our program as an intern program and combine it with work at the Charlevoix Municipal Course in conjunction with manager Tom Heid's plans. From that, a joint internship station was formed."

Mark Buchanan was selected as the first intern for the program. He spent several years at the Great Oaks Country Club, where he organized junior camps and served as assistant golf operations manager. He played varsity golf for Rochester Adams High School and is a junior in the professional golf management program at Ferris State University.

With the addition of Buchanan, Davenport plans to expand the program.

"We are considering starting a league for our older and more skilled juniors and we will also schedule some special events that will add a nice flavor to our existing program," Davenport said.

Registration and initial lessons are scheduled to start the week of June 14. More details will be available at a later date.

Football playoffs to change

Klooster said that nothing is really wrong with the current system and any expansion would still leave teams on the outside looking in.

"The team ranked No. 9 would then say 'Boy we just missed it at 7-2,' he said. 'It's got to stop somewhere.'"

Both coaches said the moderate expansion would be more favorable, but both were concerned about beginning the season a week earlier.

They feel it will be more of a developmental detriment to the junior varsity players, many of whom are playing high contact football for the first time. Within two weeks of their first practice in full pads, junior varsity squads would be lining up against each other in a live game, and both coaches had reservations about those teams being both physically and mentally ready to play.

Any change in the system isn't expected to be implemented until the fall of 1999.

Big Rock offers public speakers, tours

Does your group need a speaker for its next meeting? Consumers Energy's Big Rock Point nuclear plant employees are available to speak to service organizations, business meetings, schools, and church groups on a variety of topics including plant decommissioning and site restoration activities.

Public tours of the plant are also available. The plant's visitors center is currently being renovated to portray the history of Big Rock Point and its employees.

Big Rock Point ceased operation on Aug. 29, 1997. Plant employees continue to play an active role in the community through speaking engagements and other volunteer efforts during the decommissioning and site restoration process.

To arrange for a speaker or to schedule a tour for groups of 10 or more people, please contact public affairs director Tim Pet-rosky at 547-8177.

Big Rock Point was the world's first high power-density boiling water reactor and an important research site for the nuclear power industry.

The plant was shut down after 35 years of service, making it the nation's longest running nuclear plant. Due to its many contributions to the nuclear and medical communities, it was named a Nuclear Historic Landmark by the American Nuclear Society.

Award of the Bronze Star to Private First Class Lyman C. Mathews

Private first class Lyman C. Mathews, of Fenton, Michigan, was awarded the newly authorized Bronze Star for meritorious achievement in connection with military operations against the enemy during the battle for Attu, by Brigadier General Leroy J. Stewart of the Seventh Infantry Division. In a ceremony held recently at a Central Pacific Base.

Mathews, an Intelligence observer, received the decoration in recognition of his outstanding actions, beyond the call of duty, in the grueling three-week battle for Attu, tip of the fog-bound Aleutian Island chain, a year ago.

A veteran of two campaigns in the Pacific war, Pfc. Mathews participated with the Seventh Division in the recent assault and capture of Kwajalein Atoll, center of Jap held Marshall Islands.

In addition to the Bronze Star, Pfc. Mathews wears the Combat Infantryman Badge, the Good Conduct Medal, and the Asiatic Pacific Ribbon with two battle stars.

His father, Mr. Charles F. Mathews, resides at Fenton, Michigan.

Swimming in Round Lake was a regular activity

By Marilyn Boss

Memories are such fun. People tell me they enjoy my columns because they bring back memories that they might have forgotten. In the 1940s, I used to swim the channel with friends, until we were forbidden to by the Coast Guard. There are really treacherous currents of water in there, and they change constantly. We did have fun going from one side to the other. I often think of the many things we do as kids, and wonder how we ever survived the perils. Climbing the icebergs was also a venture, until my dad got wind of it.

When the North or South American ships came in, many of the kids in the town went down there to scramble for the nickels, dimes and quarters that the passengers threw to the crowd as they docked the ship. The kids would stand in droves, and the scramble was on. My dad wouldn't let me go by myself, for the competition got pretty intense, and he didn't want to take the chance of me falling in. He took me down there once, and I enjoyed watching the free-for-all.

As a little girl, I remember the sensation of going to swim near Ferry Beach. Mom would drive our car down a little two-track trail to the water. As we left the main road, the car bottom would drag through the tall grass, and make the nicest sound. We knew we were almost there, and the cool water was such a respite from the stifling heat. We would swim and also take a bar of soap to wash our hair. That ritual still happens sometimes, for in recent years we watched a fellow go out on the end of the dock, soap up his hair, and dive in to rinse off. One day, I was swimming out by the raft they had at the time. It was made of old empty oil barrels, with wood on the top and sides to tie them together. We kids would swim under the raft, come up between the barrels, and get a breath of air. There was enough space to allow our heads to come into the air space. I went under it one day, and when I came up, I hit a barrel. I tried again, and still couldn't find the air space. Pretty soon, I was desperate for air, and almost panicked, but I asked God to help me be calm and find the way out. Then, I went straight down to the bottom of the lake, which was about 8 feet deep. I swam along the bottom until I knew I had cleared the raft above me, and came up to the surface, gasping for that wonderful breath of air. I sure learned a lesson that day.

We also used to swim in Round Lake. The city had two diving boards off East Park, near the fish pond. One was high, and the other low. The kids swam there all the time, until a local boy got a severe infection from the waste products in the lake, which were dumped there by the boats at that time. One day, I decided to swim across Round Lake. I started out from the park, and decided to go the long way, keeping close to the docks in case I had trouble. I was about one-quarter of the way, when a boy my age came by in a canoe, and offered to go beside me the rest of the way. I really did appreciate that, for it was a rather foolish thing to tackle alone. When I reached Old Island, I climbed out, and then realized that there I was, on the far side of the lake, and in my swimming suit, no towel, and facing quite a walk down Dixon Avenue across the bridge, and down Bridge Street, before I was back with my friends. It was a most embarrassing moment for me.

With all the lakes we are blessed with in Charlevoix, there was never a lack of fun things to do, and many of these stories are retold to my grandchildren over and over. They never seem to tire of them, and isn't telling them fun?

Hospital one step closer to expansion

By Jamie MacMillan

A possible expansion of the Charlevoix Area Hospital has passed through its first stages, with a compromised rezoning of a Park Avenue property from residential to professional office space.

In January, Charlevoix Township planners had tabled a similar rezoning request by property owner Calvin Gould, who is expected to sell the land to the hospital.

Hospital officials have stated that no immediate use for the land is planned, but ultimately they will build a single story office building based on growth projections that foresee the hospital hiring at least three more doctors in the upcoming years.

The land is across the street from the main portion of the Charlevoix Area Hospital.

Neighbors had a slew of concerns, ranging from parking lots extending to their property lines to the overall character of the neighborhood. They began bartering with hospital officials over feasible green belt buffers between current homes and a possible office building.

Professional office zones require a 10 foot side yard setback, but neighbors contended that since the hospital already had plans to build offices on the corner of Upright and Park and own the land next to the Goulds they could afford to give them more of a buffer.

Planners tabled the request so the parties could meet privately and work out an agreement at their leisure.

Both parties came back to planners with a two-pronged compromise. The hospital will accept a 25-foot green belt buffer above the required 10 foot green belt. Also, the hospital will maintain the three pine trees on the Goulds' land to further separate the commercial and residential tendencies of the neighborhood. The trees are 50 years old, and should they die, the hospital will not replant.

Township planners gave a nod to the decision, approving it in a 5-0 vote. The request now must be passed by the Charlevoix County Planners and then the Charlevoix Township Board of Trustees before being official.

In other business, planners approved a site plan development for Crown Motors of 06684 U.S. 31 to expand its current facility north toward Barnard Road and east behind the building.

Future Problem Solvers are state champions

By Jamie MacMillan

Charlevoix eighth grader Scott Parrish credits his Future Problem Solver team's state championship to the fact that they avoided becoming "too futuristic" with their solution.

Last week, Parrish, along with classmates Jim Sheppard, Patrick Gowell and Shaun McDonough, took top honors in the state Future Problem Solvers championships.

The title advances the quartet to the international championships in Ann Arbor beginning Friday, June 12, where they will compete against champions from all 50 states and eight foreign countries.

This year, competitors dealt with the subject of non-traditional families. Problem solver coach Tom Sothard said dealing with this subject was easier for students to relate to than previous years' topics, which included ever-lasting life and competition in the work force.

"There was a little more personal attachment and reality," he said. "Frankly, almost all of us now live in non-traditional families."

For the competition, a "traditional" family includes a husband in the work force with a wife as a home maker with two children.

The problem facing the students was how a family would survive on Mars. The families settled state finals, after having placed 20th in 1996 and 16th last year. Gowell, McDonough and Sheppard

Tenants hung-up on city hangar rental fee

By Laurie Lounsbury

About 25 years ago, a group of 10 individuals got together and built a hangar at the Charlevoix Airport. Instead of cutting corners to save money, they built a nice, quality hangar.

Now they're paying for it. According to the agreement between the city and the owners of the hangar, the city became the owner of the hangar when the 20-year land lease expired.

And now the original owners who built and paid for the hangar will be paying the city $100 per month in rent. Since their lease expired, they've been paying $75 per month in rent.

The $100 monthly rent is a better deal than the city's original proposed rent of $125 per month.

"Going from $75 a month to $125 a month, I think, is excessive," said councilman Bob Timms.

The amount, and the terms of the deal, are still considerably more costly than other area airports. Airport manager Lorraine Luepnitz said while some neighboring airports charge less for hangar space than Charlevoix, their hangars aren't as nice as the Charlevoix hangar.

"We could have built a cheaper hangar," said Don Seelye, one of the partners in the hangar. "Maybe if we'd built a cheaper hangar it would be reflected in the rent we're paying today. Instead, we're being haunted by our decision to build a really nice hangar."

With 10 tenants paying $100 per month, the city will be making $12,000 on a hangar that cost them nothing to build.

Luepnitz said the city will have to spend about $5,000 in repairs and renovations on the hangar.

"All the seals on the hangar doors needed replacing, all the doors needed new cables, at least two motors needed to be replaced and some light fixtures needed replacing," Luepnitz said.

Mayor Josh Barnes pointed out that the city is trying to raise money for new airport terminal renovations.

Charlevoix is not flying into uncharted air space in the area of hangar construction and leases. In other neighboring communities, a variety of options have made hangar construction and leases more palatable than Charlevoix's arrangement.

In Harbor Springs, hangar builders get a 25-year lease with the city before the property reverts back to the city. And it is only the had already departed for spring break, so only Parrish remained to receive the first place trophy. Parrish said they didn't expect to win, hoping instead for a top-ten finish.

"It took a while to register that we had won even while on stage getting all the applause," he said. "It was the most fun thing I have ever done."

While the basketball world ponders its dynasties with the Chicago Bulls, Kentucky Wildcats and Tennessee Lady Volunteers, it's worth noting that with this FPS title, Charlevoix has created its own academic dynasty.

Not only is this the second straight FPS state title won by a Charlevoix team, but it's the fourth this decade, with titles won in 1990 and 1993.

Beyond the championship team, Charlevoix won other honors. The quartet of Mike Sullivan, Rob Boss, James Fletcher and Ryan Rafacz won the third place trophy. The ninth grade team of Jessie Murray, Cailin Dulaney, Laura Borths, Sally Beemon and Shawna Flowers won a first place trophy for best presentation of a solution. Parrish, Gowell, McDonough and Sheppard won a third place trophy for best presentation of a solution.

"We were pretty pumped up," Sothard said. "I'm real proud of Charlevoix, we were well represented."

City charging more for hangars

land that reverts back to the city. The hangar itself remains the property of the original owner, who has the option to sell it or move it. The lease cost is 12 cents per square foot for the land on which the hangar sits, and 8 cents per square foot for surrounding land used by the hangar owner.

For people building new hangars in Charlevoix, they will pay 70 cents a square foot for the hangar land-lease space, with a 20-year lease.

"I think 70 cents a square foot is atrocious," Seelye said. "The closest airport comparison in northern Michigan is at 17 cents a square foot."

In Gaylord, Bellaire, Escanaba, Pellston and St. Ignace, the county built hangars for their tenants, so they have their own costs to recoup. The monthly rent at those airports ranges from $60 to $120.

"I can understand their rates," Seelye said. "The counties put up the money to build the hangar, and they have to amortize their costs."

Charlevoix's original proposal was to charge renters $125 per month, plus $12 per month for insurance and include in the contract that they may have to be responsible for any state or county tax asessments.

At the city council meeting Monday, council voted to have the city assume the insurance payments and exclude the clause regarding tax assessments for one year.

"If we own the building we should be paying the insurance on it," Timms said.

In other business, councilman Gabe Campbell requested that city council discuss plans for the Venetian Festival at their first meeting in May.

"We don't want to wait until the last minute," Campbell said. "I think it's time for the city council to have a say in what's going to happen or not happen."

Barnes suggested that the chamber of commerce be asked to submit their Venetian Festival proposal at the first council meeting in May.

A small agenda item was to give Whitney's Oyster Bar permission to continue to store their deck awning frame on city property. The city gave them until May 10 to leave the structure where it is, behind the parking lot.

Although the lure of spring break took many Future Problem Solvers away immediately following the state championships, enough were still on hand to gather for a photo.

Debate on Cedar Ridge expansion draws to close

Charlevoix County planners will meet next Monday and with the meeting could come the final act in the Cedar Ridge landfill expansion debate.

Planners are expected to either give the expansion a thumbs up or thumbs down at its meeting at 4 p.m. Monday, April 13. The meeting will take place in the basement meeting room of the Charlevoix County building.

Last month planners tabled any discussion on the matter to investigate if the proposed expansion encroached onto adjacent wetlands. Also at issue were three culverts which flow water across Brock Rd. from Nowland Lake which brought into question the actual boundaries of the lake.

According to the siting criteria in the county's solid waste plan, landfills must have a mandatory setback of 2,000 feet from any body of water, 500 feet from any intermittent flowing water and 200 feet from any wetland area.

The expansion proposal would increase the 40-acre facility southwest another 12 acres towards Nowland Lake. Currently the landfill has approximately three-and-one-half years of available capacity and the expansion would increase its life span at least another 10 years.

The future of the landfill is also uncertain due to the recent acquisition of Waste Management by USA Waste. USA Waste owns all the landfills in northern Michigan.

India: From head hunters to Hindus, Steve Rozema has seen it all

By Laurie Lounsbury

When Steve Rozema traveled to India, he found poverty, sickness and militant tribes fighting constantly. He also found love.

Rozema was on his second trip to India when he met Elizabeth (Dargawn) Rozema in her native village in Manipur. He was sharing his missionary message with the native villagers in the remote, northeast corner of India when Elizabeth first saw him.

Within a matter of hours, she missed her daughter, Elizabeth is happy to be in America.

"It's so safe here and so dangerous where I lived," Elizabeth said. "A civil war among the native tribes in northeast India is an ongoing threat to the lives of innocent civilians. It is the reason visitors aren't allowed to enter that portion of India for longer than five days."

"They just kill people like chickens," Rozema said. "Every night when we went to bed, it was to the sound of machine guns and bombs."

At the beginning of this year, Rozema and his wife returned to India to visit her family and continue Rozema's work as a missionary. Rozema's project is to deliver Bibles, translated into the native languages, to the people living in northeast India.

The natives, who descended from the original head-hunting tribes, are primarily Hindu or Buddhist. "The Buddhist and Hindu are some of the friendliest and loveliest people I've ever met," Rozema said.

Although the Buddhist people are deeply rooted in their faith, Rozema is determined to spread the word of the gospel in India.

"I believe that my belief in Christ is belief in the true God," Rozema said. The Hindus, who worship many gods, were more receptive to his message, Rozema said.

"They just want to know more about this one god who maybe they tried to turn their backs on," Rozema said.

Elizabeth is a member of one of the few Christian tribes in the area. According to Rozema, about 80 years ago a white missionary dared to travel into the head-hunting region.

"People told him if you go in there, you'll never come back out," Rozema said.

But the missionary was successful in communicating with tribal leaders and converting five tribal chiefs to Christianity.

"He didn't speak their language, but told Bible stories through charades," Rozema said.

The son of one of those chiefs is now with Bibles for the World, the organization that distributes Bibles to different countries, written in their native language.

This year, the group distributed almost 2,000 Bibles in five different languages to Asian countries. They also support 18 pastors in northeast India, support 10 churches in the area and are building two new churches.

Dogs are family members, not yard ornaments

Laurie Lounsbury

There are obviously way too many people in this town who don't know how to effectively waste their excessive amounts of discretionary income.

I can just picture these people sitting around the dining room table, discussing the problem of this excess money burning a hole in their pockets.

"Gee, honey, we've got way too much extra money, and I can't think of a single productive way to spend it. So let's buy a dog."

"But we don't like dogs."

"That doesn't matter. A dog will be highly effective at gobbling up our extra income. We'll have to buy dog food, and collars, and chains, and take him to the vet and pay for shots and heartworm pills and all sorts of great stuff."

"But we don't like dogs."

"That's OK — LOTS of people who don't like dogs own dogs. It'll look really cute in the back yard by the picket fence, all chained up, kind of like a living hood ornament. And it will scare away the burglars with its incessant barking."

"But we don't like barking dogs."

"Yes we do, dear. We'll learn to tune out the barking in no time, as soon as the dog officially belongs to us."

Soooooo, these money-burdened people zip off to the pet store and buy a dog they don't want so they can spend lots of money on it, all the while leaving it tied up in their back yard, side yard, or front porch — whichever location will provide optimal irritation to everyone else in the neighborhood.

Don't get me wrong — I love dogs. That's why it sickens me to see so many dogs either caged up or chained up day and night, yapping their lonely heads off, while their owners sit inside watching television.

What possessed these people to buy a dog in the first place?

I have a new neighbor who bought a home that came complete with a large cage in the back yard, far from his home and very close to mine.

The previous home owners were masters of dog neglect and discretionary spending. They built a cage in the yard for their two barking dogs, but that wasn't enough. They bought a dog house to stick in the cage, so they could neglect their dogs day and night, rain or shine.

That still wasn't enough.

They bought bales of hay to put in the cage, so they could enjoy guilt-free dog neglect during sub-zero temperatures, leaving the poor pooches to burrow into the hay for warmth.

I was thrilled when those neighbors sold their home and moved to the country. I hope their dogs found a better life.

Now, my new neighbor moved in and apparently decided it would be wasteful not to put a large, loud dog in the cage that came with the house.

Once again, I have a neglected dog facing my kitchen window, harking from sun-up to sundown.

While I'm on the subject of dogs, I'd like to address the people who think their dog is the most wonderful, irresistible creature in the world.

These folks have such a high opinion of their dogs that they must assume everyone in town would be delighted to be approached by their dogs.

I encounter these dogs routinely when I'm out taking a walk after dinner. As dusk approaches, I'm strolling peacefully down a street one moment, and in the blink of an eye I'm being charged by a growling, angry unleashed dog. The owner is 100 feet behind the dog, walking or jogging merrily while the dog has me pinned against a maple tree.

"Oh, don't mind him," they say as they cruise past me.

Don't mind him? He's got his teeth bared and he's threatening to rearrange my face.

There is a leash law, and I wish people would obey it. I am not afraid of dogs, but I feel distinctly uncomfortable when they charge at me, barking ferociously and growling menacingly.

My third and final dog issue is, of course, the presents they leave behind on the grass. I'm sure the dog feels much better after it deposits a large present on the grass, but it ruins my day when I step in it.

Picking up doggie droppings is not pretty or pleasant, but neither is scraping the fecal matter out of the sole on a walking shoe. The newest walking shoes have treats like a snow tire, so it's quite a job to thoroughly clean them.

Having said my peace, let me make a few recommendations to those people contemplating the purchase of an ornamental, backyard dog.

Take your spouse out to dinner instead. Buy a terrarium. Invest in the stock market.

Do anything, but don't buy a dog unless you want it to become a member of your family.

Letters to the editor

Caregiver disagrees with editorial on personal responsibility

Editor:

I would like to correct a couple of statements you made in your editorial "Bars shouldn't be responsible for actions of patrons," March 25, 1998.

You indicated that Andy chose to go up to the balcony and get into a fight with someone who had been drinking. Andy was a guest at the motel that night. He was already on the balcony when McNamara started up the stairs. There was not a fight between Andy Louiselle and Tim McNamara. Andy was attacked with no warning and thrown from the balcony by a very drunk McNamara. Andy did nothing to cause this to happen.

You said "It was about money."

This was not about money, in fact it is likely that little, if any, of the monies awarded will ever be collected, either from Mr. McNamara or from Nanny's. We have known this for several years, but decided to proceed with the lawsuit mainly to try to prevent Nanny's from continuing to operate their bar business in a way that we consider to be irresponsible. It is about making a point. Being awarded a settlement of $2.9 million by a jury does not mean any of that settlement will be collected.

With regard to not suing just McNamara, there are rules about lawsuits regarding who you must include in a suit.

The State of Michigan also participated with the Estate of Andrew Louiselle in the lawsuit, to recover what they paid (through Medicaid) for Andy's medical bills. I don't think the State of Michigan would have participated in a "frivolous" lawsuit. Alcohol is a controlled substance, and the law does at present hold people accountable who furnish this controlled substance to others. They first have to obtain a license, after all!

Andy was more than "seriously injured" as you indicated when he was tossed from the balcony at Nanny's. He is permanently disabled, with brain damage, and confined to a wheelchair. He is not able to care for any of his own needs, and needs 24-hour care. When you publish an opinion such as this, you might have a little consideration for Andy and his family and friends, and make an effort to research and publish all the facts.

Old swing bridge spot should be used for excess traffic

Dear Editor:
Ever since I moved here twelve years ago, traffic has been a major problem in Charlevoix. The parking spots on Bridge Street make it too small to drive down without creating traffic jams. The second reason why it's a problem is because people pulling out of parking spots get stuck in traffic creating traffic jams. Now, in the summer the bridge opens on the half hour which gives you little time to beat the bridge, causing many traffic jams and many speeders.

I think that a good solution may be to build a second bridge over where the old train bridge used to be located. Then, people who don't need to go through downtown Charlevoix don't have to. If this were possible, Charlevoix would never have to worry about traffic jams again.

Thanks for taking the time and patience to read this and I hope some changes happen soon.

Sincerely,
John Wilkinson

Beacons of Blessing
By Rev. Bruce Hamilton
Community Church of God

Once upon a time there was a very rich man who realized he was nearing death. He was upset that he could not take his wealth with him and started praying each day and night to take his wealth with him. An angel appeared to him and told him, "Sorry, you can't take it with you." He implored the angel to speak to God and bend the rule this one time.

He continued to pray and finally the angel appeared and said, "God has decided to make this one exception. He will let you take one suitcase with you." The man got his largest suitcase and filled it with gold bars, and placed it alongside his bed.

He died and showed up at the pearly gates. St. Peter said, "Hold on. You aren't allowed to take anything with you. That suitcase cannot come in here."

The man told him to check in with the boss, that he had permission to bring one suitcase with him. Sure enough, St. Peter checked, and came back and said, "You're right. The Boss says you can bring in one suitcase but I have to check its contents."

St. Peter opened the suitcase and exclaimed, "You brought pavement?"

If that made you smile, I'm glad. But I want you to catch something else out of that little tale. What seems important to you and I in some settings might not be nearly as important in others. Those things that might take on life-and-death urgency under one set of circumstances may seem trivial in the face of more significant matters. Christ was a man for all seasons. He was a person prepared for whatever the moment unfolded and you and I would do well to follow in His footsteps.

If you are a follower of the Easter story, you know that one of the darker moments on the road to the cross was when Peter denied knowing Christ several times. It was the first time in his life that he had to make a real choice. He was being challenged to break with his past and trust God in the face of what he felt was an uncertain future. He couldn't do it.

Now if the story ended right here, this tale would be a depressing one. But fortunately for us, we know there is more. Though Peter went away in deep anguish over his denials, he would return with his faith being more strong and more trusting than even he ever imagined it could be. If anything, this moment enhanced his reputation as being the leader of the disciples, the rock upon which much of the early church was built.

I would challenge you to think about some of the dark moments in your life and how you have reacted to them. Do we let tough times or tragedies get the best of us or do we do what we can to trust the Lord and make the best of them? Nothing that threatens to knock you down spiritually really has the power to knock you out spiritually unless you give in. That's why Christ went to the cross to give you that assurance, to help you build the reputation that having faith in your heart is meant to unfold in every believing son or daughter's life.

Doctor passes recertification exam

Dr. Stewart

F. James Stewart, M.D. of Charlevoix has recently received notice that he has successfully passed his recertification exam given by the American Board of Family Practice. Physicians recognized by the Board must continue to demonstrate their competence by completing this exam every six years. Since passing his initial certification exam in 1979, this represents the third time that Dr. Stewart has passed his recertification exam.

Family practice was recognized in 1969 as a medical specialty by the American Medical Association and the American Board of Medical Specialties, and it was the first specialty to require its Diplomats to take recertification exams at regular intervals. The exam is an intensive written test of the physician's abilities in pediatrics, internal medicine, surgery, obstetrics, gynecology, psychiatry, emergency and preventive medicine. Family physicians are trained to care for the whole person, treating a majority of all the medical problems people might have and referring to other specialties when necessary. There are family practice departments in approximately 126 U.S. medical schools and residency training programs in more than 465 universities and teaching hospitals.

Worker injured on the job at Big Rock Point

An independent contractor working at Big Rock Point Nuclear Power plant was injured on the job around 9 a.m. Thursday, April 2.

Chester Shankel, a laborer for NPS Inc., was working on a platform in a contaminated area when he banged his head on a beam. He was not wearing a hard hat at the time.

Employees responded to the accident by calling 911. Shankel was taken to the Charlevoix Area Hospital where he was examined and released.

"He was back to work by about 11 a.m.," reported Tim Petrosky, public affairs director at Big Rock Point. "We will follow up with an accident investigation, but it was unfortunately an accident," Petrosky said.

Because Shankel was working in an area where there was no danger of overhead falling objects, he was not required to wear a hard hat, according to Petrosky.

Shankel was working to remove asbestos in the steam drum area near the reactor deck when he hit his head.

At the time he banged his head, Shankel was standing on a platform about eight feet above the ground.

Going for the greens — and fairways

By Jamie MacMillan

For some, this weekend's Masters' Championship is another benchmark in the arrival of spring — the opening of the local courses is next in line.

Area pros said they hope their courses can open by the middle of the month — perhaps even sooner should we be blessed with a stretch of dry, sunny weather.

The nine-hole Charlevoix Municipal Course is already open on a day-to-day basis based on the weather. The clubhouse will be open full-time Wednesday, April 15.

The local 18-hole courses — Charlevoix Country Club, Dunmaglas and Belvedere — plan to tee-off by Friday, April 17, weather permitting, each of the respective course managers said. Worst case scenarios will see the courses opening the last weekend of April.

"The temperature is not a concern," said Joel Gohlman, manager of the Dunmaglas course. "What we need is to dry up, and some consecutive days of 40-50 degree weather with sun would do it."

Meanwhile, maintenance workers will continue to prep the courses for what will likely be another busy season on the links.

When the season does begin, golfers will notice a few changes to their favorite playgrounds.

At the municipal course, the appearance has been spruced up with the planting of five green-leaved linden trees between the second and third holes and eight conifers around the eighth and ninth holes.

"It's always been an interest to upgrade the plant life around the course," manager Tom Heid said.

Workers are putting the finishing touches on a new, $90,000 single-row automated irrigation system. Expected to be ready by May 1, the system will be armed with over 120 sprinkler heads with a coverage radius of 80 feet. Heid said the system will cut down the time it takes to water the course as well as enhance conditions by keeping the course watered more consistently during the dry summer months.

In the spirit of giving the golfer more playing options, Dunmaglas has also added a fifth tee box on four of its holes; the second, sixth, 14th and 17th. All are par fours except for the sixth, which is a par five.

Gohlman also said they're in the process of adding cart paths. Now, the course only has paths around the tee boxes and greens, but it is hoped they all could be connected along the sides of the fairways for easier cart driving.

While no changes were made to the course to make it more difficult, it appeared more difficult in the eyes of golf experts from the G.A.M., who gave the course a new rating last October.

Previously rated 126, the course now has rating of 135. To compare locally, Crooked Tree, outside of Petoskey, and Dunmaglas have ratings in the 140s.

Wilson said the harder rating will bring in more business and is a truer representation of the course.

"The prevailing winds from the lake on the final four holes were taken in account," he said, noting that when the Bay Harbor courses are ultimately rated, those same winds will make it a tougher course.

All of this precedes an exciting summer at the Charlevoix Country Club, which will host this year's Michigan P.G.A. Pro-Assistant Challenge Friday, June 27 and Saturday, June 28. The 36-hole competition will be played over two courses, the country club and Crooked Tree.

Those who have played at Dunmaglas might have nightmarish tales to tell of their play on the fourth hole. The hole is punctuated by a dime-sized green guarded by a steep upward hill in the back, with woods to the right and three bunkers in the front.

Gohlman said a concerted effort was made in the off-season to make the green more friendly. The year before they had expanded the green and, going into this year, they flattened the hill behind the green a little and cleared out some of the woods to offer more flexibility to the approach shots.

"There was no place to bail out," Gohlman said. "Now, you don't have to hit a perfect shot in order to make par and do some good things."

In the spirit of giving the golfer more playing options, Dunmaglas has also added a fifth tee box on four of its holes; the second, sixth, 14th and 17th. All are par fours except for the sixth, which is a par five.

Gohlman also said they're in the process of adding cart paths. Now, the course only has paths around the tee boxes and greens, but it is hoped they all could be connected along the sides of the fairways for easier cart driving.

Left: It looked warmer than it was last weekend, when summer resident Carol Apol played a round of golf on the city municipal course last weekend with her husband, Jack, who is pictured on the front page. Above: The city is busy installing an irrigation system on the municipal course. While under construction, the course looks like a scene from Caddy Shack, with snakes instead of gophers poking out of the ground. (Photos by Laurie Lounsbury)

At the Belvedere golf course, the only noticeable change will be the rebuilt tee box at the 10th hole. Course manager Rick Grunch said the 14- by 28-square-foot tee area will be expanded and possibly tiered into different levels. Grunch said all the tee boxes will be rebuilt starting this fall for next season.

School board considers change to single bus run

By Jamie MacMillan

A longer school day could force Charlevoix schools to consolidate its tradition of two bus runs into one run by the 1999-2000 school year.

Beginning in the fall of 1999, school days will increase 17 minutes at the high school, while at both the middle and elementary school the day will increase 14 minutes.

Both are part of state mandates requiring a longer school day, which began this year.

According to superintendent Roberta Jackson, seven minutes of time was added at the middle school and nine minutes were added to the elementary school.

The major increase for the 1999-2000 school year, though, will prove an administrative challenge to implement, and the easiest way out of it may be a reduction in the bus runs.

Jackson said implementing the extra minutes is a "big concern," and an administrative committee has suggested to the board of education to consider scaling down to one bus run.

To maintain two bus runs with the increased classroom time could lead to some awkward starting and dismissal times for the schools, according to Jackson. She guessed the high school and middle school would have to begin classes at 7:30 a.m., while the elementary school might not dismiss until 4 p.m.

"We just don't think that's feasible," she said.

An alternative to going to one bus run would be to add one or two full school days to the calendar. In October 1996, the board voted not to include more days, but to add extra minutes to the school day.

Jackson said it would cheaper to go to one bus run rather than remain open for two more full-school days.

Currently, the district employs 13 to 15 full time bus drivers to drive the districts' 14 buses used to route students to and from school. The district does have three additional buses — the Rayder bus and two back-ups.

According to bus garage superintendent Gordon Russell, changing to one bus run would require three more drivers and three more buses. In addition, a major reworking of the current routes would need to be ironed out.

In the present system, 17 routes are designed within both runs. Ten routes handle the elementary school run while seven handle the middle and high school.

The number of drivers and buses needed are kept at a minimum because once a bus finishes its middle/high school route, it then handles an elementary school run, Russell said. Only one middle/high school bus does not do double time.

To run the school district's transportation program, it costs $408,320 a year. According to district treasurer Judy Boss, $160,000 is included within long term budget proposals for buying new buses in anticipation of changing to one bus run.

Seven years ago, the board faced similar pressure to move to one bus run. Then it was promoted as a way to save the district $50,000 a year. The board never even let the idea get to the voting process, as a sub-committee recommended not changing to one run based on parental opposition. They also determined that actual savings would be minimal, in some cases, costing more to change styles.

The board of education next meets 7 p.m. Monday, April 13 in the middle school library.

Natural area grows in size with new land purchase

In a spectacular week of land protection, the Grand Traverse Regional Land Conservancy obtained options to buy an additional 31 acres and over 700 feet of frontage in the St. Clair Lake-Six Mile Lake Natural Area in South Arm Township.

"This really is an extraordinary opportunity," said Jo Anne Beemon, chair of the natural area committee. "With these purchases we will have protected over one-and-one-quarter miles of river front, the entire east side of the river corridor of the natural area."

The first unnamed new preserve lies between the F. Bruce Malpass Preserve and the South Arm Preserve. The South Arm viewing platform looks up over the wide river marsh meadow. In the spring, the chorus of frogs sweeps back and forth over the water and ducks and geese nest in the tall grasses. In summer, the river's edge is blanketed in wild roses and the river garden is blanketed in yellow and white water lilies.

Lying between the Clinton and Mildred Davis Preserve and the Malpass Preserve, the second river acquisition is a 100-foot stretch of shore with the only dock on the entire river. Plans are to improve the dock to make it a place where natural area enthusiasts can rest and enjoy the beauty of wild iris, the great blue heron and the lush underwater garden of the pristine river.

Natural area committee members are confident that lead donors will come forward to kick off a community support challenge.

The St. Clair Lake-Six Mile Lake Natural Area protects over 193 acres in six contiguous river-front land preserves between St. Clair Lake and Six Mile Lake.

The area shaded with diagonal lines represents the most recently acquired pieces of property that will become part of the St. Clair Lake-Six Mile Lake Natural Area. The natural area is joint project of Grand Traverse Regional and Little Traverse conservancies. When the purchases are completed, the new areas will be open to the public.

Candidates for 106th house seat continue to change

By Jamie MacMillan

The poker table that is the Republican primary race for the 106th State House of Representatives seat could get crowded during the next few weeks despite one of the leading candidates folding his hand.

Joseph Gammons, 23, may have been short on experience but was heavily connected as a top aide to state senator Walter North, unexpectedly dropped out of the race. Gammons cited family reasons as a factor in a press release, but has since been unavailable for comment.

Gammons' departure leaves William Filber of Alpena as the only official candidate for the Republican nomination.

A counselor at Northeast Michigan Community Mental Health, Filber said the time is ripe for him to enter politics.

"Because of term limits, I have never had such a great opportunity to become involved locally," he said.

While the 48-year-old has never held a public office, he has been involved in major fund raising activities for the hospital which required Lansing connections, he said.

A graduate of Michigan State University and Liberty University, Filber has been married for 25 years and has two teen-aged daughters in the public school system.

The safety of the school systems is a key issue for Filber, who suggested the creation of a civic training curriculum for elementary and middle school students to help teach basic principles of life and respect.

Other key issues for Filber are creating new jobs to stop the flock of northern Michigan high school graduates from migrating downstate, maintaining the environment in the face of growth, and resolving the bovine tuberculosis epidemic plaguing the eastern portion of the district.

Several cows have been discovered with the disease that is suspected to be transmitted through the deer population.

He noted that the temporary ban on deer feed piles is a step in the right direction, but we can't sit around and wait for more cattle to become infected, Filber said. He suggested extending the deer hunting season while paying out bounties for deer to help wipe out the problem.

Meanwhile, a trio of Cheboygan county residents are strongly considering joining Filber in the race for the Republican nomination.

Eric Jacobsen, an Indian River resident, said he hasn't made up his mind, but that he is more than ready to take the next step up the political ladder.

Jacobsen has been the Tuscarora Township supervisor since 1974.

"There is so much legislation that comes out of Lansing affecting our local grass roots government, that I would like to be a part of it," he said.

Jacobsen settled in Indian River in 1953 after spending his first 10 years living in Melvin, a small community in the Thumb area. He and his wife run their own catering business and have three grown children.

Roads are a concern for Jacobsen, specifically making sure townships have enough cash to repair their own roads. He also said growth and its inherent problems such as creation of better infrastructure, land use, and zoning needs to be better addressed.

For Jeff Schwalm, an entrance into the election hinges on forming an election team. He said if he can line up a crew to help him, he'll enter the race.

The Wolverine resident is in his second term on the Wolverine School Board, and said his top issue would be giving local school boards more flexibility in how they spend money and make decisions.

He also said the preservation of farmland would be a priority.

"There is just so much development in the north that it concerns me," he said.

Schwalm retired from the Air Force in 1993 after 20 years of service and has settled full-time in the Wolverine area. He works for an environmental clean-up company in addition to running a small farm that grows hay, maple syrup and emus.

He is married and has three teen-aged children.

Betsy DeYoung, chamber of commerce director in Indian River, is also considering a run for the position. She could not be reached before press time.

Candidates must file for the Aug. 4 primary by May 12.

School buses shot by BB gunner

Male youths in black car suspected in prank

Four Charlevoix school buses were victimized by some sort of prank attack while shuttling students home Monday afternoon, April 6.

According to bus garage superintendent Gordon Russell, the buses were traveling down Bridge Street near the south hill when drivers reported hearing a popping sound.

The buses had just picked up a crew of high school students and were on the way to the middle school to pick up more students.

Russell said it was unclear whether the sounds came from a BB gun, air pistol or some sort of stones thrown at the vehicles.

Two of the bus drivers thought students at the back of the bus made the noise, a third thought someone from the sidewalk had thrown a rock, while the fourth bus, the first in line, said something came from a older looking, black car with a group of kids in it.

That first bus in line was the only to sustain any damage, Russell said, with a shattered spot on the front, driver-side windshield.

Charlevoix police chief Dennis Halverson confirmed that the buses were shot at by someone in a small black car. He said the shattered mark on the windshield suggested a BB gun shot.

According to Halverson, the car was occupied by three teen-aged males and was traveling southbound on Bridge Street when the incident took place. The incident took place at 2:30 p.m. at the intersection of Antrim and Bridge streets.

No one was injured during the prank and the buses continued their routes without delay.

Anyone with information is asked to call the City of Charlevoix Police Department at 547-3258.

School board race won't be fast-paced

By Jamie MacMillan

A year after sending seven candidates and three millage proposals to the voters, the upcoming June school board elections will have a decidedly less confrontational tone.

Of the three seats up for grabs on the seven-member board, only one will be contested.

In a rerun of one of last year's campaigns, Dwight "Ike" Boss and Michael MacMillan will square off to fill a two-year term on the board. The term represents the time remaining on the seat once occupied by Jerry Owens, who resigned from the board last June after just one year in office. Pete Spieles was appointed by the board to fill the position for one year.

Boss and MacMillan ran against each other to fill a one-year term left open after Sulane Hamilton's resignation last March. Boss topped MacMillan 875 to 641 to win the seat.

For the two four-year terms available, Ardeth Wieland and Dennis Halverson will be running unopposed.

Wieland is a two-decade veteran of the board, while Halverson will be a newcomer to the board. Last spring he was one of five candidates seeking two, four year terms, but the City of Charlevoix police chief finished third.

While no new millage requests will be on the ballot, voters will have to approve a renewal of a five year, 18 mill request.

The current five year, 18 mill tax expires in 1999. It brings in an estimated $4.5 million a year to Charlevoix Public Schools, nearly half of the district's operating funds.

Election day is Monday, June 1.

Planners nix landfill expansion

By Jamie MacMillan

A stream and some nifty zoning maneuvers made all the difference in Waste Management's request to expand its Cedar Ridge landfill.

Charlevoix County Planners denied the request, contending the expansion area would encroach too close to an existing body of water. It would also violate township zoning.

The motion to deny the request passed with Sandra Stanley, Tom Wieland, Peggy Midener and Larry Levensgood supporting, while Jamie Hass, Dennis Jason and Curt Petrak dissented.

The motion finally passed after two earlier motions to deny the request died for lack of support and a third motion to approve the request was turned down in a 4-3 decision with voting lines replicating the above.

Waste Management had asked for a 12-acre expansion to the southwest of its current 40 acre facility in Eveline Township.

Planners reviewed the request against the siting criteria in the county's solid waste plan. The siting criteria is a series of zoning-like requirements that need to be adhered to when planning the site for a new landfill or attempting to expand a current facility.

For example, landfills must be a minimum of 2,000 feet away from lakes and permanent flowing bodies of water, 1,500 feet from any home, 150 feet away from adjacent property lines and 10,000 feet from any licensed airport runway.

At the forefront of discussion was the setback from any body of water. Within that requirement is a clause which places a setback of 500 feet from any water containment area or intermittent flowing bodies of water.

Questions arose over a stream which is located 520 feet to the south of the proposed expansion.

"So they're 20 feet in the good," Midener said.

"It all depends on your interpretation," Levensgood answered.

According to the Michigan Resource Inventory System (MIRIS), which mapped the county in 1989, this body of water is labeled a permanent stream. Using the MIRIS classification as a guide, a majority of planners deemed the proposed expansion in violation of the 2,000 foot setback from any body of water.

"I don't see a problem as far as our decision goes," Midener said. "That's just too close and it's a danger."

The stream in question might be flowing steadily today, but in the dog days of summer it dries up. Hass noted that Waste Management may have been "blind-sided" by the decision, having been unaware of the MIRIS classification.

"It is what I would call an intermittent stream," Bill McDonough, a Waste Management representative, said. "I would challenge anyone to tell me it's a permanent flowing stream. The only

Prosecutor charges fireworks operator

After months of anxious waiting, Charlevoix County prosecutor Mary Beth Kur determined what criminal charges would be brought after the Venetian fireworks explosion last summer. The explosion killed Charlevoix resident Mark Yager. Tad Dohrowski, also a Charlevoix resident, lost his arm and leg in the explosion. Fourteen others were also injured in the July 26, 1997 blast.

Kur issued a 24-count warrant against Richard Clinton Davis Monday, April 13. None of the charges address the actual fireworks explosion. Kur said no more criminal charges will be brought against anyone involved with the fireworks explosion.

"These charges represent all of the criminal charges that will be issued concerning the fireworks tragedy that occurred in Charlevoix on July 26, 1997," Kur said in a prepared statement. "The extensive and detailed police report submitted to the prosecutor listed no definitive cause for the explosion. Without a definitive cause, there can be no criminal responsibility for injury or death."

The charges allege multiple violations of the Michigan Motor Carrier Safety Act. The act governs the transportation of hazardous materials on state highways.

Some of the violations charged against Davis include: failure to display a placard on the trailers that carried the fireworks from Central Lake to Charlevoix, failing to possess the proper shipping papers for the hazardous material being transported, failing to have the proper braking systems in place on the trailers at the time of transport and improper registration and lighting on the trailers. All of the charges are misdemeanors, some of which have a penalty of up to 90 days in jail. Some carry fines of up to $500.

Everyone's a winner in weight loss battle

By Laurie Lounsbury
The scales said that the county employees won the weight loss contest between the city and the county.

But since the money each employee paid to enter the contest goes to a good cause, everyone's a winner.

This year was the second winter season that the county and city employees have made dieting a little more palatable by having a contest to see who can lose the most weight in three months.

Unlike last year, the two teams didn't get quite so ruthlessly competitive. They didn't taunt each other, sending sweets and doughnuts back and forth between city hall and the county building. They played it fair, and in the end, it was the county that won.

"We spanked 'em," said county employee Tom Meggison, who organized this year's contest.

In all, nine city employees lost a total of nearly 25 pounds, while 19 county employees lost a total of 75 pounds.

The city employees knew they were whipped on the morning of April 6, the day all dieting employees were to weigh in for the last time.

"They sent rolls over to us at 10 a.m., congratulating us," Meggison said. The contest started Jan. 5, and ended just before Easter, so everyone could enjoy holiday feasting.

Each contestant paid $10 to enter the contest, and the loser was to pay the winner.

When the city won by seven pounds last year, the county said the money should be given to a charity of the city's choice. City employees promptly gave the money to the Charlevoix County Humane Society's new building project - a county project.

Returning the good deed, county employees this year donated their winnings to a new thermal imaging camera fund for the City of Charlevoix Fire Department.

Meggison is looking for an exciting rubber match next year.

He would like to see the contest changed a bit so city and county team captains can draft dieters from the private sector, which should balance out the teams.

County employee Tom Meggison (left) wears a victory grin while Candy Smith, weigh-in official, (center) hands a check to city fire chief Doug Carver. The check will be used to help the fire department purchase a Thermal Imaging Camera.

Waste Management still has options to get expansion

time water flows is when it rains, and it has to be a pretty hard rain."

Planners also had concerns that the expansion would violate the zoning requirements in Eveline Township. The current landfill is sited in a commercial district with a special use permit for a landfill.

Landfills are allowed in all agricultural districts through a state mandate, but township officials rezoned property around the landfill from agricultural to FF, forest/farm-land, in an effort to remove all agricultural districts from the township.

"The very intent of spot-zoning the commercial land in that district was to keep the landfill within 40 acres," Prudence Kurtz, an Eveline Township Planner, said.

Arguments arose as to whether or not removing all agricultural districts from the township was an attempt to make it impossible to find a proper site for a landfill.

"Lacking anything labeled as an agricultural district, I think the state will say that forest/farm-land is agricultural," Hass said.

Levensgood said the township already has a 40-acre area that a landfill can be sited on, and it's not its responsibility to ensure that more land elsewhere within its boundaries could hold a landfill.

"We wouldn't be here if the 40 acres was not full," McDonough said. "Once it's filled up, it's closed."

"That's not Eveline Township's problem," Levensgood said.

Audience members suggested that Waste Management painted itself into a corner with its space crunch by accepting waste from counties not included in the Charlevoix County trade agreement.

According to Waste Management's own figures, 15 percent of the company's yearly volume comes from counties not included in the trade agreement. Despite the denial, Waste Management still has options to get an expansion.

The company could appear before township officials asking to rezone the surrounding property to either commercial or agricultural. They could also ask MIRIS to redefine the stream, as well as pursue legal action to reverse the decision.

An expansion to the facility could also result by rewriting the county's solid waste plan. Currently, a 14-member solid waste committee is meeting to revise the plan, a task expected to take one year.

Uplifted by a Circle of Care

By Laurie Lounsbury

It started with a group of choir singers, joking and laughing over pizza after choir practice. Maggie Murray, both a choir member at Community Reformed Church and half of the performing duo, Magic with Maggie and Murray, shared one of her secret dreams with the ladies.

"I've always wanted to do a production of an old-time radio show," Maggie confessed. She had a vision of acting out a Prairie Home Companion-type of radio show for a live audience.

Great idea, the other women said.

But Maggie insisted they needed a reason, a cause, to put on the show.

"If you've got the idea for a show, we've got ideas for the reason," the women told Maggie.

Through that conversation over pizza, the Circle of Care was formed. The concept of the circle is to help a community member with financial needs that aren't covered by regular insurance.

"For love of pizza and a friend, we formed the circle," Maggie said.

This year's recipient of funds raised by the Circle of Care is Petoskey's Linda Price, a member of the Community Reformed Church. Price was diagnosed with hardening of the arteries in 1994. The condition blocked blood flow to her lower leg and foot.

Doctors tried to fix the condition by grafting veins from other places in Price's body into her lower leg. When that failed, her foot and lower leg were amputated. Even after the amputation, Price was having difficulty, since her wound wasn't healing properly.

Gathered around their friend, Linda Price, (front row, second from left) who will be the first recipient of the Circle of Care benefit are (from left) Maggie Murray, Sally Bales, Terry Dohm, Theda Williams, Lori Henderson, Cindy Mansen and Carol Martin. Missing from photo are Kathy Martinchek and Jan Boss. (Photo by Laurie Lounsbury)

Price found hope from a hair stylist who coincidentally happened to know of a new type of treatment for her condition. A device, called a rigid topical hyperbolic chamber, can force pressurized oxygen into the wound, which helps the healing process.

According to Price, the device is already working. The problem now, is that insurance won't pay for the costly equipment.

When friends learned of Price's dilemma, a cause was born. The choir members combined their desire to help a friend in need with Maggie's idea for a theatrical production of a radio show. The radio show will be performed at the Community Reformed Church at 7:30 p.m. Friday, April 24.

With a boisterously funny cast and plenty of local musical talent, the show, called "Northern Lights on WCRC," promises to be as entertaining as the Circle of Care has been beneficial.

"This is our way of thanking the local churches and merchants for their support," Maggie said.

"I'm so thrilled Ray is doing it, because he's so quick-witted, if anything goes wrong, he can improvise," Maggie said.

Local musicians will also be featured in the show.

Edith goes on-line for wedding etiquette

EDITH

EDITH GILBERT

Mike Connors, publisher of the Northern Michigan Wedding Guide, invited me this January to answer wedding etiquette questions on his web site, www.weddingdetails.com, a national wedding guide on the Internet. His offices are in Traverse City. Most of my readers already know that I am the proud author of The Complete Wedding Planner, which is now considered a classic by Warner Books; still, I was very flattered by his invitation.

It's astonishing to learn that he has received 75,000 "hits" last week from all over the world! Several hundred of these etiquette questions are directed to me, "ASK EDITH," and so far inquiries have come from Australia, Sweden and Canada as well as the entire United States. It has been a joy to be able to give helpful advice to young couples, who are getting married for the first time, as well as to older couples, who have been married before and have either young toddlers or grown children's feelings to consider. When dealing with these blended families, new situations often arise that have not been covered in other traditional wedding books.

For instance, a variety of tricky questions come from couples who would like to have their young children participate in the wedding ceremony. A bride asks if her 12- and 14-year-old sons could give her away. A groom asks if his 13-year-old son can be his best man. A bride asks if her 5-year-old daughter can walk down the aisle with her. Another bride wants a 2-year-old to be

Working women ask if all their co-workers should be invited to the wedding. Couples, who are paying for their own wedding, ask if all their relatives need to be invited. Some want to know how to ask for cash instead of gifts. They wonder about seating arrangements for divorced parents, who don't speak to each other. They want to know how to word invitations, and when to cut the cake. They want advice on how to un-invite an attendant and how to introduce a second ex-stepmother. They especially want to know how not to have children at a formal sit-down dinner, without hurting any one's feelings. They want to know where to go on their honeymoon.

Each person requires a thoughtful

"yes, no, or maybe" answer. One needs to point to the value of tradition, and when or when not to make exceptions to the rule. So far, I've blessed my stars that I didn't need to contend with abusive responses to my advice. On the contrary, a few people have been pleased enough to send a "thank you," which makes me feel as proud as the mother of the bride.

Over the years, two people have been my helpful guides in decision-making. They are 19th century author, Ralph Waldo Emerson, who suggested simply that "manners are the happy way of doing things," and former President Lyndon Johnson, who told his daughter before her wedding, "Spend more imagination than money."

Letters to the editor

Reader agrees that dogs are family members

Dear Editor:

Thank you for your column "Dogs are family members, not yard ornaments." Everyday I pass a house with two dogs chained outside. They are on very short chains. I doubt they can even get much exercise. They are surrounded by debris so rather than "lawn ornaments" these dogs are part of a general "clutter."

Every time I pass these dogs I wonder why in the world these people have them. I have never seen anyone near them, let alone petting, walking, or caring for them. Witnessing these poor animals, I wonder how this can be legal? How can this kind of abuse and neglect be allowed?

I urge people to carefully consider the ramifications of pet ownership before they get one. Particularly dogs who are so loyal, trusting, and dependent upon solid attention and training. They truly are members of the family. They require a commitment of 12 years or more! In your column you mention the expense involved in owning dogs, you are so right! The costs of food and vet bills do add up. Dog ownership involves more than simply chaining them to a dog house.

We got one of our dogs from the Charlevoix Humane Society. Holly began her life chained in the yard. When she got pregnant her previous owners brought her and her puppies to the Humane Society. Holly is a lovely dog. She is a valued member of our household. I'm glad that she got off the chain and into a loving environment.

Thanks for speaking up for our four-legged friends!

Technical scholarships available

Seniors in any of Charlevoix County's high schools who plan to pursue technical or vocational training after graduation this spring may find some financial help available. A special scholarship fund established by the Charlevoix Chapter of the Michigan Association of Retired School Personnel (MARSP) will award a $500 scholarship to an area student attending an accredited trade, vocational education, or technical school.

Examples of qualified courses of study include dental hygiene, nurse aid, beautician, welding or construction trade, computer science, auto mechanics, and a number of other technical programs.

Candidates for the scholarship will be judged on their academic performance, school and community service, leadership qualities, commitment to their chosen course of study, and any work or extracurricular experience in their interest area. A committee of retired teachers and school personnel from the area will review applications and select this year's scholarship recipient.

Students who are interested in applying for the MARSP scholarship should contact their high school counselor or voc-ed teacher. Applications are available at all area high schools and are due by May 15.

Members of MARSP, who focus their efforts on improving educational opportunity and literacy in the area, began the scholarship fund last year. The fund is held by the Charlevoix County Community Foundation, which now manages 25 different scholarship funds to assist local students. The community foundation handles all administrative responsibility for the funds, while those who create the funds set eligibility criteria and participate in choosing scholarship winners.

The Charlevoix County Community was established in 1992 by a group of local citizens. The charitable organization manages a number of funds on behalf of area organizations, in addition to a general endowment and a special youth fund. In five years, assets at the foundation have grown to more than $5 million, while grants to assist nonprofit programs, schools, environmental efforts, health and social service initiatives, the arts and cultural programs last year totaled nearly $300,000.

More information about the community foundation or any of its funds is available by calling 536-2440, or writing the foundation at P.O. Box 718, East Jordan, Michigan 49727.

Petunia planting gets big boost from sorority

The Kappa Sigma chapter of the Beta Sigma Phi sorority gave Keep Charlevoix Beautiful (KCB) a financial boost for this year's petunia planting event with a donation of $1,000.

"KCB needs to raise $8,000 to $10,000 for the petunia planting and weeding, and another $3,000 for truck maintenance and insurance, and we need to raise that much money each year," said Joanne Curtis, KCB president. "It's wonderful that the sorority is helping us with this."

Throwing orderliness to the wind this year, the KCB board voted unanimously to plant the multi-colored petunias in no particular arrangement. In past years, the flowers were planted in a specific, repeating color order. This year, white petunias will boldly co-mingle with hot pink and lavender petunias.

The random mixture will make work much easier for volunteer planters, who will no longer need to squat along the roadside repeating their mantra, "Light pink, dark pink, white, lavender, blue..." in an effort to remember the planting order.

"Now we'll be the 'rainbow of petunias' town," Curtis said. Planting this year will occur Thursday, May 28, the week after Memorial Weekend.

The area's largest and most experienced orthopaedic practice is now coming to Charlevoix to better serve the orthopaedic needs of Charlevoix and Antrim Counties.

Flute player brings home state honors

Charlevoix High School sophomore Dena Sheldon took top honors at the state solo and ensemble competition, which took place March 28 at Ferris State University.

Dena scored 98 points out of a possible 100 points in the three-part competition. A flute player, Dena played a music selection of her choice, then competed in playing the scales and sight-reading.

Her performance earned her an invitation to audition for the state young artists competition, sponsored by the Michigan School Band and Orchestra Association. The event is by invitation only. Dena will audition May 8 at Western Michigan University.

Foundation taking grant requests

The Charlevoix County Community Foundation is ready again to put funds to work on behalf of area residents. During the next few weeks, the foundation and its youth advisory committee will review grant requests to support a number of worthy projects serving the county.

Those eligible to receive grants include nonprofit organizations, schools and local municipalities. In the past, proposals for a wide variety of programs have been chosen for funding — from health initiatives, educational endeavors, the arts, to environmental projects and human services. Youth grants give special priority to proposals that address key concerns of young people: Substance abuse prevention, land conservation, child abuse, juvenile crime and recreational programs.

"We're interested in helping programs that enrich and improve life for families and children throughout Charlevoix County," said Bill Lorne, president of the foundation. "Our community foundation's endowment has grown to the point where we can begin to have a significant impact on this area by channeling funds to those projects most in need of help."

The community foundation was established in 1992 by a group of local citizens who hoped to build a charitable reserve for Charlevoix County. Since then, foundation assets have grown to more than $5 million, thanks to generous contributions from individuals, families, and local organizations, as well as matching grants from the Frey and Kellogg foundations. Like other community foundations, the organization holds contributions in a permanent endowment and uses only part of the investment income to make grants. Thus, the endowment continues to grow and serve the area for many years to come. So far, the Charlevoix County Community Foundation has returned more than $680,000 in the form of grants and scholarships.

Those interested in applying for grants should submit their request by April 30, 1998. Application forms are available through the community foundation office. Foundation representatives are happy to answer questions and provide technical assistance to those preparing grant proposals. More information can be obtained by calling the foundation office, 536-2440, or writing P.O. Box 718, East Jordan, Michigan 49727.

Benefit dinner to help Jordan Valley

The Friends of the Jordan will be hosting their first annual Friends of the Jordan Dinner, Photo Exhibit and Auction. It will be from 5:30 to 9:30 p.m. Saturday, April 18 at the Charlevoix Country Club.

The event will feature keynote speaker Wil Cwikiel, Water Resources Program Director of Tip of the Mitt Watershed Council. He is nationally renowned for his work in preserving wetlands. Cwikiel is also director of the Great Lakes Aquatic Habitat Network, which works to protect Great Lakes shorelines, inland lakes, rivers, wetlands, and other aquatic habitats in the Great Lakes Basin. In the past several years, Cwikiel has authored and edited a number of wetlands-related publications, including Michigan Wetlands — Yours to Protect: A Citizen's Guide to Local Involvement in Wetland Protection: Living with Michigan's Wetlands: A Landowner's Guide, and Citizen Wetland Initiatives: Stories from the Great Lakes. He is also chief editor of the quarterly publication, Great Lakes Wetlands.

A few local nature and wildlife photographers will also attend, displaying and selling their works, with portions of the proceeds benefiting Friends of the Jordan. They include Jerry Aydlott, Rick Baetsen, and a couple of other local photographers who will show their works of the Jordan Valley, plus other nature and wildlife photos from around the region, state, and the country.

Finally, there will be both a silent and live auction. Many interesting and creative items have been donated from individuals and businesses throughout the region. The following is just a sample of what will be available that night: an air tour of the Jordan Valley, a specially carved hall tree, handmade rocking chairs, golf outings, massages, a bamboo fly rod, pottery, stained glass, ski passes, wildlife & nature paintings and photos, Jordan Valley birding tours, and much, much more!

Entertainment for the event will be provided by the Gaillard String Quartet, founded in 1995. Its members are Krista Knight, Prudence Kurtz, Margaret Beck and Marty Manthei. They combine a wealth of playing experience, having performed in professional symphony orchestras, ensembles, and as soloists. "Gaillard" in French means carefree and joyful.

Reservations can be made by calling the Friends office at 533-5063 or JoAnne Beemon at 547-4820. Tickets for the event, including a dinner of prime rib or autumn chicken, are $30/person or $55/couple. Those who do not wish to participate in the dinner may still attend the photo exhibit and auction for a $10 admission.

The mission of Friends of the Jordan is to conserve the natural resources and protect the environmental quality of the Jordan River and its watershed. The public is encouraged to support their efforts by attending this event.

BEACONS

OF BLESSINGS

By Rev. Bruce Hamilton

You know that I'm always looking for a good story that will preach. Well, my Mom supplied one this week from a book she is reading for a college class. It seems Mrs. Peabody was named teacher of the year in her school district. There was quite a celebration as they honored her with plenty of testimonials on the wonderful job she did with her students. But that afternoon when she got home, she found a bunch of kids writing some less than complimentary things about her in the wet cement that had just been poured in front of her house. You'll never guess what she did. She beat them up.

Such an event could not be kept secret and the next day the principal had her in his office. "Mrs. Peabody, how could you do this. We just got through honoring you for your marvelous classroom work and how well you take care of your students and then you go home and beat them up. What do you have to say?"

Mrs. Peabody replied, "I love them in the abstract but not in the concrete."

Oh, I know that was a groaner. But it's there to make you groan for a reason. Making judgments, whether they're about people, places or things, is one of the most complicated things any of us face in our daily lives. Trying to decide what is right and what is wrong about an issue or whether to turn one direction or another, or even evaluating a person has so much hinging on it.

Every day, all across the world, people are making judgments about Christ. They are weighing the facts as they see them and trying to decide how they feel. They are watching what you and I are doing to see how important faith in Christ is to us. Have you ever thought about what led you to make the judgment you did concerning the Lord? If we remember what helped us decide, it may make it easier for us to live in a fashion that will find them making the right judgment about Jesus.

If it's one thing that most of us do not question, it is the foundation on which our own homes are built. We assume that they are on strong and secure ground and that nothing will ever knock them down. Yet in a single moment last week, a powerful storm in Alabama near where we used to live did just that, took what most families would think of as their most dependable possession and blew it away.

In making judgments, consider the foundation your life is built on. If we take such care in seeing that our homes are as strong as we can make them, yet still find them vulnerable, it should tell us that even more diligence is needed in the choices we make as anchors for our spirits. One glimpse of the headlines should tell you how feeble much of what the world uses for an anchor really is. The violence, rising divorce rate, child abuse and more are not really the problems. They are the symptoms of deep hunger in every heart for something, anything. Everything we aspire to be has its foundation in the cross. Every fact we need to determine what is God's truth is anchored in the cross. You need to take your stand for Christ just as He has taken His stand for you.

Easter a time for both religious and pagan traditions

Charlevoix Courier Wednesday, April 15, 1998 - PAGE 9

While Christians celebrate Easter as the time of the death and rebirth of Christ, others celebrate the more fundamental aspects of spring, such as the rebirth of nature and the fertility of the land. The Easter bunny tradition symbolizes just such fertility, with its abundant amount of eggs left for children all over the country.

Above: The Charlevoix Ministerial Association organizes a walk through town on Good Friday, where anyone is welcome to join and help carry a large, wooden cross, just as Jesus did. This year, Rev. Phil Schairbaum had a "divine inspiration" when he came up with the idea to let the teenagers carry the heavy cross through town.

Top: People were lined up the entire length of East Park for the start of the Easter egg hunt last Saturday, while the sun shined brightly and temperatures soared to nearly 70 degrees.

Above: Kids ran frantically into the park to scoop up eggs during the egg hunt, which lasted no more than 30 seconds. (Photos by Laurie Lounsbury)

Cleaning companies merge Husband and wife join forces

Lakeview Maintenance, offering janitorial services in Charlevoix, is excited to announce the purchase of Sisters Janitorial Specialties, a residential cleaning company.

Owner Dwayne Farmer, a fourth generation Charlevoix resident with over 25 years' experience, established Lakeview Maintenance in 1985 with his wife, Laura, and they incorporated as L.V. Maintenance, Inc., in 1997. After incorporating, they acquired Sisters Janitorial Specialties.

Lakeview Maintenance provides quality services to area businesses with its fully trained staff of four, managed by Dwayne. Some of the varied services available include: office and industrial cleaning, maintenance services, spring and fall cleanings, annual cleanings and more. Lawn and grounds maintenance services are also available for homes and businesses.

Sisters Janitorial provides professional residential cleaning services with its fully trained staff of four, managed by Laura, along with team manager Karen Largent of Charlevoix. Services are available daily, weekly, biweekly, monthly or by arrangement, Monday through Friday, from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. Rental cleaning and preparation, spring and fall cleanings, as well as annual cleanings are available.

For either business, call Dwayne or Laura at 547-1763 for pricing or scheduling information.

Drug store closes

Owners will merge with their other business

John and Lani Ochs, owners of Charlevoix Commons Apothecary and Central Drug Store, announced that they will be closing the Apothecary and merging it with their downtown drug store. The merger will be effective Monday, May 4.

"Since the Buy-Low supermarket closed, there has been very little traffic at our end of the shopping center," Ochs said of their business in the Kmart shopping center. "We have a clientele that is great, and regret closing the Apothecary, but feel that by concentrating our efforts downtown, we can serve our customers better. We are very happy that Jeanne Eaton and Deb Banyai from the Apothecary will be joining Elaine Smith, my dad, Frank, Lani and me at Central Drug Store."

The prescription records of all patients from Charlevoix Commons Apothecary will be transferred to Central Drug Store. All the services now offered, such as in-town prescription delivery, after-hours emergency prescription service, fax service, computerized UPS shipping, money orders, and special orders will continue. All fragrances, cosmetics and gift items at the Apothecary will be on sale until May 2.

Fighting fire on land and sea

Because of the large number of pleasure boats in the area, the Charlevoix Fire Department recently sponsored a marine and boat fires training seminar. Firefighters from Alanson, Littlefield, Boyne City, Charlevoix Township, East Jordan, Harbor Springs, Petoskey, Resort, Bear Creek, and Springvale townships, and the City of Charlevoix attended. The training was conducted by Eugene Spinazola (left), a professor of engineering emeritus from Castine, Maine. The firefighters thank him for sharing his expertise in boatyard fires. With a rapidly growing marina industry, Spinazola's vast knowledge will help all area fire departments be prepared for the increasing possibility of marina and boat fires. He's shown here with shift commander Joe Schwartzfisher of the Charlevoix Fire Department.

SCRAPBOOK

Downtown block is steeped in "Green" history

From the Archives

By Geoffrey D. Reynolds

As you walk along Bridge Street this spring and enjoy the quaintness of your town, stop and take in the E. H. Green building and let the history of Charlevoix's old town center take you back to the city's growing years and the mark one man made on it.

Born in Reamstown, Penn. on Oct. 31, 1834, Edward Heistand Green was raised by Joseph and Susan (Sloat) Green. There he grew up and attended grade school until entering Pennsylvania Normal School.

After graduation, Green taught in a country school until entering the Union forces during the Civil War in April of 1861. Upon enlistment he became a member of Company A, 10th Pennsylvania Volunteers, later reenlisting in Company E, 107th Pennsylvania Volunteers. Green remained somewhat healthy until being injured, captured and released in August of 1862 at the second Battle of Bull Run. After lying for six days upon the field of battle, Green was eventually transported to Lincoln Hospital in near-by Washington, DC. He would later rejoin his company in January 1863 and there earn successive promotions to lieutenant and then captain. Green was again captured at the Battle of Spotsylvania. Then months and three Confederate prisoners later, Green emerged, physically lame, to receive a promotion to major by brevet and was mustered out in July of 1865. His military service ended there, except for his lifelong membership in the local chapter of the Grand Army of the Republic (G.A.R.).

After teaching public school for one year, Green entered the University of Michigan to earn a degree in law. While attending classes Green met and began courting Luena (Luna, Lana) A. Matthews, daughter of retired

Washtenaw County legislator, the Honorable Rufus Matthews. They were soon married at Ann Arbor in September of 1868. Shortly after, Edward earned his degree. Upon graduation, the newlyweds relocated to Charlevoix and remained there together for 18 years and raised five children.

After taking up residence in Charlevoix, Green became the area's first lawyer and defended the first case between Traverse City and the Straits of Mackinac. He wasted no time entering politics and in 1869 earned positions as prosecuting attorney and circuit court commissioner for the new county. Offices Green later held would include presidents of the Charlevoix Historical Society and Charlevoix Savings Bank, county treasurer, supervisor, deputy collector of customs and terms in the state legislature.

In addition to his budding law practice, Green was the first teacher in the new school at the corner of State and Antrim streets (1868-1869) and earned four dollars per week, partly in cash and partly in produce. He also served as the first editor of the fledgling Charlevoix Sentinel newspaper from 1869-1871.

While being credited with seeing to the removal of remaining tree stumps on Bridge Street, Green also contributed to the building of the downtown area. In 1875 he began erecting his house. Two years later he built the small building, 224 Bridge St., that would become his law and real estate office. Green would build another building in 1885, which became what is still known as the Green building. It contained A.T. Washburn's dry goods store and was located at 228 Bridge St. It adjoined the building housing the Bank of Charlevoix at that time. Modifications to the building occurred in 1901, with an addition to the rear of the building. Present day businesses occupying those buildings include Maison & Jardin and Murdick's Fudge. The current Appletree business building replaced Green's law and real estate office.

The year 1896 was marked with loss for E. H. Green due to the passing of Mrs. Green in April. Two years would pass before Green was betrothed a second time to another widow, Mrs. Geneva (Bancs) Giles. He would remain at her side until his death on May 23, 1910, at the age of 75.

To learn more about Charlevoix's pioneer men and women and the legacy they have left, visit the Charlevoix Historical Society's archival holdings at the Harsha House Museum at 103 State St., Charlevoix.

This picture was taken of the buildings along the corner of Bridge Street and Clinton Street in 1886. The residence of Major Green can be seen at the far left. Just south of his home was his law and real estate office, and adjacent to his office was the E.H. Green block, which housed the A. T. Washburne dry goods store. The Bank of Charlevoix, a private bank owned by Reynolds and Brown, occupied the corner building. This was the first bank in the county, located on the corner of Park Avenue and Bridge Street from 1882 until 1885, when it moved to the location seen here. ## Phone company switch benefits county

By Jamie MacMillan

Changing phone companies might not produce noticeable savings on an individual phone bill, but for Charlevoix County, a change in providers could land an extra $40,000 in the county vault.

The change focuses around phone services at the county jail, whose contract with AmNex to provide phone services expired at the end of March. AmNex had agreed to pay the county a 28 percent commission on all telephone calls.

Ameritech entered the picture, offering the county a 20 percent commission on all long distance calls as well as a $40,000 signing bonus for agreeing to go with Ameritech. The company also offered between 20 and 28 percent commission on all local calls.

Each jail cell is equipped with a phone that is activated between the hours of 8 a.m. and 10 p.m., county jail administrator Babette Meggison said. Outgoing calls are charged $3.00 per minute.

Meggison said prisoners have to make collect calls in order to use the phones. Prisoners are not allowed to possess any money during their incarceration because it promotes gambling, which could lead to fist fights, she said.

Meggison told the county commissioners that nothing was wrong with the services AmNex provides, but that the company's promise of 28 percent on commission was misleading.

Since AmNex doesn't pay commission on the total gross revenue, the county's actual take hovered around 18 percent, she said.

Meanwhile, Ameritech does pay commission based on total gross revenue and was the only provider offering such a lucrative signing bonus.

Commissioners were intrigued by the offer but avoided any action, as it remained unclear where revenue from commission pay would be directed.

"It's the law, anything you sell to the inmates goes back into an inmate trust fund," commissioner Vic Patrick said.

Meggison agreed, but noted that she has not received a firm answer as to what legal obligations come with the commission pay.

If money ends up in an inmate trust fund, it would be used for prisoner education and recreation. If not, it could go into the county's general funds.

According to Meggison, the commission pay brought in $10,000 last year and Ameritech has projected as much as a yearly take of $108,000 for the county, due to higher rate of pay and the planned 60-bed addition for the jail.

As for the signing bonus, the county can do what it wants with it. Meggison suggested making an investment in a video imaging camera. The device, which costs around $15,000, would make a "great investigative tool," Meggison said.

Not only would it replace the booking camera, but it would enable authorities to conduct suspect searches based on a variety of criteria entered into the system from age, height and body marks like tattoos.

Commissioners next meet at 7 p.m. Wednesday, April 22.

No fireworks this summer

By Laurie Lounsbury

With respect for the victims and families of last year's Venetian fireworks tragedy, the Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce decided they will not ask the city council for permission to have a fireworks display this year.

Instead, they will appear before the city council May 4, seeking approval for a laser light show.

"We're getting close to the one year point from the tragedy, and when it comes right down to it, the board of directors felt this was the thing to do — sort of like a moment of silence for the victims," said chamber president Jacqueline Merta. "Chamber board members voted to eliminate the fireworks as a sign of respect to the victims and families."

With the decision to pursue a laser light show now made, the chamber will next make a decision on what company to hire for the show. They've narrowed the field to three different companies that produce laser light shows.

"This is in the infancy stages," Merta said of the laser show plans.

Mayor Josh Barnes was pleased to learn of the chamber's decision.

"Chamber board members voted to eliminate the fireworks as a sign of respect to the victims and families."

— Jacqueline Merta, president of the Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce, on the decision to eliminate fireworks from this year's Venetian Festival.

"I have to be comfortable with whatever they decide, and I'm tickled with their decision because it will avoid a lot of conflict," Barnes said.

Knowing a laser light show was among the chamber's options, Barnes started researching laser show productions several months ago. Wherever his travels took him, he made a point to see laser light shows.

"The only really good laser shows I saw had permanent installations," Barnes said. "If this is going to be something we'll do regularly in the future, we may want to consider a permanent installation."

Barnes explained that the lasers have to be projected against something to refract the light beams.

Most common is a water curtain, created with water jets that project a wall of water into the air. The laser show is best viewed from a position directly in front of or in back of the water curtain.

"From the back, it's more muted, but quite beautiful," Barnes said, adding, "I'm looking forward to it. I think it's going to be fun."

While fireworks are definitely not in the plans for this year's Venetian Festival, they haven't been completely eliminated from future festival plans.

"The people at the Venetian Festival forum indicated that they wanted fireworks, and the chamber will continue to evaluate feasibility, safety and other issues relative to all activities of future Venetian Festivals, including possible fireworks displays," Merta said.

The chamber of commerce will appear before city council at their meeting scheduled for 7 p.m. Monday, May 4 to fully disclose their plans for the Venetian Festival and obtain necessary permits. At the meeting, they will also submit a proposal for the location of the carnival. Also included in their proposal will be the name of the laser show company they select and more details about the laser light show.

Fifty years behind the wheel

Bonnie Staffel celebrates 50 years at the potter's wheel

By Laurie Lounsbury

When Bonnie Staffel was a young girl, she grew up in a family that had a deep appreciation of the arts and culture. But her family's tastes leaned more toward music than art.

"I wasn't buying it," Staffel said, not mincing words over music.

So Staffel took herself to the Toledo Museum of Art every Saturday, where she gazed at the work of masters.

Following her own tastes, Staffel studied a wide variety of art forms at prestigious schools, including the Toledo Museum of Art School, the American Academy of Art in Chicago and Cranbrook Academy of Art. In 1948, she took her first pottery class.

"Pottery hit me like a ton of bricks," Staffel said.

From that point forward, Staffel was true to her calling — the clay and the wheel.

Bonnie Staffel sits with an array of art work that spans her 50 years as a potter. A special art show, called the Bonnie Staffel Retrospective, will be hosted at Bier Gallery July 3-14. (Photo by Laurie Lounsbury)

This year marks a half-century of pottery-making for Bonnie Staffel. Over the past 50 years, she's made thousands of different styles, shapes and colors of pottery. Her birds and flowers, worked into casserole dishes and mug designs, have become her signature items. Yet there's been much more to Staffel and her work.

The times — and the places, and the rules, and traditions — they are a changin'

Laurie Lounsbury

It's time, once again, to take a random look at a few of the things happening in town and rate them.

Yippee! My hat's off to the Charlevoix Community Pool group, because they've reversed their position on the need for chaperones.

Kids in middle school may now swim without a chaperone if they can demonstrate an ability to swim the length of the pool.

Elementary school children don't need to have a parent in the water with them if they can demonstrate an ability to swim the length of the pool. Little kids still need to have a parent in the water with them. Fair enough.

This is an appropriate rule, one I'm sure all parents will agree with.

I applaud the pool for reversing their position, because I know it's a hard thing to do. So often, groups or companies adopt an ill-conceived policy, then pride won't let them admit they made a mistake and switch the policy.

The new post office opened Monday, and it really is nice. In fact, it would be perfect if it was downtown. It's got all sorts of handy features, like an after-hours station where you can weigh your own packages, buy stamps through a vending machine and mail items without having to be waited on during the day. One obvious downside will be for people trying to turn left onto M-66 when they leave the post office. This will be nearly impossible during the summer. It was a challenge even at 8:30 a.m. on a slow Monday in April.

The Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce has achieved the delicate balance between showing respect for the victims of the fireworks explosion last year and consideration for the thousands of tourists who flock to Charlevoix every summer for the Venetian Festival. A laser light show is the ideal solution. Beyond the obvious point that it's a tasteful and thoughtful decision, it's also innovative and exciting. I don't know about the rest of you, but I've been watching fireworks displays over Round Lake for more years than I care to admit and I'm ready for a change. A laser show is not only safe, it's a stimulating new technology. Perhaps, out of a terrible tragedy, a wonderful new tradition has been born.

I recently spotted a vehicle sporting the following bumper stickers: "So many pedestrians... so little time," and "Yes, as a matter of fact, I do think I own the whole damn road." These stickers were then complimented with one on the same vehicle that said, "Mean people suck."

Anyone else see some irony here? I'm tired of tacky bumper stickers with loud, huge print bearing offensive messages. I'm not really big on passing new laws, but maybe the police could incorporate a new system like the current seat belt law. If they pull someone over for a traffic violation, and that person happens to have tacky bumper stickers, they could be ticketed for that as well. Of course, this means the cops will have to make judgment calls on what's tacky, but I can offer a few guidelines. If it contains the words suck, Slick Willie, or makes mention of biting a certain part of one's anatomy, it's tacky. If it makes an aggressively strong statement about pro-choice or pro-life, it's offensive. Political bumper stickers fuel road rage, which is not a good idea. If the sticker warns that the driver brakes for garage sales or rodents, that's OK. If it says "I ♥ fishing, skiing, golfing, sailing, etc., etc., it's a cliché and should be considered tacky. I don't care what you love. I don't know you. I only care that you don't run into me.

Speaking of bumper stickers, I have a great idea for a new one. I am stealing the idea from those big, semi-trucks that bear a sticker saying, "How's my driving? Please call 1-800-555-1212 to report any poor driving practices." I guess the owners of the trucking company put those stickers on all their trucks to keep their drivers in line. I'd like to see the Secretary of State issue a similar type of bumper sticker to all teenage drivers. After the question, "How's my driving?" the parents home phone number could be printed, so if their young teen is out drag-racing or giving a fellow driver the Bronx cheer, other people on the road could call the kid's parents.

I firmly believe teens would think twice about flipping the bird to an elderly driver if they knew it could result in a call to mom and dad.

It's great to live in a small town where people are honest and thoughtful. We had two incidents this week that sum up the best of small town life. One woman dropped her wallet, with cash and valuables, in the downtown area. Before she even knew it was missing, someone picked it up and returned it to the police station. From there, the police called the woman and she got her belongings back.

Another woman dropped her checkbook in the street downtown. Courier office manager Teri Wilson spotted it, and brought it into our office. Teri called the woman to tell her we had her checkbook. When she told us she didn't drive, but would pick it up as soon as she could arrange a ride to our office, we decided it would be much easier for everyone if we dropped it off at her home, which was only a couple of miles from the office. The woman was so grateful she was in tears when we delivered the checkbook.

It's wonderful to see people so touched by a random act of decency. The shame of it is that the act of civility is surprising instead of expected.

Letters to the editor

Citizen thanks kindness of honest person

Editor:
I wish to express my deepest appreciation and thanks to the lady who, on Friday morning, found my case containing a significant amount of cash and personal items in the downtown area and took it to the police department. Your kindness will never be forgotten.

The receptionist at the police department looked up my phone number and called my home to report that my case had been found. All this occurred before I had even discovered my loss.

It is a real privilege to live in a community of caring people who go out of their way to help others.

Egg hunt is for children, not parents

Editor:
I am writing regarding Charlevoix's Easter egg hunt on Saturday, April 11. I found the behavior of many of the parents appalling. While it was not announced, surely common sense dictates letting the children get the eggs.

The event was supposed to be for 2-10 year-olds, yet many children well under 2, even infants, were carried around while their parents scooped up eggs for babies who didn't have a clue about what was going on.

My husband is from Charlevoix and has family there, so we took our two sons, ages 3 & 5, and our nephew, age 2 for what we thought would be fun for them. My nephew got nothing because every time he reached for something it was grabbed away. By the time we realized what was happening (about 5 seconds) and ran to help him there was nothing left to help him with.

Our video shows parents with children old enough to easily pick up their own eggs, grabbing eggs for their kids. Parents should not have been allowed on that field, period. If you need a section for parents with young babies, add one, but for the sake of the children, let them do the "hunting." Parents being greedy for the sake of 10-cent toys and candy are certainly a poor example to all children.

Ski hill could use T-bars and more patrollers

Dear Editor:
I was skiing at Mt. McSaubra recently, and I have some ideas to make our hill safer for skiers and snowboarders.

The tow rope can be dangerous to those who don't know how to use it. I have seen kids fall off of the rope and get tangled up in it. It's hard to carry ski poles and hold on to the rope for some people. The rope also rips holes in the fingers of gloves and it is heavy for some children. I feel that T-bars would be a good solution. T-bars are easier to use and would be safer for everyone.

I have also seen only one ski patrol person on the hill while there were a lot of kids skiing. What would happen if a kid fell and hurt himself and nobody knew? There should be at least two ski patrol people during busy times. It must be hard to be the only ski patrol person when the hill is full of skiers and snowboarders.

I'm just giving suggestions to help make our ski hill safer and more fun for everyone. Thank you.

Sincerely,
Samantha Kupka

Child care programs need changes

Editor:
We are writing you and to our congressmen in regard to child care issues.

In order to obtain and maintain quality child care, we, as professionals, are asking for support in the following areas: funding and availability of training and education for child care providers, including scholarships and tax credits to assist with expenses involved; Expansion of programs to provide parents with referrals and quality child care available; Funding to provide latch key programs; Changes in licensing and regulations affecting all child care programs to involve visits to these programs once a year upon renewing their license. These procedures would ensure that children receive a head start, a healthy, fair, and safe start.

We need more support and networking behind all child care facilities/homes to assist with concerns/issues and provide alternatives to resolve them.

As dedicated professionals, we
